DRESS REGULATIONS.

CIRCULAR MEMORANDUM ADDRESSED TO THE ARMY IN INDIA.

General Number 188.

1. H.R.H. having, in concurrence with the Sec. of State for War, and the Sec. of State for India, decided on the following regs. respecting the uniform of officers of the Indian staff corps, they are now published for future guidance:—

2. Staff corps officers serving in depts. will wear the uniform of the dept. with the staff corps button and waistplate, in lieu of the dept. button and waistplate.

3. Staff corps officers serving in regts. will wear the regt. uniform without any alteration.

4. Staff corps officers unemployed may wear the uniform of the corps or dept. in which they last served.

5. Staff corps officers employed in situations for which no other uniform is appd. will, when it may be proper for them to appear as milly. officers, wear the unattached uniform, as laid down in the dress regs., with the following exceptions:—

Lace.—Staff pattern.

Button.—Staff corps pattern.

Sword Belt.—Gold lace, staff pattern.

Waistplate.—Staff corps pattern.

Scabbard.—Brass.

6. Staff Corps Button.—Gilt convex, frosted, with scalloped edge; cypher V.R. in a garter, surmounted by a Crown, the words Bengal, Madras, or Bombay staff corps in the garter.

7. Staff Corps Waistplate.—A round gilt clasp, with the cypher V.R. and a Crown on the centre-piece, and the words Bengal, Madras, or Bombay staff corps on the other circle.

By command,
JAMES YORKE SCARLETT, Adjt. gen.

CIRCULAR TO OFFICERS COMMANDING DIVISIONS, BRIGADES AND STATIONS.

Adjt. gen.'s Office, Head quarters, Simla,
July 8, 1863.

The C. in C. having observed that the dress regs. are frequently disregarded by officers of all ranks, H.E. is pleased to direct that the orders of the army on this head shall be more scrupulously attended to in future.

When officers appear in uniform they are to wear the full-dress or undress prescribed in H.M.'s regs., but they are on no account to appear in a mixture of both dresses, at present not an uncommon practice.

Officers serving in staff departments for which no dress is prescribed in the regulations, will, if they belong to the Staff Corps, wear the uniform of that corps, or if they do not belong to it, then the dress of their former regiment; but they are not permitted to wear the uniform prescribed for the General Staff of the army, as is now often the case.

The C. in C. will hold general and commanding officers responsible that the foregoing instructions are rigidly obeyed within the limits of their respective commands.

By order,
E. HAYTHORNE, Colonel, Adjutant-general.

VETERINARY SURGEONS.

No. 267.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 368 of Nov. 23, 1864, and the Royal Warrant therein referred to, are published for general information, and the Governments of Fort St. George and Bombay, and H.E. the C. in C. in India, are requested to give effect to the instructions conveyed in para. 4 of the letter, by forwarding to this department, for transmission to H.M.'s Government, Returns of the Veterinary Surgeons who may be desirous of entering H.M.'s general service on the conditions laid down:—

Military, No. 368.

India Office, London, Nov. 23, 1864.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—I have been in communication with the Secretary of State for War on the questions raised in the letters of April 15, Aug. 30, Sept. 19, May 5, May 31, and June 22, 1864, regarding the position of the veterinary surgeons of the Indian service who may declare for general service in H.M.'s army.

2. I stated that it appeared to me that such of these veterinary surgeons as might volunteer for general service would become an integral part of H.M.'s army, and hold the same position as the veterinary surgeons in that army; that they would be considered to have terminated all connection with their former service; and that they would be allowed to reckon their past service towards pay, promotion, and half-pay on retirement under the provisions of the Royal Warrant of July 1, 1859.

3. The Secretary of State for War has expressed his concurrence in these views.

4. This decision should now be communicated for the information of the veterinary surgeons of the local forces at the three Presidencies, and a return of the veterinary surgeons desirous, on such conditions, to enter H.M.'s general service, should be transmitted to me for communication to the Secretary of State for War.

5. The connection, with the respective military funds of such of the veterinary surgeons of the local forces as may volunteer for, and be accepted for H.M.'s general service, will depend upon the regulations of the funds of their respective Presidencies.—I have, &c., (Signed) C. Wood.

VICTORIA R.

Whereas it hath been represented to Us that it is expedient to raise the position and rank of the veterinary surgeons of Our army, and to increase the pay and half-pay of the officers of that service; Our will and pleasure is, that from and after the date of this Our Royal Warrant, the following rules shall be established for the admission, promotion, and retirement, and for the pay, half-pay, relative rank, and allowances of the veterinary surgeons of Our army, and that by these rules Our Commander-in-Chief shall be governed in recommending officers for admission, promotion, and retirement.

1. The grades of veterinary surgeons in Our army shall be three in number, viz.:—

1. Staff veterinary surgeon.

2. Veterinary surgeon of the first-class.

3. Veterinary surgeon.

2. No candidate shall be admitted into the veterinary department of the army until he shall have satisfactorily passed an examination before a board of military veterinary surgeons.

3. No veterinary surgeon shall be eligible for promotion until he shall have passed such examination as Our Principal Secretary of State for War may require, and shall have served on full pay with the commission of veterinary surgeon for five years.

4. A veterinary surgeon of the first-class must have served 15 years in the army with a commission on full pay before he will be eligible for promotion to the rank of staff veterinary surgeon.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR-OFFICE, April 21.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned midshipmen and seamen of the Royal Navy, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval, on account of the gallantry displayed by them during the operations in the Straits of Simonsaki, Japan, as recorded against their names, viz.:—

Mr. Duncan Gordon Boyes, midshipman of her Majesty's ship Euryalus, and Thomas Pride, captain of the afterguard of her Majesty's ship Euryalus; date of acts of bravery, Sept. 6, 1864. For the conspicuous gallantry which, according to the testimony of Captain Alexander, C.B., at that time flag captain to Vice-Admiral Sir Augustus Kuper, K.C.B., Mr. Boyes displayed on the occasion of the capture of the enemy's stockade. He carried a colour with the leading company, kept it in advance of all, in the face of the thickest fire, his colour-sergeants having fallen, one mortally, the other dangerously wounded, and he was only detained from proceeding yet further by the orders of his superior officer. The colour he carried was six times pierced by musket balls. Thomas Pride, captain of the afterguard, the survivor of the two colour-sergeants who supported Mr. Boyes in the gallant rush which he made in advance of the attack, is also recommended for the Victoria Cross for his conduct on this occasion.

William Seeley, ordinary seaman of her Majesty's ship Euryalus; date of act of bravery, Sept. 6, 1864.—For the intelligence and daring which, according to the testimony of Lieut. Edwards, commanding the third company, he exhibited in ascertaining the enemy's position, and for continuing to retain his position in front, during the advance, after he had been wounded in the arm.

DR. JOYNT has been appointed acting Surgeon to the European General Hospital at Bombay.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE STORY OF CAWNPORE.*

TOLD in simple, manly language, the story of the Cawnpore tragedy could not fail to move the sternest heart to the tenderest emotion. It has been reserved, however, for Mr. G. O. Trevelyan to achieve the almost impossible task of rendering the narrative of that fearful drama wearisome and uninteresting. And he has accomplished this difficult feat in two ways—by indulging in the affectation of sentiment, and by striving to be funny at the gravest and most serious points in his tale. He has taken for his model in style the very worst writers of the facetious school, and has shown himself an apt and worthy pupil. And when the jocose vein fails him, he has recourse to what the Americans would call "tall writing," and a sickly sentimentality. Had he been content to tell the story of Cawnpore within the limits of an article in the Edinburgh Review, he would probably have succeeded in commanding the attention of English readers to the end of time. But in imposing on himself the necessity of spinning out an octavo volume he at once deprived himself of every element of success. In preferring a large quantity of tinsel to a few grains of pure gold, and the commonest paste to a genuine diamond, Mr. Trevelyan has done his best to spoil one of the most touching themes of modern history, just as a buzzing bluebottle-fly taints the sweetest meat. He is not even accurate, where accuracy was most easy of attainment. The Raja of Sattara, he informs his readers in a footnote, was no other than Bajee Rao, the Peishwah, and so little does he appear to know of the active treachery that led to the final chastisement of Mehidpore, that he accuses the British Government of having been "urged by that painful necessity of taking what belongs to others, which is the inevitable result of all our dealings with Oriental Powers," when it dethroned Bajee Rao, confiscated his territories, and assigned him as a residence the native fortress of Bithoor.

* "Cawnpore." By G. O. Trevelyan. Macmillan and Co.

The truth was, as every reader of Mr. Kaye's excellent "Life of Sir John Malcolm" must be aware, the Peishwah had sinned beyond all human forbearance, and was dealt with only too leniently by the generous and gallant soldier who was the final instrument of his overthrow.

With regard to the multifarious causes that combined to produce the mutiny, Mr. Trevelyan is not less dogmatic than flip-pant. He lays it down as an incontrovertible fact that "the real motive of the mutiny was the ambition of the soldiery." "They looked forward," he says, "to the time when Soubahdars and Jemmadars should be Maharajahs and Nawabs; when the taxes should be collected by sepoy receivers-general, and paid into sepoy treasuries; when every private should have his zenana full of the loveliest daughters of Lahore and Rohilcund; when great landholders from Bundelcund and Orissa should come with cases of diamonds to beg a favourable decision from Mungul Pandey; when great merchants from Liverpool and Marseilles should come with bags of sovereigns to ask leave of Peer Bux to establish a factory at Mutlah or Chandernagore." To any one who has the slightest knowledge of the Bengal sepoy all this "fine writing" must appear the most childish and senseless nonsense; but, unfortunately, there are many weak-minded persons in this country who are quite capable of attaching importance to this pretentious verbiage. He even goes so far as to say that it was "when the first dull rumour of the coming crisis began to be hinted" that Jung Bahadoor "paid a visit to England on purpose to learn for himself what the state of the case really was." He might have said, with almost equal reason, that it was because he had dreamed of the grants-in-aid system that Rammohun Roy crossed the "black waters" of the Indian Ocean. He admits, however, that the greased cartridges had something to do with the outbreak, though he superciliously ignores the gradual accumulation of causes so clearly and powerfully exposed by the historian of "The Sepoy War." He tells us, indeed, that "in January the peasants of Bengal were repeating to each other a sentence apparently devoid of meaning, 'Subalhogahi'—'Everything is to become red';" and it may certainly be allowed that a native would find some difficulty in attaching any very definite significance to four words which, literally translated, run as follows:—"Everything red shall be is." Mr. Trevelyan has probably heard of Runjeet Singh's sad and prophetic exclamation, only that the one-eyed ruler of the Punjab happened to express himself in correct Oordoo.

There is also some reason to believe that in speaking of the Nana Sahib Mr. Trevelyan has made the common mistake, pointed out by Mr. Kaye, of confounding the Bithoor chieftain with Nana Nerain Rao, the eldest son of the ex-Peishwah's chief adviser and manager, the Soubahdar Ramchunder Punt. The latter mixed familiarly with English officers, and seemed to affect their society, while the former seldom moved beyond the limits of his own estate. Forgetting, too, that the Nana was only an adopted son, and, therefore, not necessarily nurtured in "the lap of luxury," he delivers himself of no small quantity of fustian in order to account for that miscreant's corpulence. As a fair specimen of Mr. Trevelyan's favourite style, we extract his description of the Nana's personal appearance:—

At the time of the mutiny the Nana was about thirty-six years of age. His complexion was sallow; his features strongly marked, and not unpleasing. Like all Maharrattas, both head and face were shaven clean. He was fat, with that unhealthy corpulence which marks the Eastern voluptuary. The circumstances under which a young Rajah comes to maturity leave him very scant chance of obtaining perfection, moral or physical. From his earliest years he is surrounded by flatterers and pandars. While still a child in the harem, it is the object of every one, beginning with his own mother, to obtain his ear by adulation, and by the free-masonry of corrupt discourse. During his boyhood he has no little peers on whom to exert his faculties for emulation and self-denial; and, when he has arrived at man's estate, he may look in vain for any object of honourable ambition amidst the dead level of national dependence. He never walks, save from his divan to his bath; never mounts one of the huge cream-coloured steeds, which on high feast-days amble behind his palanquin in melancholy cavalcade; never knows the sensation of honest fatigue and wholesome hunger. No whim ungratified; every propensity cherished and pampered; incapable of effort; incognisant of duty; he is vicious with deeper than Parisian immorality, and listless with more than Belgravian ennui. Long before the age at which a high-born Englishman makes his choice of Hercules between bulls and blue-books, the effete sensuality of a Hindoo noble is reduced to seek gratification in the illicit charms of Indian hemp and French brandy. What wonder that in middle life he is flabby and gross beyond hope and compass; too feeble for manly exercise, too self-indulgent to practise a self-denying regimen? It is to be presumed that a long course of lenti diet and hill-climbing in Nepaul has by this time reduced that superfluous bulk which may yet grace a Cawnpore gallows.

Without pausing to stigmatise the execrable taste conspicuous in the last sentence of this ridiculous passage, we give yet another extract touching the Nana's undying hatred to the English, which would bring down a round of applause from the gallery of a Shoreditch or Surrey Theatre:—

The Rajah played billiards admirably, while he was yet slim enough to bend over the table without inconvenience. He especially delighted in the game, because it afforded him an opportunity for mixing on familiar terms with the officers of the garrison. Nothing could exceed the cordiality which he constantly displayed in his intercourse with our countrymen. The persons in authority placed an implicit confidence in his friendliness and good faith, and the ensigns emphatically pronounced him a capital fellow. He had a nod or a kind word for every Sahib in the station; hunting-parties and jewellery for the men, and picnics and shawls for the ladies. If a subaltern's wife required change of air, the Rajah's carriage was at the service of the young couple, and the European apartments at Bithoor were put in order to receive them. If a civilian had overworked himself in court, he had but to speak the word, and the Rajah's elephants were sent on to the Oude jungles. But none the less did he never for an instant forget the grudge which he bore our nation. While his face was all smiles, in his heart of hearts he brooded over the judgment of the Company, and the wrong of his despised claim. From his hour of repulse to his hour of vengeance, his life was one long irony. Thenceforward his story would more fitly be told in the wild and mysterious rhythms of the old Greek drama than in sober English prose; for in truth that story finds no parallel, save in the ghastly tales which hang like a mist of blood round the accursed house of Pelops. The lads who, with his sapphires and rubies glistening on their fingers, sat laughing round his Thyeatean table, had one and all been doomed to die by a warrant that admitted of no appeal. He had sworn that the injustice should be expiated by the blood of women who had never heard his grievance named; of babies who had been born years after the question of that grievance had passed into oblivion.

After all, the fairest way for both the author and the public is to select a few characteristic and truly representative passages, and allow each reader to judge for himself:—

INTERIOR OF A SUBALTERN'S BUNGALOW.

The principal door leads at once into the sitting-room, a spacious, ill-kept, comfortless apartment; the most conspicuous article being a huge, oblong frame of wood and canvas suspended across the ceiling, and the prevailing impression an overwhelming sense of the presence of cobwebs. The furniture, which is scattered about in most unadorned disorder, is in the last stage of dilapidation. Every article in an Anglo-Indian household bears witness to the fact that Englishmen regard themselves but as sojourners in the locality where fate and the quartermaster-general may have placed them. A large rickety table in the centre of the room is strewn with three or four empty soda-water bottles, a half-emptied bottle of brandy, a corkscrew, glasses, playing-cards, chessmen, an Hindostanee dictionary, an inkstand, a revolver, a bundle of letters, a box of cigars, the supplement of Bell's Life, and a few odd volumes from the regimental book-club—of no very seductive quality, like enough, for the colonel's lady has kept the new novels, and the doctor, who is secretary to the club, has impounded the biographies, so that our ensign is fain to put up with "Aids to Faith," and the third volume of the "History of the Inductive Sciences." Then there are eight or ten chairs, a good half of which might well claim to be invalidated on the score of wounds and long service; a couch with broken springs; a Japanese cabinet bought as a bargain when the old major was sold up; and an easy cane chair of colossal dimensions, the arms of which are prolonged and flattened, so as to accommodate the occupant with a resting-place for his feet. In one corner stands a couple of hog-spears, supple, tough, and duly weighted with lead and barbed with steel of proof; a regulation sword; a buggy-whip; a hunting-crop; a double-barrelled rifle and a shotgun—weapons which the owner depreciates as archaic, expressing his intention of providing himself during his first visit to Europe, with "By Jove, a complete outfit from Purdey, two double-barrelled breech-loaders, and a breech-loading rifle." On nails driven into the plaster hang a list of the men in the company to which the young fellow is attached; a caricature of the paymaster; a framed photograph of the cricket eleven of the public school where he was educated; and, if he be of a humorous turn, the last wiggling, or letter of admonition and reproof, received from the colonel of his regiment.

INDIA AS A TRAINING SCHOOL.

Nothing contributed so much to check the spread of the rebellion of 1857 as the individual courage and pugnacity of our countrymen resident in the East. Civil and military alike, they were all skilled in the use of weapons, and cool in the presence of personal danger. Such a habit of body and mind they acquired both for policy and for pleasure. Every Anglo-Indian is well aware that he is one of an imperial race, holding its own in the midst of a subject population by dint of foresight and martial prowess. There were villages of evil reputation which on the day of assessment the collector preferred to visit on the back of the steadiest Arab in his stables, with a favourite hog-spear carelessly balanced beside his right stirrup. There were notorious bits of roads where the traveller felt more comfortable if he heard from time to time the lock of his revolver clanking against the soda-water bottles in the pocket of his palanquin. Never was there a better training-school for warfare than the Indian hunting-field. A man who has heard unmoved above his head the scream of a crippled elephant;—who behind his trusty Westley Richards has awaited, calm and collected, the last rush of a wounded tiger;—need not doubt what his behaviour may be in any possible emergency. He who, like more than one true sportsman, has hardly crawled away, bloody knife in hand, from the embrace of a dying bear,—who has kept at bay a forty-inch boar with the butt of his shivered lance;—will not be at a loss how to meet the charge of a mutinous trooper.

WITHIN THE INTRENCHMENTS.

By day and night the firing never ceased; the round shot crashed and spun through the windows, raked the earthwork, and skipped about the open ground in every corner of our position. The bullets cut the air, and pattered on the wall like hail. The great shells rolled hissing along the floors and down the trenches, and, bursting, spread around them a circle of wrack, and mutilation, and promiscuous destruction. In their blind and merciless career those iron messengers spared neither old nor young, nor combatants nor sufferers, but flew ever onwards, inflicting superfluous wounds and unavailing destruction. A single bomb killed and maimed seven married women, who were seated in the ditch; killed Jacobi, a watchmaker, namesake of the intrepid coachwright; killed too the cashiered officer whose drunken freak had done something to accelerate the outbreak. There were those who endured in one day a double or a treble bereavement; while in some families none remained to mourn. Colonel Williams died of apoplexy, and his wife, disfigured and tortured by a frightful hurt in the face, would fain have rejoined her husband. On the fifteenth of June Miss Mary Williams was stunned by a fall of the ceiling, and expired in the arms of a wounded sister, unconscious of her loving care. Two daughters survived—for a while. Mistress White was walking with a twin child at either shoulder, and her good man, a private of the Thirty-second, by her side. The same ball slew the father, broke both elbows of the mother, and severely injured one of the orphans. Captain Reynolds lost an arm and his life by a cannon-shot, and Mrs. Reynolds, whose wrist had been pierced by a musket-ball, sank under fever and sorrow. A half-caste tradesman and his daughter, crouching behind an empty barrel, too late and together discovered that their shelter was inadequate. A son of Sir Hugh was reclining on a sofa, faint with recent loss of blood; one sister at his feet, and another, with both his parents, busied about his wants in different parts of the room; when an uninvited and a fatal guest entered the doorway, and left the lad a headless corpse. No less than three subalterns attached to the same regiment as young Wheeler lost their heads within the redan. Lieutenant Jervis of the Engineers was walking to his battery through a shower of lead, with a gait of calm grandeur, as if he were pacing the Eden Garden beneath the eye-glasses of Calcutta beauty. In vain his comrades raised their wonted shout of "Run, Jervis! Run!" He never returned to headquarters. He never reached his post. A grape-shot passed through the body of Mr. Heberden, as he was handing some water to a lady. This gentleman, the most undaunted and unaffected of the brave and simple men of science employed upon the East Indian Railroad, lay on his face for a whole week without a murmur or a sigh, but not, we may well believe, without a tacit prayer for the relief which came at last. Mr. Hillersden, the magistrate of the station, was dashed in pieces by a twenty-four pound ball, while talking in the verandah to his wife, weak from an unseasonable confinement. A few days elapsed, and a shot, less cruel than some, displaced an avalanche of bricks which put an end to her short widowhood.

NANA IMPERATOR.

Seventy-five paces from the abode where our people were confined stood an hotel owned by a Mahomedan proprietor: an erection of considerable size, daubed with bright yellow paint. Allured, probably, by the gaudiness of colour, an attraction which no genuine native can resist, the Nana had selected this building as his head-quarters. A couple of guns were planted at the entrance of the compound, and a strong detachment of his retainers kept guard under the portico. Two spacious centre rooms were reserved for the Maharaja's public receptions. One of the wings was set apart for the duties of the kitchen and the altar: and, side by side with religion, cooking went merrily on through every hour of the twenty-four. In the other Dhondoo Funtch lived from day to day in a perpetual round of sensuality, amidst a choice coterie of priests, pandars, ministers, and minions. The reigning beauty of the fortnight was one Oula or Adala. She was the Thais on whose breast sunk the vanquished victor, oppressed with brandy and such love as animates a middle-aged Eastern debauchee. She is said to have counted by hundreds of thousands the rupees which were lavished on her by the affection and vanity of her Alexander: and could well afford to spare one of her suite to look after the prisoners for the fraction of time during which they were likely to need her services. Every night there was an entertainment of music, dancing, and pantomime. The hit of the evening was made by a buffoon who took off amidst shouts of laughter the stiff carriage of an English officer.

THE CHAMBER OF HORRORS.

There was a spectacle to be witnessed which might excuse much. Those who, straight from the contested field, wandered sobbing through the rooms of the ladies' house, saw what it were well could the outraged earth have straightway hidden. The inner apartment was ankle-deep in blood. The plaster was scored with sword-cuts: not high up, as where men have fought; but low down, and about the corners, as if a creature had crouched to avoid the blow. Strips of dresses, vainly tied round the handles of the doors, signified the contrivance to which feminine despair had resorted as a means of keeping out the murderers. Broken combs were there, and the frills of children's trousers, and torn cuffs and pinafores, and little round hats, and one or two shoes with burst latches, and one or two daguerreotype-cases with cracked glasses. An officer picked up a few curls, preserved in a bit of card-board, and marked "Ned's hair, with love:" but around were strewn locks, some near a yard in length, dis severed, not as a keepsake, by quite other scissors. All who on that day passed within the fatal doors agree positively to assert that no inscription of any sort or kind was visible on the walls. Before the month was out, the bad habit, common to low Englishmen, of scribbling where they ought not, here displaying itself in an odious form, had covered the principal buildings of Cawnpore with vulgar and disgusting forgeries, false in date, in taste, in spelling, and in fact.

There were found two slips of paper: one bearing in an unknown hand a brief but correct outline of our disasters. On the other a Miss Lindsay had kept an account of the killed and wounded in a single family. It runs thus, telling its own tale:—

"Entered the barracks May 21st.

"Aunt Lilly died June 17th.

"Uncle Willy died June 18th.

"George died June 27th.

"Alice died July 9th.

"Mamma died July 12th."

The writer, with her two surviving sisters, perished in the final massacre.

The library of the captives was small indeed: but such books as they had were to the purpose. The earliest comers discovered, among the vestiges of slaughter, a treatise, entitled, "Preparation for Death;" and a Bible, which must have travelled in Major Vibart's barge down to Nuzzulgur and back to Cawnpore, as may be gathered from the following record:—

"27th June. Went to the boats.

"29th. Taken out of boats.

"30th. Taken to Sevadah Kothi. Fatal day."

... That Bible was a present from the dead to the dead: for on the fly-leaf appeared this address:—"For darling Mamma, from her affectionate daughter, Isabella Blair:" the "Bella Blair" whose fate is mentioned in the letter from young Masters to his father. The list was closed by a Church Service, from which the cover had been stripped, and many pages at the end torn off. Unbound and incomplete, it had fulfilled its mission: for it opened of itself where, within a crumpled and crimson-sprinkled margin, might be read the concise and beautiful supplications of our Litany. It concluded, that mutilated copy, with the Forty-seventh Psalm, wherein David thanks the Almighty for a victory and a saving mercy.

"O, clap your hands together, all ye people: O, sing unto God with the voice of melody.

"He shall subdue the people under us: and the nations under our feet.

"God is gone up with a merry noise, and the Lord with the sound of a trumpet.

"God rejoiceth over the heathen: God sitteth on his holy seat.

"God, which is very high exalted, doth defend the earth, as it were with a shield."

Such were the printed lines which, from amidst the rent tresses, and shivered toys, and the scraps of muslin dyed in the most costly of all pigments, lay staring up to high Heaven in tacit but impressive irony.

The Hunting-grounds of the Old World.

First Series: Asia. By H. A. L., "The Old Shekarry." Longman and Co.

To attempt to criticise a work that has reached a third edition would be a work of supererogation. Public opinion has pronounced so unmistakably in favour of "The Old Shekarry's" spirited narrative of his moving adventures "by flood and field," that it only remains for us to direct the attention of our readers to the mere fact that a third edition is now issuing from the press, in which will be found much new and interesting matter. The present volume, bulky though it be, is entirely confined to the hunting-grounds of Asia; but the author promises shortly to produce a companion series devoted to exploratory expeditions on the eastern, western, and northern coasts of Africa. We further learn that it is his intention to traverse that continent from the Bights of Benin to Lake Victoria Nyanza, with a view to ascertain for himself whether that vast sheet of water be in truth the head reservoir of the Nile, or whether the source of the fabled river must be looked for still farther to the South. In prosecuting this perilous journey, our future traveller relies on the faithful companionship of picked men of the Hausas tribe, a warlike race of Mussulmans scattered in distinct groups throughout the tract of country that lies between the Kingdom of Dahomey and the Niger. Aided and protected by these brave, truthful, and hardy barbarians, "The Old Shekarry" looks forward with sanguine anticipations of success to his forthcoming solution of the great African problem.

Clarke, 7th Regiment Madras Light Cavalry; by Mr. TORRENS, from Major William C. Clarke and Captain A. E. Campbell, 2nd Regiment Madras Light Cavalry, and Lieut. H. E. Coningham, 45th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Mr. DENMAN, from Lieut.-Colonel D. Gaye, Bombay Artillery, Captain J. H. Reid, Bombay Artillery, Major W. E. McPherson, 24th Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, and Captain R. Battiscombe, Bombay Artillery, praying for redress of grievances caused by the violation of rights secured to them by Act of Parliament.

PEGU PRIZE-MONEY.

Sir C. WOOD wished to correct a statement he had made just before the holidays, in answer to a question by the hon. and gallant gentleman opposite (Mr. H. Cole), with reference to the rolls of Pegu prize-money. He had stated that the whole of the prize rolls had been sent to Chelsea Hospital, whereas only a portion of them had been sent.

Orders had been sent to India to have the remainder sent as soon as possible.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 25.

Petitions from officers of the Indian army complaining of the violation of rights guaranteed to them by Act of Parliament, and praying for redress, were presented by Lord G. LENNOX, Mr. MOOR, Mr. LIDDELL, Colonel SYKES, and Captain JERVIS.

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE BOOTY.

This is a cause of booty of war in respect of certain property taken as prize at Banda and Kirwee, and other places, during the rebellion in India. The matter has, under the provisions of 3rd and 4th Victoria, cap. 65, sec. 22, and of an Order in Council, been referred to the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty.

The Queen's Advocate and Mr. Ayrton, for the plaintiff, Lieutenant-General Sir G. Whitlock, K.C.B., and others acting under him claiming as the actual captors, now moved the Court to direct that the answer filed on behalf of the executors of Lord Clyde be amended, and that the suits unsupported by certain claimants who represented the personal and general staff of Lord Clyde be consolidated, and also that a sum of £8,000 be paid to the plaintiffs, on account of the costs, out of the funds now in the custody of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury on account of the Banda and Kirwee booty, incurred and to be incurred by them in the cause. The learned counsel contended that the answer objected to set forth not merely the claims of Lord Clyde, but of many others who had appeared separately in the cause, and that an appendix had been added of matter which had been already printed in the cause, and that with a view to limit the expenses, it was most desirable that such a proceeding, which might be imitated by the other defendants, should be discontinued. As to the consolidation of the suits, the defendants, whose claims it was proposed should be so treated, had substantially similar interests; and as to the application as to costs, it was at the present stage of the cause quite clear that the plaintiffs would be entitled to a sum equal to £8,000, and, therefore, no one could be prejudiced by the Court granting the application.

The motions were opposed by Mr. Deane, Q.C., Mr. Cotton, Mr. Needham, Mr. T. Hughes, Mr. Piffard, Mr. E. C. Clarkson, Mr. Pritchard, Mr. Lushington, and Mr. Bayford on behalf of their respective clients.

Dr. Lushington.—This is the first case of this nature which has been referred to the Court since the passing of the Act giving the jurisdiction, and the Court would therefore be glad if possible to prescribe some general course to be adopted. No precedent can be found in this Court, and none elsewhere, except the case of the Pindaree and Mahratta prize money, but the proceedings in that case were by petition to the Treasury, and would form but little guide in the present instance. No general rule can be laid down as to the conduct of the suit, except that each party must have an opportunity of stating his case fully and fairly, due regard being had to avoid unnecessary expense. The answer on behalf of Lord Clyde's representatives, though it states the claims of others, seems to me at the same time also to state matters which are material to Lord Clyde's case, and must therefore be admitted. The 63rd article must be expunged, as it alleges opinions of the Duke of Cambridge and others which, if those opinions had been considered by the Lords of the Treasury, would have decided the case, and it would therefore not have been referred to this Court. The appendix is clearly unnecessary, and must be taken off the file, the defendants being at liberty to add an additional article to their answer, and thereby to refer to the same facts already set forth in the cause. As to the application to consolidate the suits referred to, I am not satisfied that the interests of the claimants are identical, and unless I were fully convinced of this I should be doing injustice, and I therefore reject the application. I am then asked to order a sum of £8,000 to be paid out to the plaintiffs in respect of past and future costs, but the fund is not under my control, and upon whom and in what terms have I the power to make such an order?—His Lordship then referred to the Order in Council under which the suit had been referred, and proceeded:—I am not satisfied that I possess sufficient authority for the purpose; but if it should be intimated to me from the Lords of the Treasury that they would give effect to any suggestion of mine as to this matter, I would then take all the facts into consideration, and express such an opinion as I should think just, but I do not think I should be prepared to pronounce for the plaintiffs to the extent of their present application.

EXPLORATION OF INNER ARABIA.

The eleventh meeting of the present session of the Royal Geographical Society was held at Burlington House, on Monday evening; Sir R. I. Murchison, president, in the chair.

Previous to the reading of the papers announced for the evening, the President read portions of a despatch from Colonel Lewis Pelly, her Majesty's Resident, Persian Gulf (communicated by the Bombay Government to the society), on the subject of the Exploration of Inner Arabia. The writer had learnt from the "Proceedings" of the Royal Geographical Society, issued in April, 1864, that it was a desideratum to determine with scientific accuracy the positions of the Wahabite capital, and some other points of interest in the interior, and had determined, notwithstanding the accounts of the difficulties and dangers of such a journey, to lead at once a party of competent officers and men of science into the country. He was unwilling that it should be supposed insuperable difficulties existed in the way of penetrating any Asiatic territory adjacent to his jurisdiction, for it had been his habit to consider that an English officer could go anywhere when his duty required it. Accordingly, he announced to his Government that he was then on his march (February 14). His plan was to land at 'Kwait, and from that point to proceed to the capital, returning to the Persian Gulf by another route. The party consisted, besides himself, of Lieutenant Dawes (who carried with him all the necessary instruments), and Dr. Colvill, as botanist and mineralogist.

Sir Henry Rawlinson said the success of an expedition of this kind depended mainly on the qualifications of the officer who undertook it, and Colonel Pelly was well warranted in speaking with the confidence which appeared in this despatch. He had given proofs of his courage and tact by travelling on horseback in his uniform as a British officer through the whole of the Afghan country, from Teheran to Calcutta—one of the most adventurous journeys which had been performed in that region. We should have to wait some months before the results of the Arabian expedition could be known, but it was possible they might arrive before the conclusion of the present session of the society.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company.
On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and placed of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and natives the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured.
The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

AND

ROBERT GORDON LATHAM, M.A., M.D., F.R.S., &c.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAFFEL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many hands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interesting as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Naffel and M. Petere Le Lièvre. The result is not a merely handsome volume of the old 'Keepsake' style, made to sell and be looked at, but a book of rare merit and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit."—Athenæum, Nov. 15, 1862.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

UNFEBBING PRECISION.—When the health is breaking down from the continuance of some weakening discharge; when ulcers refuse to heal, and extending mischief is threatened, then is the time to try the potency of Holloway's healing Ointment and purifying Pills. No treatment for giving ease and safety leading to a cure can be compared with this. The Ointment cleans and cools the fondest and most angry sores, diminishes the inflammation, reduces the swelling, prevents the growth of proud flesh, and spares both pain and danger. Hundreds testify from their own personal experience to the unvarying success attending the use of Holloway's medicaments in cases of ulcerated legs, enlarged veins, scurvy skin, and swelled ankles.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incident to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

ING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR

TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when they had past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pain in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of our usual files of papers from Bombay to the 13th of April, and Calcutta to the 7th of that month.

Sir Charles Trevelyan's Budget, which has met with severe criticism in this country, has been received in India with more satisfaction than might have been expected from certain unpopular features which it presents. The new export duties, to be sure, drew a protest from Mr. Bullen, one of the non-official members of Council, and an amendment, negativing the proposition, from Mr. Beadon, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal; but the protest was as powerless as protests always are, and the amendment was lost by a majority of something like two-thirds. The opposition would, probably, have had stronger support had Mr. Bullen or Mr. Beadon been able to suggest an unobjectionable substitute for the obnoxious imposts. But this difficulty—which nobody would be more glad to overcome than Sir Charles Trevelyan himself—Mr. Bullen did not pretend to encounter; while Mr. Beadon did worse, for he justified as a substitute, an addition to the always unpopular salt tax, to which, indeed, the author of the Budget avows a strong inclination, though he has yielded to the other alternative. The salt tax in the several Presidencies is neither so low nor so high as it has been in former times, but it is now quite as heavy as the poorer classes can bear, and it presses, be it remembered, upon the poorest classes of all, who may be found in some places, notwithstanding the general advance of wages, living upon five shillings a-month. A tax which is so thoroughly searching in its incidence that nobody can escape from it is naturally tempting to Chancellor-of-the-Exchequer nature; and besides being certain, it is usually increasing, and brings wonderfully large sums from wonderfully small assessments. But though Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Beadon believe that a small addition to the tax in question would not be felt by the mass of the population, it is evident, as pointed out by Sir John Lawrence, that it would operate cruelly upon large numbers whom it would be impossible to exempt; while there can be no doubt of the political mischief of such a measure, the idea of which, as Mr. Anderson told the Council, had once raised a riot in Bombay, and could not fail to induce bad feeling and mistrust in any part of India. The principle of the export duties Sir Charles Trevelyan makes but small pretence of defending. What he did say in that direction was rather too much. For instance, he defended the duties on tea and coffee—which were particularly objected to—by asking "with what face, in the presence of God and man, could he exempt tea and coffee from what we are imposing upon large and less profitable native industries?" This, of course, introduces the "class interests" question into the discussion, aggravated, too, by the addition that "the income-tax, as was well-known, pressed heavier on the Europeans than the natives, and the former being relieved from the heavier burden, it would be gross partiality to let the English off—in fact, not to tax tea." The Englishman, which has, of course, fastened upon this point, declares that justifying the tax on tea upon the ground that it is a consequence of the energy and capital of Europeans being directed to a new channel, which is making the forests and wastes of centuries into gardens, in order that native trade, which has grown under the influence of the said energy and capital, should not be taxed alone, is one of the strangest and weakest pieces of reasoning ever employed by a statesman. The really intelligible argument in favour of the duties is their alleged necessity. Sir Charles Trevelyan avowed that he could see no better way of strengthening the small surplus which was to be anticipated without this aid; and Sir John Lawrence added the weight of his opinion to the same side. Neither speaker considered that the duties would be felt sufficiently to give any check to production, especially as, with regard to those articles in which India has the command of the European market, the extra cost would necessarily fall upon the consumer. Moreover, the country is making such extraordinary advances in industry and wealth, that they could see nothing to fear from these trifling burdens. Of this happy state of things Sir Charles had already drawn an impressive picture in his Budget statement:—

"India is prospering beyond all former precedent. The Ryot has become emancipated from the money-lender, and has something to spare for the indulgence of his tastes and the improvement of his cultivation. Wages are rising throughout India, while, at some of the ports, they have attained almost to European rates. Mercantile gains, especially in the West of India, have been as large as they are liberally spent in charitable, ornamental, and reproductive works. The great and decisive change has also begun to appear, that the natives, from the Parsee and Marwarree millionaires down to the Ryots and small traders, bring forward their savings for investments instead of hoarding them. India has entered upon a course of industrial activity, and there has been for some time a remarkable absence even of the disquieting rumours which used to fill up the intervals of actual hostilities.

To the principle of the new taxes we are no more reconciled than when we last discussed the subject; and the precedent is a dangerous one for embarrassed financiers in the future. As an expedient, however, they have their uses, and may be best accepted as a substitute for something worse. For the rest, it must be admitted that Sir Charles Trevelyan has made the financial path as plain and pleasant as may be. There is a trifling drawback in the way of a loan; but this, as he says, is not to be regarded as a resource of embarrassment, being, indeed, nothing more than a proper provision for a necessary object, adjusted upon an equitable principle. Sir Charles Trevelyan was to leave Calcutta on the 10th of April. Mr. Massey, his successor, had arrived by the previous mail, just in time to hear the financial statement. One of his earliest duties will be the perusal of a memorial addressed to the Viceroy against the export duties. The document was adopted at a large meeting of the mercantile community, held at the Chamber of Commerce, when the opposition, which had been only mildly manifested in Council, found full vent. It is said that the condemnation of the duties in question will be more strong in Bombay.

The news from Bhootan is brief but important. The particulars of the capture of Dewangiri were not many, for nothing more than a telegram had been received on the subject. The contest seems to have been a severe one, for the enemy fought hard, and every man in the stockade was either killed or taken prisoner. The attack seems to have been well managed, and is one of the first fruits of the confidence inspired by General Tombs's assumption of the command. Writers on the spot declare that the spirits of both officers and men rose immensely when the change was known; and all are now certain that whatever fighting there may be will be well done.

Sir Hugh Rose left Calcutta by the mail steamer, and is, perhaps, in London by this time, having been heard of at Trieste. We publish the Farewell Address to the ex-Commander-in-Chief elsewhere. There was besides a spontaneous demonstration on his departure. There had been some official arrangements for his reception at the place of embarkation; but everybody crowded to the wharf of their own accord. There was a guard of honour drawn up, and the compound of the Peninsula and Oriental Company was crammed with carriages, whose occupants were universal in their expressions of regard—the ladies, as might be expected, forming no small portion of the assemblage. Sir Hugh was formally received by Major-general Showers, commanding the division; and then there was a great deal of shaking of hands and wishing of farewells, and attempting to ignore emotion on the part of Sir Hugh himself, and his more intimate friends; and then, as the General descended the steps and stood upon the steamer, the band struck up the air of "Steer my barque to Erin's Isle," in happy allusion to his next command; and when the steamer moved off the tune was changed to "Auld Lang Syne," and the assembly gave three great cheers for the departing warrior.

The news from Bombay is principally confined to official changes, and "Scenes in Court," where Mr. Anstey and one or two other members of the bar seem rather too fond of being conspicuous. Mr. Anstey, in particular is so continually engaged in controversy, that even when he is in the right people are slow to credit the fact. One of his latest embroilments has been with the Bench, and had reference to his assertion of the rights of a barrister to address any court in the country in the English language. The question has probably been referred home, where there can be little doubt of its being settled in Mr. Anstey's favours.

The death of Colonel Elliot, Governor General's Agent in Rajpootana, was announced a few days before the departure of the mail. The deceased officer had done good service in the Political Department for many years, and his last appointment—which he did not seek—was a significant refutation of certain attacks upon his official character made by the press. Colonel Elliot was a worthy successor to Sir Henry Lawrence and Sir James Outram, and was both publicly and privately esteemed. He is to be succeeded in the Agency, it is said, by Colonel Eden, who has been a "Political" in Rajpootana for many years past.

The Bombay papers contain some curious stories from Mhow. One is in reference to a court-martial, with Colonel Crawley for president, which is about to sit upon a "row" between two officers of the 15th N.I. Another refers to an alleged attack made by the colonel of a native regiment at that station (number not stated) upon a sepoy. The colonel is said to have wounded the sepoy so seriously with a sword that he had to be taken to the hospital. Where the colonel had to be taken to does not appear.

Sir Hugh Rose has come home by way of Bombay, where he stayed with the Governor, and held a levee before his departure. On receiving news of that event by telegraph, Sir William Mansfield at once assumed the command in chief.

The Asiatic Banking Corporation has, we see, issued its first report. That the document is of a satisfactory character will not be doubted when we record that the directors declare a dividend of 15 per cent. per annum, besides a bonus of 10s. per share, equal to 5 per cent. per annum, in addition to paying off expenses and making most satisfactory arrangements in the way of reserves.

BENGAL.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

Sir Charles Trevelyan delivered his financial statement on the 1st April. The statement is remarkably meagre. Its most noticeable features are the abolition of the income-tax, the imposition of a light duty on jute, wool, tea and coffee, hides, sugar, silk, rice, and other grains, the reduction of the duty on hops to one per cent., and the suggestion that if additional revenue should hereafter be required it should be raised by a salt tax.

Referring, in his opening sentences, to the income and expenditure of the State for 1863-64, Sir Charles tells us, the estimated surplus of £480,775 dwindled down to £31,529 in the regular estimate, but actually reached a sum two and a-half times this amount, £78,347. The actual fell short of the estimated income by £358,868, whilst the expenditure increased by £41,260. The falling off in opium was enormous, amounting to £1,168,000; salt, too, showed a deficit of £366,704, making a total falling off of £1,534,705, to set off against which there was an increase in the Land Revenue, Stamps, Abkaree, Customs, &c., of £1,303,435. During the past year Land Revenue has slightly retrograded. It is less than the estimate by £170,200, and if compared with 1863-64, it shows a decrease of £208,623. This is owing to the effects of the severe storms of last year, and to the deficiency in the fall of rain in the north-west.

The greatest falling off is in opium, which, on the confession of Sir Charles himself, has been badly managed. A season of exceptional scarceness has been followed by a season of exceptional productiveness, and after the payment to the ryots had been increased rapidly to Rs. 3-8-0, Rs. 4-0-0, and finally at one bound to Rs. 5-0-0 per seer, it is to be suddenly reduced to Rs. 4-8-0, and the crop reduced from 64,269 chests to 48,000 chests for the Behar and Benares agencies. For the current year the estimated quantity likely to be brought to sale in Calcutta is 59,513 chests, which it is hoped will reach an average price of Rs. 850 per chest, that is Rs. 150 less than the estimate for 1864-5, and Rs. 9 more than the average of the last three sales. The following table will give a general idea of the increase in the revenue, which exceeds the actual receipts of 1863-64 by £988,953, and the estimate by £806,116. We see, therefore, that generally the income has been added to by a million sterling, and that if we have a deficit it is not from any retrogression in the general prosperity of the empire.

INCOME.
	Increase	Estimate
	1863-64.	1864-65.
Forest ...	£51,687	£35,980
Abkaree ...	212,680	185,270
Salt ...	588,554	181,740
Stamps ...	176,924	167,870
Assessed taxes

DECREASE.
Customs ...	128,591	55,590
Opium ...	—	685,880

We have now to summarise the increase in expenditure:—

Customs ...	£15,597
Salt ...	30,943
Opium ...	453,679
Army ...	674,571
P. W. D. ...	327,087
Education ...	24,605
Pensions, &c. ...	165,966
Miscellaneous ...	88,031
Telegraph ...	39,022

As somewhat of a set-off to the above we note the following "savings":—

Post-office ...	£76,185
Mint ...	97,825
Salaries, Law, Police, &c. ...	74,766
Interest ...	83,229
Interest guaranteed, less railway receipts ...	214,500

The general result is, that the income is £120,236 better than the estimate, but owing to the enormous increase in expenditure of £1,287,667, there is a difference against the Budget of £1,167,431, of which £344,143 is an actual deficit. The totals for the year are :—

Expenditure	46,628,000

We have not, however, done with the Bhootan war, and we have yet to see the effect of the fall in cotton upon the land revenue and general wealth of the people, and we may, therefore, reasonably expect to see the deficit of £344,143 increased to at least half-a-million sterling.

We turn now to the Budget for 1865-66, and here we find that the income-tax will expire on 31st July, but will be held as the financial reserve, and placed on the shelf with all its gear complete ready for any emergency, should it unfortunately arise. Sir Charles does what he can to remove the sting of this assurance by recommending a two-anna duty on salt. The income-tax may, we think, be considered a failure, but we reserve comments upon this and some other points in the Budget, and confine ourselves on the present occasion to the general analysis of the financial statement.

The general results for the ensuing year may be shortly stated :—

Revenue	£47,688,760
Expenditure	47,186,930

Surplus £501,830

Of this total estimated expenditure £1,200,000 will be derived from the loan which it is proposed to raise for military and irrigation works. This will leave the actual income of the empire at £46,488,760, which is more than the estimate for last year by £324,190, and more than the anticipated receipts by £204,654.

In order to increase the surplus to as nearly as possible that estimated for last year, and to provide for any possible contingencies not requiring any very great effort at taxation to meet them, it has been resolved to extend to various articles a merely nominal duty. Jute, wool, tea and coffee will be charged with an export duty of

Three per cent., which will give	£130,000
Hides, sugar, and silk at two per cent. ...	60,000
Rice and grains at three annas per maund ...	140,000

Total £330,000

This will raise the total estimated surplus to £831,830. Bombay has, however, made a demand for £17,520 on account of law and justice, which will reduce the amount to £814,310, to which must be added the receipts of the Indo-European line of telegraph, estimated at £60,000, leaving a total estimated surplus of £874,310.—Hurkaru, April 6.

BHOOTAN.

The Supreme Government has, we hear, determined that a strict blockade of the Bhootan Frontier shall be maintained, but that the posts to be held during the approaching hot season and rains shall be as few as is compatible with the object in view, namely, to coerce and confine the Bhootas to the interior hills, as far as may be necessary. Orders, therefore, have been issued for immediate arrangements to be made between the military and civil authorities in the Bhootan field force, so as to fix on the posts which are thus to be held. These posts should not, in the opinion of the Viceroy, be entrenched camps, requiring a considerable strength of troops or police, and more, an extended line of works. Such a mode of occupying the posts would, his Excellency thinks, defeat their object, which is not to shut up or paralyse the detachments, but to leave the main body free for external action, whilst the sick, spare ammunition and stores, are left in security, under the protection of a small garrison of effective men. It would seem, therefore, that the posts must be as compact as is consistent with salubrity, and the garrison sufficiently strong to allow of the commanding officer moving out a portion of it. To attain this end, and where suitable buildings do not exist, hereafter, plain walls of suitable height, flanked by musketry towers, are to be constructed, to afford the cover and security necessary against an enemy like the Bhootas; and, as a temporary arrangement, it is essential that the post should be stockaded. It is, of course, requisite that each post should command a supply of water, and that good practical roads and paths should be made to all the posts, with intercommunication with other posts, if possible. It also seems most essential to the Governor General that cantonments for the troops in support should be fixed on at an early date, and the necessary accommodation commenced. These sites should be selected in view to the easy support of the frontier, and with due regard to salubrity.—Englishman, March 22.

We have letters from the Right Brigade of the Bhootan Field Force, dated Camp, Koomreekhatta, March 14th:—"Brigadier General Tombs had returned to Koomreekhatta, from his reconnaissance in the direction of Dewangiri; and was awaiting the arrival of H. M.'s 55th Regiment at Gowlhatty. Our letters contain some details of the affair of the 13th, under Captain Norman; from which it would appear that the Bhootas, on that occasion, at any rate, by no means behaved in a cowardly manner; but, on the contrary, showed excellent fighting qualities in their own way, and that too with the odds long against them. It would appear that there were only eighty Bhootas within the stockade, which was attacked by our force, a hundred and forty strong; and although only twenty-five of the Bhootas, as far as could be ascertained, had matchlocks, and our men went in with a rush, yet ten of the latter were knocked over. So far, then, from the Bhootas being contemptible cowards, we have found, by experience, that they are rather a formidable enemy, in their own way of fighting; and that the exceedingly strong and difficult country in which hostilities are being carried on is very favourable to that way. In the stockade captured on the 13th were found some very cunningly devised stone bullet-moulds, and bullets cast in them, nearly as round, smooth, and serviceable as our own. Nothing is said in our Correspondent's letters about the expected attack on Dewangiri; and Captain Trevor, of the Engineers, who had been out to examine the country and the passes, had returned to the camp at Koomreekhatta. The troops in camp are spoken of as being pretty healthy, but everything was very dull and monotonous, and movement or action would apparently be very acceptable to them.—Ibid, March 23.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

From Dewangiri, through Gowlparah, from Brigadier-general Tombs, to Calcutta, to Military Secretary to Government.

Dewangiri, 2nd April, 2 P.M.—The force under my command re-occupied Dewangiri today by half-past twelve. Not a Bhoota is left on the plateau; our loss not heavy. Lieut. Weldon, of the police, severely wounded, and three or four other officers slightly wounded; about thirty men killed and wounded. The enemy fought hard until the key of their position fell. Every man in the stockade was killed or taken prisoner. About one hundred and thirty killed, and thirty taken prisoners, amongst them two men of note.

From Lieut.-colonel H. Hopkinson, Agent, Governor-general and Commissioner of Assam, to the Hon. the Lieut.-governor of Bengal.

Dated Dewangiri, the 2nd April, 1865.—Dewangiri was attacked this morning. The affair was brilliantly managed, and was attended with thorough and complete success. The fight began at 8.30 A.M., and was over by 11.30 A.M., when the general was in possession of the works of the enemy. The enemy fought hard, and lost at least 120 killed. The number of wounded unknown, but we took twenty-nine prisoners. Our loss was trifling,—thirty killed and wounded. Officers wounded—Captains Trevor and Dundas; Ensign Chatterton, 29th Sikhs, slightly; Mr. Weldon, Superintendent of Police, severely.—Ibid, April 7.

A WEEKLY MAIL TO BOMBAY.—There is now little doubt says the Friend that India will soon have a weekly mail by Bombay. We learn from England that her Majesty's Postmaster-General has agreed to the request of the East India and China merchants in London, on the condition that the Marseilles postage be raised from tenpence to a shilling. Though most of the extra two-pence will go into the pockets of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's shareholders, the proposal is fair, and the boon is certainly cheap, since it gives fifty-two instead of forty-eight mails a year, as at present.

ATTACK ON A JUDGE.—We hear that Mr. Ainslie, the Sessions Judge of Patna, was attacked by a Wahabee on the 18th March, while returning from office, but luckily escaped without injury, though his horse was wounded. The man, who was armed with four knives, has been since apprehended and committed to the sessions.—Englishman.

MAJOR ROBERT MAYNE.—From among the numerous applicants Major Robert Mayne has, we learn, been selected for the command of the 43rd (the Dewangiri) Native Infantry, and will shortly relinquish the officiating command of the 30th Punjabees. We doubt not that under his able guidance the 43rd will soon be a very different body of men. It is, we are given to understand, to be partially disbanded, and recruited in the upper provinces.—Delhi Gazette, March 25.

SMALL-POX IN THE PUNJAB.—The following statistics, taken from the annual report of the Superintendent of Vaccine operations in the Punjab, will give some idea of the ravages of that disease in the province. In the Lahore Central Jail, out of 1,930 prisoners, there were only 112 who had not evident marks of small-pox, and of these 102 stated they had had the disease. In the Unrisur Jail, 537 out of 548 prisoners, and in the Umballa Jail, 431 out of 598, had had it. During the late epidemic in Unrisur 2,701 children and 12 adults are reported to have died of small-pox. In Lahore 1,205 children, and in Sealkote 292 children died. The general immunity of adults is remarkable; and may be attributed to the fact that almost all the adult populations of the lower orders have had the disease when young.—Lahore Chronicle.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We have received information of the occurrence of a lamentable accident on the river last night, by which four Europeans and two natives have lost their lives. Mr. Hughes, of the East Indian Railway, Mr. Bovill, C.S., Mr. Honigberger, late editor of the Allahabad Observer, and Mr. F. Williams, were crossing over from Shannugger to Chandernagore, having arrived from Calcutta by the 5.30 train. When about twenty yards from the bank, the wind carried the boat out into the stream, and the manjee losing all control over it, it was upset. The four Europeans named and two of the native boatmen have not since been heard of, and there can, we fear, be little doubt that they were drowned.—Englishman, April 6.

INDIGO.—Reports from Tirhoot state that the indigo sowings are completed, and that from all appearances a promising season may be expected.

MILITARY ON DITS.—The convalescents for Kussowlie, under Lieut. Goad, left Allahabad by rail for Delhi on the 23rd March; Dr. Barry, of the 107th, was in medical charge.—No. 4 Battery 24th Brigade Royal Artillery arrived at Allahabad on the 24th March, and will be stationed there.—C. Battery 19th Brigade Royal Artillery, lately quartered in Amritsur, arrived at Agra on the 6th April.—Major J. Morland, of the Bengal Fusiliers, took over the duties of Brigade-major from Major Francis on the 6th April. The latter, we believe, joins his regiment, the 20th Foot, in China.—The Viceroy directs that the Bhopal Lery for the future be designated the Bhopal Battalion.

COLONEL VINCENT EYRE.—We (Friend of India) regret to learn that, at the last minute, Lord de Grey has successfully opposed the recommendation of all the Indian authorities to the effect that the honours of Civil knight-hood should be conferred on Colonel Vincent Eyre, C.B., as contrary to custom. There are one or two precedents we believe, such as that of Sir Alexander Macleod, of the Bengal Artillery, who was thus knighted for Bhurt-pore; but it is greatly to be regretted that the "Hero of Arrah" left the service, in which the military K.C.B.-ship would have been his.

EXPEDITION INTO CENTRAL ASIA.—A most spirited proposal, originating with men of standing in the Punjab, is now before the Government, suggesting the advisability of sending a British expedition into those parts of Central Asia now the focus of Russian intrigues. Mr. Lepell Griffin, whose varied acquirements are so well appreciated by the authorities, is to be placed at the head of the expedition. Dr. Latour, Principal of the Lahore College, a distinguished orientalist, accompanies as linguist, while the services of a distinguished naturalist, as also of a medical officer of standing, are to be or have been secured. The elements of success are all present, and it is to be hoped that the Government will lose no time in sanctioning the proposal before the season is too far advanced.—Delhi Gazette.

THE BILL FOR THE ABOLITION OF GRAND JURIES IN INDIA has passed the Legislative Council of the Governor-general.

A NEW CLUB.—A prospectus of a new club, to be called the Punjab Club, has been issued.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PRINCE AZIM JAH.—We are sure that Prince Azim Jah cannot be pleased with the injudicious advocacy of some of the Madras press, which breathes treasonable threats of revolutionary violence as the consequence if his suit in Parliament be thrown out. We are not a paid advocate of the good old Prince to run into extremes to sustain his claims to the Carnatic Musnud. We have expressed our conscientious opinion against his claim; but we are at liberty notwithstanding to state, as we did before, that we should be very glad if the British Government would adopt him as their protege, and perpetuate the adoption by allowing his heir to succeed him in his honours and emoluments. As a question of justice, or right, we deny the Prince's claim; but a question of policy, we think, that for his known attachment to the British interests, he deserves every honourable consideration.—Carnatic Telegraph, March 28.

THE NEW PRESIDENCY COLLEGE.—We perceive by the Madras papers that the designs for a Presidency College and Senate House having been sent in, the committee appointed to adjudicate the prize offered for the best design for the same have recommended the Governor, who has directed that the prize of Rs. 3,000 be conferred on Mr. R. F. Chisholm, an executive engineer employed in the department of public works in Bengal, and sanctions the payment of the amount, which will be debited to the educational building fund. Applications are to be made in the public works department for the services of Mr. Chisholm to superintend the erection of buildings. The estimates for the Presidency College and the Senate are respectively Rs. 142,695 and Rs. 146,698, against Rs. 250,000 and Rs. 150,000, specified in the Government notification, leaving a margin of more than Rs. 100,000.

A METEOR.—A Correspondent in the Madras Presidency has favoured us with the following particulars of a meteor which was seen by him on the 27th March:—"Another gentleman and myself were pacing the verandah of our house on the night of the 27th inst. (March), when suddenly, at twenty minutes to ten o'clock, I observed a very luminous bolis in the heavens, apparently about S. 29 deg. W. I cannot, with any degree of precision, mark its exact point of origin; I should, however, say it took its rise in the vicinity of Leo. Its locus was a parabola, whose transverse vertex pointed due W.; and it disappeared at S. 33 deg. W., thus having, during the some ten seconds it was visible, passed through 4 deg. of the celestial meridian. It moved noiselessly, and with an apparent velocity of twenty one miles per second. Now should half this be regarded as an illusion arising (as is generally the case) from the opposite motion of the earth, there would still remain a velocity of ten and a-half miles per second, equivalent to the mean of that of the asteroids. The appearance of the meteor was singularly beautiful,—first of a pink, then a pale yellow colour, but it resumed its pristine hue between its points of culmination and declination. The discharged sparks fell like a copious shower of gold-dust. By noting its parallax, I consider it to have passed at no less a height than 240 miles; a circumstance which tends to ignore the whilome current theory of meteoric phenomena being generated by the incandescence of atmospheric gases. However, as a tyro in the science, I shall forbear advertising to the various sources whence they are derived; but supposing this meteor to have come from the nearest fixed star, the parallax of which has been computed at one, it must have occupied more than 37,340 years in transit, which need not be wondered at, when we find that it must, at the lowest estimate, have passed over the incredible distance of 140 billions of miles. Can anything more strikingly impress us with the immensity of space?"

FIGHT WITH A PANTHER.—A Madras paper gives the following:—"The other day there was a most exciting affair at Hyderabad, in which a panther and several officers of the 1st King's Dragoon Guards were the principals. We understand that while Major Alexander's horses were being exercised in the compound, a panther most unaccountably made its appearance, and sprung at one of the horses. Major A., hearing the hubbub, rushed out with a sword, and attacked the animal, which, however, proved rather too nimble, inflicting a wound on the gallant major's head, and almost scalping him; a batman on the premises, witnessing the unequal strife, entered the lists sword in hand and performed with great precision the whole of the sword exercise over and at the animal, but he failed in one material point—the thrust direct; he was ultimately knocked clean over by the brute, which then took refuge in the major's bungalow, frightening all the inmates out of their propriety. After going from one apartment to another he finally took refuge in the drawingroom, where he was shot by Lieutenant Hatfield, after a tough combat."

MISCELLANEOUS.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—The Hon. B. H. Ellis has been appointed to a seat on the Bombay Council, in the room of Mr. Inverarity. The Hon. Mr. Frere resigned on the 7th ult. It is expected that the vacant seat will be filled by the Hon. A. K. Forbes.—Major-general Sir C. Van Straubenzee, Lieut.-colonel Marriott, and Mr. G. Foggo have been nominated to the vacant seats in the Bombay Legislative Council.—It is believed that Colonel Eden will succeed the late Colonel Elliott as Governor-general's agent in Rajpootana.

COMPLIMENTARY ADDRESS TO H.E. SIR HUGH ROSE, K.S.I., G.C.B., &c.—SIR,—On behalf of ourselves and other residents of Bombay we beg to present to you our hearty congratulations on your arrival among us after your most distinguished career as Commander-in-chief of her Majesty's forces in India. We much regret that owing to the shortness of your stay in Bombay, and the presence of Holy Week, we are unable to offer to your Excellency a suitable public reception such as we should desire. But we beg you to accept our assurance that it is with the greatest pride and satisfaction that we welcome in you an illustrious soldier who has won splendid triumphs for British arms, and an administrator whose services have been equally brilliant and solid. We trust that you may live long in your native land to enjoy the gratitude of your Queen and country, and beg to subscribe ourselves,—Your Excellency's most obedient servants.—Bombay, 11th April, 1865.

TOO MANY BANKS.—It is now becoming quite evident to those connected with the many bank and financial schemes which have been carrying on business, that there are far too many of these undertakings in existence at the present time; consequent on which those among them who are wise are looking the difficulty fairly in the face, and are having recourse to the only steps that prudence can dictate—the amalgamation with kindred establishments. Of course there are many rumours current as to the banks which are going to unite together, none of which, perhaps, are very reliable; but, amongst others, it is said that the Central Bank is about to unite with the Surat Bank, the Asiatic Financial with the Bombay Joint-Stock Corporation, and the Bombay City Bank with the East India.—Bombay Gazette.

SCENES IN COURT.—Our readers will learn with mingled feelings that there is now every prospect of a sudden and final end to the "Scenes in Court" which the Bombay newspapers, to the scandal of English justice, have had so often lately to report. After an unseemly altercation with the presiding judge on a recent occasion Mr. Chisholm Anstey and Mr. Barton fell foul of each other, and though peace was at length restored by the intervention of the judge, Mr. Barton's fervent exclamation, "Thank Heaven, there is no law against duelling," leaves us in no doubt as to its ultimate result. Both gentlemen, we are informed, are dead shots, and we therefore see none but a Pickwickian escape from the obvious conclusion. Of one thing we may be quite sure that if these two gentlemen are waiting for the intervention of any one who has the peace and quietness of Bombay at heart, they will wait in vain.—Poona Observer.

ANOTHER MHOW COURT MARTIAL.—We (Delhi Gazette) hear from Mhow that a captain in the 15th N.I., at present stationed there, has been suspended, "and a court of enquiry is sitting, the president of which is Colonel Crawley, of the Inniskilling Dragoons." It appears that Lieutenant-Colonel Stanley, who commands the 15th N.I., made use of very violent and most abusive language on parade to the captain in question, who very properly would not submit to it. High words ensued, and the result has been the "suspension" from duty of the injured party. This mode of treatment, as we have previously stated, is illegal, and a gross breach of the Articles of War. It appears to be quite peculiar to Mhow. It was first introduced there by Colonel Payn, of the 72nd Highlanders, and approved of by Major-General Green, commanding at that station, when, a few months ago, they wrote some very uncalled for and libellous letters to a young officer in the 72nd Highlanders, and thought to get out of it by "suspending" him; but we hear an action against them is proceeding, and no doubt advisedly.

PROPOSED NEW SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH FROM BOMBAY.—Lord John Hay, one of the directors of the Malta and Alexandria Telegraph, has been advocating before the Bombay Chamber of Commerce the establishment of a submarine line of telegraph between Bombay and Suez via Kurrachee. The irregularities of the Indo-European line caused chiefly by the disgraceful condition of the telegraphic service in India, have paved the way among the mercantile community of Bombay, as it must have done among the mercantile firms of England trading with the East, for such a scheme, and the subject has been seriously talked of for some time.—Gazette, 13th April.

LOSS OF THE "LORD BROUGHAM."—By a telegram received in Bombay we regret to hear that the ship Lord Brougham, 1,078 tons, commanded by Captain Randell, was totally lost on the Laccadives Island. We are, however, glad to report that all hands were saved, and that they are now on board the B.C. and R.S.N. Co.'s steamer General Havelock, by which vessel they will be conveyed to Bombay. The Lord Brougham left London about four months ago for Bombay. No further particulars are known at present about the unfortunate affair.—Bombay Gazette.

FIRE AT BOMBAY.—A disastrous fire occurred yesterday (12th inst.) at Matheran. Some of the public offices and the whole of the bazaar were destroyed; 800 of the inhabitants are houseless. Government aid has been solicited.

LIEUT.-COLONEL PELLY, resident in the Persian Gulf, has returned in safety to Bushire, after a visit to Rigatt, the Wahabee capital in Arabia. He was well-received by the Ameer.

THE LATE RANEE CHUNDRABUTTY.—The Sikhs have declined to offer the "pinda" of the late Ranee Chundrabutty, mother of Dhuleep Sing, on the ground that she went to England and lived for a long time with her converted son.

THE CHIEF OF MYHERE.—The minority of the Chief of Myhere, one of the many petty principalities or jagheers of Bundelcund, has expired, and he will, in consequence, be shortly seated on the gaddue, when his estates will be made over to his personal management. Meanwhile Lieutenant Gordon remains in charge.

RESTRICTIONS AS TO SALARIES.

The following despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State, No. 12 of 1865, dated India-office, Feb. 2, is published for general information:—To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—In accordance with the suggestion made in your letter in the foreign dept. (general), dated Sept. 19 (No. 17), 1864, I have consulted the law officers of the Crown, and the standing counsel to this department, on the question whether the restrictions as to salaries in India imposed by Acts 33 Geo. III., cap. 52, sec. 57, and 53 Geo. III. cap. 155, sec. 82, have been repealed by Act 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 54; and it is the opinion of those functionaries that the enactments in question have been wholly repealed by sec. 7 of the last mentioned Act.

2. It will be proper, in accordance with this opinion, that any sums which, since the passing of Act 24 and 25 Victoria, cap. 54, have been withheld from any junior civilians in any of the presidencies under the view of the law which has now been declared to be erroneous, should be paid to them, and that any sums retrenched on the same account should be refunded; and having considered the subject in Council, I have to request that you will cause an adjustment of the salaries of the civil servants in question to be effected in conformity with this view.

8. I shall address you hereafter on the general subject of the limitation of salaries in relation to length of service.—I have, &c.,

Sir Hugh Rose's Last General Order.

His Excellency Sir Hugh Rose, previous to his departure, issued the following general order:—

Head Quarters, Calcutta, March 22.

The C. in C. in India, at the expiration of his term of service, considers it his duty to thank the army for their discipline and efficiency.

All the reports received from the officers commanding divisions and brigades, and the approval of H.R.H. the F.M. Cg. in C., give evidence of the satisfactory state of the one and the other.

The links of authority, ascending to the Government of India, and the Secretary of State for India, prove that the same meed of praise is due to the native army.

The native army, which was remodelled and reorganised after the events of 1857, had to encounter great difficulties in the fulfilment of that object; but the unwearied zeal and ability of the officers, and the good feeling of the men, prevailed over every obstacle, and the State has now at its service an efficient, obedient, and well-disposed native army, who, young as they are, have already done good service in the field.

These results could not have been obtained if the patronage of the army had not been devoted exclusively to military merit.

In a wise and most disinterested spirit, the Government of India allowed the officer who had been selected for the chief command, at a time when one of the most important part of his duties was the reorganisation of the army, to administer its patronage.

Sir Hugh Rose claims no merit whatever for having considered this honourable trust as a sacred one; he published a general order in which he announced that in whatever way an officer could prove his merit and good service he would reward him with the appointments which the Government had been pleased to place at his disposal.

By these means officers who had given practical and sure proofs that they possessed the highest military qualifications were placed at the head of the reorganisation of the army.

The Commander-in-Chief thanks the officers of the army for the manner in which they have justified his confidence in them, and fulfilled their part of the obligation.

Constant inspections have proved to his Excellency how unwearied have been their exertions, and the exercise of their abilities, to do justice to their selection; and, whilst it has been his Excellency's duty almost always to eulogise the success of their efforts, their earnest good will and judgment have rendered, with rare exceptions, reproof unnecessary.

The reorganisation of the native army, which has taken place during his Excellency's command, has made it necessary that he should dwell particularly on points relating to them.

The praise which it is His Excellency's duty to bestow on the officers of the native, applies just as much to those of the British army; and it may be said, that the officers and men of all the armies under His Excellency's command, have not only scrupulously obeyed his orders and wishes, but have done their best to anticipate them.

The Commander-in-Chief in India entertains the conviction that the army will not relax the zeal and exertions which have brought them to the present high standard, and that they will continue to merit the confidence of the very distinguished general officer who has been selected to succeed him, of Government, and their most Gracious Sovereign.

Sir Hugh Rose bids the army farewell, with the most earnest wishes for their welfare and happiness.

Their good conduct has rendered his great command a source of satisfaction, not of anxiety; and the parting with them is his only cause of regret.

By order of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

E. HAYTHORNE, Colonel,
Adjutant General.

Military Letters.

SALARIES OF CIVIL SERVANTS.

India-office, London, Feb. 2, 1865.

To his Excellency the Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—In accordance with the suggestion made in your letter in the Foreign Department, dated Sept. 19 (No. 17), 1864, I have consulted the law officers of the Crown and the standing counsel to this department on the question whether the restrictions as to salaries in India imposed by Acts 33 George III., cap. 52, section 57, and 53 George III., cap. 155, section 82, have been repealed by Act 24 and 25 Victoria, cap. 54; and it is the opinion of those functionaries that the enactments in question have been wholly repealed by section 7 of the last-mentioned Act.

2. It will be proper, in accordance with this opinion, that any sums which, since the passing of Act 24 and 25 Victoria, cap. 54, have been withheld from any junior civilians in any of the Presidencies under the view of the law which has now been declared to be erroneous should be paid to them, and that any sums retrenched on the same account should be refunded; and, having considered the subject in Council, I have to request that you will cause an adjustment of the salaries of the civil servants in question to be effected in conformity with this view.

3. I shall address you hereafter on the general subject of the limitation of salaries in relation to length of service.—I have, &c., C. WOOD.

The Scinde Frontier Force.

Head Qrs., Camp Kusmore, March 13.—The C. in C. having completed his inspection of the station of Jacobabad, and the Scinde Frontier Posts, desires to congratulate the C. in C. of the Scinde Frontier Force on the thorough efficiency of all his arrangements, and the discipline and good order of the regiments under his command.

H.E. has for many years heard the greatest commendation passed on the corps and establishments of the Frontier, organised by the late Brig.-gen. Jacob; his expectations were great in consequence. It is with the utmost satisfaction that he is able to assure Lieut.-col. Green that these expectations have been fully justified by the recent close inspection.

The appearance of the several regiments on parade and their drill, which combines celerity of movement with exactness, leaves nothing to be desired. In like manner, the excellent system of superintendence and vigilance practised along the frontier affords a capital school. His Excellency is happy to hear from Lieut.-colonel Green that the British officers under his command are not slow to profit by the practice thus afforded them; that they are thus preparing themselves for situations of greater responsibility hereafter, whilst on the most recent marches and pursuits exercised by the native officers I hear that they have in no manner deteriorated from the efficiency which characterised them under the lamented Brigadier-general Jacob, and when the frontier was not so peaceable as it is now.

His Excellency has great pleasure in announcing to the Scinde Frontier Force his intention of making the most favourable report of everything that has come under his notice during his inspection to the Hon. the Governor in Bombay, the last duty to be performed by his Excellency in the command of the Bombay army.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.,

R. PHAYRE, Lieut.-Colonel,

SURREPTITIOUS TRANSLATIONS.

No. 209.—H.E. in Council learns with deep regret that at a recent examination of proficiency in the native languages, three officers tendered translations which bore internal evidence of being prepared by another. When questioned, the officers admitted that their translations were not entirely their own bona fide performances.

The case was reported to H.E. the C. in C., who will have taken due notice of the misconduct of the officers.

But H.E. in Council has been advised in consequence to require from future candidates certain declarations on honour to preclude similar practices. This he is unwilling to do. If it be possible that a lax apprehension of honour in this matter has begun to prevail, H.E. in Council believes that this publication of the case is alone sufficient to recal officers and gentlemen to a true sense of such conduct.

THE PETITIONS IN THE CASE OF PRINCE AZEEM JAH.—The report of the select committee of the House of Commons on these petitions was issued on Friday last. The committee have satisfied themselves that a concerted system of fraud has been perpetrated in eighteen of them. In some of them as many as one-half of the names appear to have been forged, and about one-third of the whole number fictitious, thus leaving the genuineness of the remainder open to grave suspicion. In the case of the petitions from Westminster, Pimlico, Hackney, and the city of London, it has been proved that one Mitchell was employed by Mr. Strutt, the Prince's parliamentary agent, to procure signatures, for which he was paid at the rate of 1d. per signature, and that he was assisted in the work by two men named Marshall and Whitehead. A great proportion of these signatures are forgeries, among the number being the names of five officials of the Houses of Parliament, and of other persons residing in their immediate vicinity. The committee therefore report that Mitchell, Marshall, and Whitehead have been guilty of breach of privilege. As to Mr. Strutt, it has not been proved that he was personally engaged in any of these frauds, but the committee "strongly reprobate the mode he adopted with Mitchell of remunerating him at 1d. per signature for the signatures procured, as holding out temptation to the frauds which were afterwards committed."

THORNTON'S HISTORY OF INDIA.—A continuation of this standard work is announced by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. It is to be entitled "The History of the British Empire in India from 1844 to 1862," Mr. Thornton's history having extended to the former year. The work has been entrusted to Capt. L. J. Trotter, late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, a gentleman of considerable literary culture and local knowledge, and the author of several books favourably known to the public. The stirring events of the period under review afford ample material for an interesting as well as valuable volume, and Captain Trotter will, we have no doubt, do them full justice.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, May 8, 1865.

THE INDIAN ARMY GRIEVANCE IN PARLIAMENT.

CAPTAIN JERVIS has carried his motion in favour of the claims of the Indian officers, and there is a hope that the question, being once more opened, will receive this time a satisfactory settlement. Neither the motion, however, nor the speech by which it was supported, embraced the whole of the grievances alleged; and if no more than the literal prayer of the "humble address" to be presented to her Majesty be taken into consideration, there will still remain a great deal of discontent unrelieved. Captain Jervis confined himself, in his motion, to such grievances as were admitted by the "Royal Commission upon the Memorials of Indian Officers" to be a breach of the Parliamentary guarantee; and an amendment which had been entered on the paper by Colonel Sykes, for the addition of the words "and such other grievances as are in violation of Parliamentary guarantees," was not put to the House, though the Colonel very freely entered upon the additional subject-matter. That there was good reason for the formal forbearance we can quite understand; but the effect may prevent a complete re-consideration of the questions involved.

The result of the deliberations of the Commissioners, which Captain Jervis did not pretend to dispute, was that out of thirteen claims brought before them three were allowed, two were partially admitted, and eight were rejected altogether. With two out of the three admitted, Sir Charles Wood soon after endeavoured to deal, but unfortunately not with success, at least, in the most important case; and it is now evident that not only should the grievances still remaining under this head be remedied, but the partial admissions be taken into account, and, at least, one of the rejections obtain reconsideration.

The first grievance admitted by the Royal Commissioners, fully and unreservedly, was the most important of all. This was in reference to the supersession of regimental officers by the members of the Staff Corps, the names of the latter officers being retained on the cadres of their old regiments, and their promotions, regulated by time, being more rapid, in many cases, than the promotion of the regimental officers, regulated by seniority. The second admitted grievance related to the retention upon the cadres of their old regiments of the names of those officers who joined the new line regiments formed under the General Order of Amalgamation. The complainants declare that every officer making the change ought to be considered as having created a vacancy in the regiment from which he was removed; and as far as concerns officers changing, not from the old European regiments, but from native cavalry and infantry regiments, the Commissioners allow the claim. The third admitted grievance had reference to the unfavourable condition of promotion, in comparison with Royal officers, of cavalry and infantry colonels in the Indian army—a state of things since taken into consideration, and subjected to a readjustment. The grievances which have been officially described as doubtful, but which we have preferred to call partially admitted—the Commissioners not doubting the principle of the claims, but considering the evils to be of only limited operation—are, in the first instance, in respect to colonel's allowances, or off- reckonings, for the cavalry and infantry. In these arms of the service it has been decided that every lieutenant-colonel shall become a full colonel, and be entitled to colonel's allowances, after holding the rank of lieutenant-colonel for twelve years. Approving the principle of promotion in this case, the Commissioners say that the question depends upon whether twelve years be or be not a fair average of time in reference to the working of the seniority system. The complainants declare the fair average to be ten instead of twelve years; and the Commissioners bring statistics to bear upon the point. It appears from official information that the average in Bengal is 10·2 years, in Madras 11·8, and in Bombay 10·9; so that, as the report declares, "twelve years is just more than a year beyond what has been the average for the three Presidencies, but it is very nearly two years above the average in Bengal, of which the army constituted nearly one-half of the whole army of India. Thus, under this rule, "the period passed in a lieutenant-colonelcy will, on the average of the whole army, be about one-twelfth longer, and on the average of Bengal nearly one-sixth longer than it was before." The new rule, however, the report goes on to say, "is not to affect the lieutenant-colonels who attained that rank before the date of the new system, and so the question whether twelve years is a fair average for the future for the three Presidencies will be tested by the time at which these lieutenant-colonels will succeed to the allowances in question; and if it should be found that they have obtained them generally in less than twelve years, we consider that unless the shorter average period be adopted the guarantee will not have been strictly adhered to." This is surely an opinion entitled to consideration, instead of being dismissed as doubtful; the ascertained effect of the rule being to deprive every Bengal officer entitled to off- reckonings of about £2,000.

The first grievance on the "doubtful" list relates to the course pursued by the Government to encourage retirement from among the senior officers of the cavalry and infantry. Additional pensions were offered for the purpose, and it was made part of the arrangement that only one-half of the vacancies so created should be filled up. The consequence is that in some regiments promotion has been stopped, and hence the complaints upon this head. Here again the Commissioners do not dispute the principle of the objections made; they are uncertain only as to the extent of the evil. Officers, they say, "not benefited by immediate promotion may seem to derive a certain prospective advantage from the advance towards promotion occasioned by so many retirements in the superior ranks; but it must be remembered that this advantage will in all cases be materially diminished by the diminution in the lieutenant-colonelcies, to which promotion is denied. They advance towards a receding object." They are unable to make any calculation in the matter; but they consider "that where loss can be ascertained to have taken place, there the guarantee has not been adhered to."

The so-called "doubtful" points are thus established as grievances of partial application. One of the rejected claims is of an application almost universal, and the rejection was clearly caused by a misapprehension, on the part of the Commissioners, of the real state of the case. We refer to the "bonus system," or system of subscribing bonuses among the officers of regiments to induce the retirement of superior officers and so hasten promotion. The custom was so general as almost to be compulsory, and hundreds of officers at the present time have subscribed very large sums towards the object, in many cases at the cost of pecuniary liabilities involving serious embarrassment; and they now find themselves deprived of all hope of gaining a quid pro quo. The Commissioners rejected consideration of claims on this score on the ground that transactions of the kind are illegal, and have been so held in courts of law. But such dealings were nevertheless allowed by the directors, who discounted them at one time, but afterwards formally pledged themselves not to interfere, and to give notice of the withdrawal of the privilege. Their connivance was even published in the Indian Gazettes, and was acted upon for twenty years without objection.

These facts could not have been known to the Royal Commission, or its members would scarcely have decided against the claim, which is undoubtedly based upon one of the rights and privileges which Parliament bound itself to maintain.

We trust, upon the grounds stated, that the consideration which the claims of the Indian officers cannot fail to receive from authority, will not be limited to the points admitted by the Commissioners, which, especially if the "doubtful" questions be dismissed, are quite insufficient to meet the case, still less to give that full measure of satisfaction which a gallant body of gentlemen, who have so well served their country, have a right to expect.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GRIEVANCES OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

By a majority of forty-nine votes against thirty-six—the whole making up an unusually large house on an Indian question—Captain Jervis has carried his motion for a further redress of the grievances which, in spite of a Royal Commission, and Sir Charles Wood's professions, are still rampant in the Indian army. Of the substantial justice of his case there can hardly be two opinions outside the India Office. Of course the Secretary for India has a good deal to say for himself; dwells on the great expense already entailed on his government by the old services; makes much of his kindness in granting brevets to one class of officers, instead of cancelling preferment already given to another; denies that the petitions sent into Parliament always, or even generally, express the real sentiments of the officers whose names they bear; and ends with an earnest hope that after all he had said the House "would feel that the officers of the Indian army had been generously and liberally treated."

All this, however, is so much dust thrown into the eyes of a well-meaning, but ill-informed and slightly apathetic audience. The defence is utterly beside the mark. It is not a question at all for lawyers, economists, or word-splitting politicians. A certain Act of Parliament pledged the nation to grant the old Indian armies "the like pay, pensions, allowances, and privileges, and the like advantages as regards promotion or otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the East India Company." It is beside the mark to aver that some or even all Indian officers have had quicker promotion since the amalgamation of the two armies than they ever had before, so long as between officer and officer a gross injustice remains unredressed. It is folly to talk of expense, or haggle about small inaccuracies, when a nation's honour is at stake. Is it right, is it honest, for one of her Majesty's Ministers to take his stand on the illegality of a system of purchase, which the old East India Company not only winked at, but openly sanctioned withal, many years before the Mutiny? Is it meet for an English gentleman to argue as if a brevet-captaincy could place a regimental officer on exactly the same footing of rank and pay with his junior, a full captain in the Staff Corps? If old Indian officers have to wait twelve years instead of ten from the date of their lieutenant-colonelcies, before drawing their share of that coveted prize, the "off-reckonings," have they indeed been fairly dealt with, in the true spirit of the Henley clause?

Here, at least, are three cases of grievance, the ignoring of which were an unworthy breach of the promise made by Parliament, at Mr. Henley's urging, to the old Indian army. It is mere folly, or worse, to maintain that a regimental brevet captain of twelve years' service has been placed by his brevet, giving army rank only and no pay, on an equal footing with a staff officer of twelve years' service. The mere statement of the fact is its worst condemnation, in the case of an army whose rights of seniority were among the privileges assured to it by Mr. Henley's enactment. So, also, is it the merest shuffling to deny Indian officers all compensation for the retiring-bonuses no longer open to them under the new system. Law and equity, as we all know, are very different things; and it may be that the Court of Directors could not legally sanction a thing in itself illegal. But the fact remains, that they gave their open countenance to the practice, in itself entirely harmless, of quickening promotion by the buying out of officers willing, for a fair inducement, to retire. In spite of narrow technical judgments in the law courts, that practice had long since become an established principle, on the strength of which many an officer has in his time laid out many thousands of rupees in the sure hope of being in his turn enabled to retire at need on some solid addition to his ordinary pay. Since 1858 scores of officers have found themselves doomed either to quit the service without the accustomed bonus, or to serve on at all hazards in order to make good their wasted outlay, and ensure on retirement an income equal to what they would else have gained many years sooner. How many die in the meantime, or come home too late for enjoyment, we need not ask. If this state of things is not against the spirit, ay, and the letter also, of Mr. Henley's proviso, it were hard to say what is.

Into the various mistakes contained in Sir C. Wood's speech on Tuesday evening we have no space to enter. Some of them were thoroughly exposed by Colonel Sykes. But the whole speech was one long mistake. One hardly looks for generous treatment from a Cabinet Minister. Governing bodies, from the highest in the State to a parish vestry or a board of workhouse guardians, are proverbial for the lowness of their moral tone. Men in a body will always do what almost any one of them singly would be ashamed of doing. Still it is very sad to think how lightly men of undoubted honour can bring themselves to regard a claim enforced by every principle of righteous dealing, by a solemn pledge of the British Parliament, by a noble deference to the feelings of a body of gentlemen who, unlike the regular British army, or the railway or the mercantile interest, have no easy way of forcing from churlish rulers the justice they demand.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, X.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—APRIL 28.

The Earl of DERBY presented a petition from officers of the Indian army, complaining of the loss of advantages sustained by the amalgamation of the British and Indian armies, and praying for relief.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 27.

Petitions were presented by Sir J. HAY, Colonel SYKES, Colonel DUNNE, Colonel EDWARDS, and Mr. LIDDELL, from twenty-eight officers, complaining of a violation of rights secured to them by Act of Parliament, and praying for redress.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 28.

Petitions were presented by Colonel SYKES, from Lieutenant-colonel Taylor, 2nd Bombay Light Cavalry; Captain Walter Weldon, 47th Madras N.I.; Captain W. H. L. Fuller, 4th Madras N.I.; Lieutenant H. Gerordot, Royal Bengal Artillery; and Lieut. F. F. Cadogan, 22nd Bengal N.I.; complaining of the violation of rights secured to them by Act of Parliament, and praying for redress. THE AZIM JAH PETITIONS—FICTITIOUS SIGNATURES.

Mr. C. FORSTER brought up the report of the Select Committee to which the petitions presented to the House in support of the claims of Azim Jah to the Nawabship of the Carnatic had been referred, for the purpose of investigating the authenticity of the signatures appended to them. The Committee reported to the effect that they had examined the petitions, in nineteen of which, by the aid of an expert, fictitious signatures had been discovered. In that from the City of London there were 378 forgeries. In some of the petitions one-half the names had been forged; and in others about one-third of the whole number of signatures were fictitious, thus leaving the remainder open to great suspicion as to their genuineness. In the case of the petitions from Westminster, Pimlico, and the City of London, a great proportion of the signatures were discovered to be forgeries. In Pimlico, a person named George Morris Mitchell had obtained a large number of signatures by paying a penny each for them—(a laugh)—and one of the experts was of opinion that 130 of the said signatures had been written by George Morris Mitchell himself. The Committee resolved, after mature consideration and careful inspection of the signatures, that George Morris Mitchell had committed a breach of the privileges of the House. The hon. gentleman continued:—“This day week I will call the attention of the House to the report. I anticipate that the evidence will be in the hands of members before that day.”

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 1.

CHINA.

Colonel SYKES asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether further papers respecting proceedings in China would be laid upon the table of the House; whether the consul at Amoy had reported his visit to the Taeping Chief at Chang-chow, and with what results; and whether information had reached the Foreign-office of the reported revolt of the Imperialist troops in the cities of Hang-chow and Chang-chow, with the rumoured connivance of Tsing-kwo-fan, the anti-foreign Minister of State?

Mr. LAYARD replied that there were no papers of sufficient importance to lay on the table; yet they were aware of the intention of the consul at Amoy to pay a visit to the Taeping chief, but his report on the subject had not yet been received; and no information had been received at the Foreign-office respecting the reported revolt of the Imperialist troops.

THE 64TH FOOT.

General BUCKLEY asked the Secretary of State for India why the detachment of the 64th foot, consisting of five or six officers and 200 men (who, being part of the Lucknow garrison, was shut up in the Alum Baugh from October to November, 1857, when they were relieved by Sir Colin Campbell), had been deprived of the second donation batta, which had been received by the rest of the regiment which was in Lucknow; this detachment had been allowed the year's pay, and the second donation batta was first allowed, but had since been refused?

Sir C. WOOD said that the services performed by the two portions of the regiment were totally and altogether different. One portion was shut up in Lucknow and exposed to all the hardships and dangers which occurred, whilst the other never was in Lucknow at all, but in Alum Baugh, at some distance. The first donation batta was given to the division under the misapprehension that it was in Lucknow, and the Government of India had expressed the strongest opinions that it would not receive any donation batta at all.

INDIAN OFFICERS.

Captain JERVIS rose to call attention to the petition presented to that House by the officers of the late Indian armies, and moved that a humble address be presented to her Majesty, praying she will be graciously pleased to redress all such grievances complained of by them as were admitted by the “Commission on the Memorials of Indian Officers,” to have arisen by a departure from the assurances given by Parliament by the 21st and 27th Vic., c. 106, and the 23rd and 24th Vic. c. 100.

Last year, in consequence of the discussions which had taken place in that House, the right hon. gentleman, the Secretary for India, stated that it was his intention to carry out the report of the Royal Commissioners appointed to inquire into the various grievances which had been brought under his notice by the officers of the Indian army. After that pledge it was a most serious matter to find twenty-three general officers, 240 field officers, and 500 officers of lower rank, not one of whom had served less than seven years, petitioning the House that the report might be carried into effect in accordance with the pledge which the right hon. gentleman had given. When Lord Derby's Government considered it necessary to put an end to the East India Company they appointed a commission to inquire into the rights to which the service were entitled. The members of that commission, the then Secretary-at-War (General Peel), the noble lord the Secretary for India (Lord Stanley), and a large number of men who were looked up to, in their report, which was as clear and distinct as any report could be, stated that no change could be made which could disturb the system of promotion by seniority, or which would in any way interfere with the rights and privileges of the officers—(hear, hear). That having been the report of the commissioners, it was adopted by the House and became the law of the country, and when the present Government succeeded to office and the right hon. baronet became Secretary for India, he introduced a Bill on this subject, and adopted a clause proposed by the hon. member for Oxfordshire, although at the time he stated that he considered it a very unnecessary clause. That statement was made on the 30th July, 1860. Now, on that very day he had signed papers to be submitted to the military committee appointed by himself, to carry out the very opposite of that which he had pledged himself to do—(hear). The committee reported that the Secretary of State was bound to carry out what had been promised by Parliament; but in spite of his own committee reporting against him, within a few months he sent a despatch to India to carry out a system which he considered correct, but which the committee considered contrary to the guarantee. According to the pledges given by Parliament, the officers had a right to rise by seniority until they became field officers. But what did the right hon. gentleman do? He entirely broke up their regimental staffs, and substituted a Staff Corps, the most extraordinary production that was ever conceived. His warrant authorised the filling up of different vacancies which arose on the staff, whether civil or military. But what did he next do? He issued an order contrary to the advice of every great man who had been in that country. He created a Staff Corps, leaving six men to command a regiment. Having done that, he issued an edict by which the regular regiments were to be turned into irregular regiments; and then he framed a staff of corps officers to command these irregulars, displacing the whole of the local officers. The staff officers under this rule were about 1,300, and the number of local officers, who were in a state of disgust, numbered about 2,000. So many petitions were presented, that a reconsideration of the question was thought desirable, and he moved for the appointment of a committee. The right hon. baronet met that by the proposal of a Royal Commission. According to the statement of the right hon. baronet he was anxious to get through the matter rapidly for all parties, and the chairman of the Commission addressed a letter to him, asking if he could procure a statement of grievances to lay before the Commission, instead of examining witnesses. That was not easy to be done, seeing that half the Indian officers were on sick leave or on furlough, but he did succeed in getting a committee, and with their assistance submitted to the Commission a clear and distinct statement of what they considered their grievances, and in order to facilitate the decision of the commission classified all the petitions presented to this House. The right hon. baronet said that out of the thirteen grievances reported by the Commissioners eight were against, two doubtful, and three for. He accepted this broad fact, but the right hon. baronet took care not to point out that the one great and real grievance was confirmed by the Commission—(hear, hear). The right hon. baronet then came down to the House, and said that the difficulties which arose out of the Indian army were ten times more troublesome than the whole of India put together. But what originated the difficulty—(cheers)? If they considered who these men were and what they had done, that not one who was there twenty years but contracted some disease from the climate or the duty; that these were the men who stood by their colours in the mutiny, and were shot down like dogs; who were the husbands, brothers, and cousins of the women slaughtered at Cawnpore and Delhi—(cheers); they were not a class of men to receive such treatment at the hands of the right honourable baronet—(cheers). What was the reason of the amalgamation of the two services? The Indian army was a body of mercenaries totally different in its character from any other army in the civilised world. They did not ask for amalgamation; but they were considered worthy by reason of their great deeds and their heroic bravery during the last century, and the right honourable baronet had no right to treat brave and honourable men as he had done. But the right honourable baronet having accepted the report, what did he do as the result? He established a staff corps, which after 12 years' service gave captain's rank and substantive pay; after 20 years', those of major; and after 24 or 26 the substantive pay and rank of lieutenant-colonel. The right hon. baronet by that means created a super-session and broke up the mess system from one end of India to the other—that brotherly and paternal mess system by which men stuck to men, and regiment sympathised with regiment, which was a great organisation. The right hon. baronet was then in a great dilemma, and he met it by sending out to India an order giving the officers brevet rank and no pay—(hear, hear). In this country when a man received brevet rank he gained a certain position and consideration amongst his comrades, and was a man of mark; but brevet rank in India, when it was given by wholesale, meant only so much gold on the officer's collar and sleeves, which he had to pay for, and there an end—(cheers). After that he sent a most extraordinary despatch replying to the report of the commissioners. The officers were not secretaries of state and could not reply to it, and it was therefore a one-sided document. With respect to the bonus question, the Royal commissioners came to a conclusion which they never would have done had they had the whole facts before them. The right hon. baronet stated that a system had arisen in the Indian army of purchasing out seniors, which was illegal, and not sanctioned by the Court of Directors. That was totally contrary to the fact; for not only was it encouraged by the Court of Directors, at the request of Parliament, but was sanctioned by the Board of Control, in order to enable younger officers to rise to higher command in the service. The decision of the right hon. baronet was in direct opposition to the opinion of his own council, and of Sir W. Maunsfield, whose advice was to do away with the Parliamentary guarantee and reorganise the whole service. The right hon. baronet had taken great credit not only in this House, but in his despatches to India, for what he had done to keep these officers in full employment and full pay; but the real fact was that there was no such thing as half-pay in the Indian army—

(hear). There was nothing more serious than to do away with the trust placed in Government by the officers of the army; and if they found that Acts solemnly passed by both Houses of Parliament were thrown aside and disregarded, would not the soldiers of the British army, seeing others so grossly treated, turn round and say, "What are you going to do with us?"—(cheers). He would leave the matter in the hands of the House, trusting it would look to its own honour and the guarantees it had given to Indian officers—(cries of "hear, hear").

Sir C. WOOD rose at the earliest possible moment, as he was anxious not only to reply to the motion and remarks of the hon. and gallant gentleman, but to state the general course pursued by Government on the various questions connected with the Indian army. It was quite a mistake to suppose there was only one question to deal with; there were two others besides that mentioned by the hon. member, viz., the alteration in the organisation of the Indian army, and the question of the extensive reduction in the number of that army. He entirely concurred in the eulogium passed upon the officers of the Indian army, and he admitted that if he had acted towards men entitled to so much consideration as the hon. member had said he should consider himself most guilty in the eyes of the House—(cheers). He did not, however, hesitate to say that the result, taken as a whole, of the measures which the Government had proposed and carried out in consequence of the report of the commissioners, had placed the officers of the Indian army in a far better position, both as regards pay and promotion than they ever were at previous periods of their service—(cheers). The hon. member had said a good deal as to the number of petitions which had been presented; and he freely admitted that if he thought that those petitions were the real expression of the opinion of the officers whose names were appended to them he should attach far more weight to them than he did. But the grievances they expressed had been ignored and repudiated by some of the officers whose names they bore—(cries of "Name, name"). He would not shrink from doing so. One officer came to his department and said that his position was improved by what had taken place, and strange to say, on looking over the petitions he found a petition signed by this very officer—(cries of "Name, name"). He would not name.

Captain JERVIS: I rise to order. I beg to say that I shall move for a committee of inquiry into the signatures of those petitions—(cheers).

Sir C. WOOD: At all events, he had received a letter by the last mail from an officer whose name he would give—it was from Colonel Cherry, of the Madras army. This was what he said:—"I have to inform you that a pamphlet, headed 'Another Grievance,' in which my name is used in an unwarrantable manner, was composed and published without my knowledge or consent. I have no grievance, and have never petitioned, and I am much annoyed that my name should be so used." He had another letter, from Colonel Kelso, who had petitioned. In 1861 this gentleman was captain, and in consequence of the accelerated promotion which the Government measures had introduced he became lieutenant-colonel six months after, entirely passing over the rank of major. The Madras newspapers stated that Lieut.-colonel Kelso benefited somehow by the interest the officers of three regiments had in his retirement; and he did retire in the course of this year, and then petitioned the House, stating that he was very badly used, because the names of certain other officers who had retired under a special bonus had not been removed from the list. Headed that if that had been done he would by this time have obtained his colonel's allowance. Now, the ordinary time for an officer in the Madras army to attain the rank of major was seven years, and the ordinary time for his attaining the rank of lieutenant-colonel was twelve years, but Lieutenant-colonel Kelso now complained to Parliament that he had been subjected to a great grievance because that had not been done which would have enabled him to obtain his colonel's allowance in less than four years from the date of his captaincy. A statement had lately been sent round to members of Parliament mentioning three cases as specimens of the grievances of those Indian officers. In the first of those cases the complaint was that a captain of the Bengal Staff Corps had, contrary to the practice of the Indian service, superseded a major. But if such a case had occurred it would not have been contrary to the universal practice of the East India Company. The major in question had been in command of an irregular regiment, and the East India Company had been in the habit of disregarding that rank. But the present India Office had ordered that no officer should serve under a junior except with his own consent, and if Major Larkin was serving under a captain he must have been doing so through his own choice. The next case was that of Major Spottiswoode, who was superseded by a Lieutenant Brown. In that case the lieutenant's service on the Staff Corps gave him the rank of major; and besides he could not be in command over Major Spottiswoode, because Lieutenant Brown was filling a civil appointment. The third case he (Sir C. Wood) did not perfectly understand, but he apprehended that the order respecting the service of a senior in rank under a junior provided a remedy for the complaint that had been made. There could, therefore, be no foundation for the charges that had been advanced in respect of the three cases to which he had referred. He was not then going to enter into the question of the bonus, because the commission had distinctly reported that upon that point there was no breach of the guarantee. The commissioners classified the alleged breaches of the guarantee under thirteen heads. They reported that under eight of those heads there was no cause of complaint, that in three of them there was cause of complaint, and that in the remaining two some cause of complaint might perhaps arise under certain circumstances. Now in the three cases of alleged just complaint, he had complied with the recommendations of the commissioners, and every possibility of a grievance had been removed. Of the two remaining cases, he had to state that in one of them no grievance could up to the present time have arisen, and in the other ample compensation had been provided for any injury that any parties could sustain. The fact was that the additional advantage which the Indian officers derived in the shape of pay and promotion during the last four years was perfectly unexampled. The first question to which he would specially refer was what was called the amalgamation of the East India Company's army with the army of her Majesty. The measure had been carried into effect without affording the slightest subject of complaint, and the contrary impression which he was aware prevailed among the public was a complete mistake. The other two changes were a reorganisation of the army and a large reduction of its numbers. It was obvious that both these measures were entirely within the competence of the East India Company, and, consequently, of the Crown, which had succeeded to the powers of the company. They had substituted what was called the irregular formation in the armies of Bengal and of Bombay, and it was intended to apply the same system to Madras. Lord Elphinstone had given it as his opinion that one native cavalry regiment under the former system cost three times as much as one irregular regiment, and that the saving by substituting the irregular for the regular force was about £340,000.

The formation of the Staff Corps was a matter of absolute necessity. Next came the question of promotion. In the report of the commission to which the hon. and gallant gentleman had referred, it was recommended that the promotion to the staff corps should be governed by length of service. That was what the government did. The Government had offered to all officers of the Indian army the option of going into the Staff Corps, and the same thing was done with regard to the officers of the line. They had gone one step farther, and had thought it right to give these officers the same benefit of promotion as if the Staff Corps had been formed at the time they entered the service. In justification of the course adopted he might state that there were examples enough of the same thing having been done by the East India Company. The hon. and gallant member behind him (Colonel Sykes) had spoken of the legal and indisputable rights of the officers; but he forgot that on several occasions the Indian Government would not admit their rights. The Indian army, officered by English officers, including contingents, before the mutiny was 265,000. In order to remove the sources of danger in that army it was incumbent upon the Government to reduce it; and, therefore, it was diminished by 130,000 men, or 101 regiments. When they reduced a great number of regiments they reduced also a great number of colonels; but in this case, from the increase and extent of the Indian mutiny, there was no reduction of colonels, although there was of allowances, except in the case of the St. Helena force, where the officers were pensioned off with something rather more than the pensions of their respective ranks. A further measure they provided was an extraordinary number of retirements. They offered 300 people a boon in order to induce them to retire, and the immediate effect of that was very great promotion. The number of officers promoted at once was 49 lieutenant-colonel, 87 majors, 123 captains, and 190 lieutenants. He thought they had in all respects shown great, generous, and liberal consideration for the case of the Indian officers. The whole increase of pay given at once in promotions, pensions, and other emoluments, was rather more than a quarter of a million sterling. That of course would be diminished as the pensions fell off. Now, with regard to promotion, he must say that it was not fair to take what occurred in any particular rank, they must take the whole process. During the last four years, ending 1865, there had been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel 223 officers; in the four years ending 1857 there were only 84 officers promoted; upon the same comparison to the rank of major, 534, against 143; to the rank of captain, 668 as against 585, of whom 176 were due to the augmentation of the army. He had conclusively shown that in point of pay, pension, retirement, and promotion, they had acted most liberally and generously towards the officers of the Indian army, and he earnestly hoped that these continuous attacks upon the administration, so calculated to produce mischief, would now come to an end—(hear).

Colonel SYKES, who had an amendment on the paper to add to the motion the words "and such other grievances as are in violation of Parliamentary guarantees," said that the right hon. gentleman who had just sat down had forgotten to state the contrast presented between the chances of promotion for an officer now and formerly. At present, an officer who might under the old system have attained the command of a regiment, only had such command on paper, and what had been a regiment was now converted into an irregular corps, without home or domicile. It was clear that in this change was involved a breach of a Parliamentary guarantee, and that it was the duty of the House to see that it was repaired. The right hon. gentleman said that everything had been done with the consent of high authorities, and in concert with his council. The question of the organisation of the establishment of the staff board had been referred by the right hon. gentleman to his administrative committee of the Council of India. The committee was composed of the present Viceroy of India, of Sir John Willoughby, Sir R. Vivian, Colonel Durand, and Captain Eastwick, all gentlemen of great Indian experience. What did the committee report? Why that, except at exorbitant cost to the State, they had failed to discover any practicable suggestion by which the inherent difficulties of amalgamation were attempted to be met. Sir James Outram also expressed his opinion that amalgamation would be most injurious, and that the servants of the East India Company would suffer great injustice from it. The interests of India and of the empire at large demanded that the army should be a localised army and not an amalgamated one. The report of the military committee of the Indian Council was in such complete opposition to the views of the Secretary of State for India, that he resolved not to lay it before the Council. In 1860 the Council stated that on any grave question it was competent for the minister to set on one side the Council, and consult them or not at his pleasure. It was obvious that one of the objects of the legislature was frustrated, and that the Council would utterly fail in the performance of those duties which had been entrusted to them by Parliament. And the Council added that the course adopted by the Secretary of State in refusing to bring the report of the military committee before the Council was contrary to the Act of Parliament. This report was signed by Sir John Lawrence, and by thirteen other members now in the Council of India, one signature alone being wanting. The hon. and gallant member then proceeded to refer to the recommendations of Lord Hotham's committee, and complained that some of them had not been carried into effect. He contended particularly that the bonus was not illegal, as it had been represented to be. While the grievances enumerated remained agitation and discontent would prevail in the public service, and the discontent would be still greater in the country.

Mr. SMOLLETT said that, in his judgment, amalgamation had been carried out with great profusion and cost, but without producing satisfaction. A great error had been committed of founding an exorbitant and unnecessary staff corps. But the greatest mischief of all was in this House passing the Amalgamation Act in 1860. At the time of the amalgamation there were 5,300 of these officers, of whom only 1,340 had been merged into the Queen's army. There remained 1,400 officers, and the way the Government dealt with them was the subject of the complaints now made. They established the staff corps, which had already been so fully described, and by this means an unprecedented legion of staff officers, no less than 1,400 in number, was created. Many of them had never done regimental duty at all, and yet by this new system they were made to supersede their seniors. The Secretary of State might have remedied this state of things by simply cancelling the order; but he refused to do this, and the only other course which seemed open to him to take was to give the superseded officers the same rank, pari passu, with the officers unduly promoted. No doubt that would add another heavy charge upon the revenue of India, and to that complexion he believed they would have to come at last—(cheers). All this was the result of some blunder, either at the India Office or the Horse Guards, or perhaps at both—(hear).

The House then divided—

For the motion	49
Against it	36
Majority	—13

The result of the division was received with cheers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 5.

SINGAPORE, MALACCA, AND PENANG.

Lord STANLEY asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was his intention to bring in a Bill, during the present Session, for the transfer of Singapore, Malacca, and Penang from the Indian to the Colonial Administration?

Sir C. WOOD was understood to say he could not give a positive answer to the question of the noble lord. So far as the Indian Government were concerned, they had been quite ready to meet the wishes of the people of Singapore; but the Colonial-office had thought it requisite to institute certain inquiries, to satisfy themselves that no burden would be imposed upon the estimates of this country, and the final determination of the department had not as yet been conveyed to him.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

In reply to Mr. A. MILLS, Sir C. WOOD said that, as he had not as yet received all the accounts from India, he was not in a position to fix the day for making his Indian financial statement.

FRACAS AT ALDERSHOT.—ASSAULT BY MAJOR WOOD ON MAJOR STEEL.

On Friday, at the Sheriff's Court, Red Lion-square, before Mr. Undersheriff Burchell and a special jury, a case in the Common Pleas, "Steel v. Wood," created considerable interest. It was an action for an assault committed at Aldershot by Major Henry Evelyn Wood, son of Sir John Wood, on Major Charles Steel, son of the late Lieutenant-General Sir Scudamore Steel. The damages were laid at £500, and as the defendant had suffered judgment to go by default, a writ of inquiry was executed to assess the amount to be awarded.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine, in opening the case, regretted the necessity he felt in bringing it before the public. A public outrage had been committed on his client, and as Major Wood, who besides being the son of Sir John Wood was nephew of Vice-Chancellor Wood, had refused to make an apology (and even now he would accept one with nominal damages), and as he had been refused a court-martial, he was for the sake of his character obliged to bring the case into Court. Major Steel had, in 1858, married the sister of the defendant, and she soon afterwards left her husband's house. There was no moral imputation on Major Steel, but she had absented herself, and he had been most anxious for her return. In December, 1863, at the time of the court-martial on Colonel Crawley at Aldershot, the plaintiff met his wife there and a young gentleman with her. He asked the name of the young gentleman, and he appeared to be Major Wood. The plaintiff went up and asked his wife to speak to him, holding out his hand. She refused, and the defendant prevented her. He followed towards the cabstand, wishing to ascertain the residence of his wife, and the defendant struck him two or three blows in his face and his nose bled. For this outrage on a brother officer in public an apology had been demanded, and several times refused. Major Steel, who had been in the Lancers and Hussars, had been refused a court-martial because he was on half-pay, and had been obliged to come into court to establish his character before the public. It was explained that the action had not been tried sooner from the illness of the plaintiff and the recent death of his father, after which event notice had been given by his attorney, Mr. Henry Berry. The learned serjeant stated that the plaintiff had served in India, and that the defendant was a distinguished officer might be inferred from the fact that he had obtained the Victoria Cross.

On the part of the defendant it was contended that the blow had been well earned by the plaintiff, who had tried to recapture his wife, adopting the custom among some wild Indians. It was simply a case for the smallest damages.

The jury retired for an hour, and then awarded £400 in damages.

THE DIRECT TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

The Indo-European Telegraph having made urgent and repeated efforts to effect a daily communication with Bombay, has up to the present moment fallen so far short of the object that an average week instead of a day has been the time consumed, as will be seen by the subjoined dates:—

The first telegram from India, dated from Kurrachee Feb. 28, was received in London March 1, or 8½ hours only in transmission.

A telegram from Bombay, dated March 3, was received in London March 9.

A telegram from Calcutta, dated March 29, was received in London April 4.

A telegram from Bombay, dated March 31, was received in London April 5.

Ditto from Bombay, April 1, ditto April 6.

Ditto from Bombay, April 4, ditto April 7.

Ditto from Bombay, April 6, ditto April 10.

Ditto from Bombay, April 7, ditto April 17.

Ditto from Bombay, April 15, ditto April 22.

Ditto from Bombay, April 22, ditto April 26.

Ditto from Bombay, April 29, ditto May 6.

The first through message from Baghdad was in French, from Namik Pasha, the Governor, to Sir Bartle Frere at Bombay, and it appears to have been delayed in transit by some interruption along the Mekran Coast. In his message to the Bombay Government, announcing the completion of the line, Col. Kemball apprehends that these interruptions may be frequent. Sir C. Wood's message to the Viceroy, congratulating his Excellency on the completion of the electric chain, was despatched from London at 4.15 P.M. on the 1st of March, and reached Calcutta at 2.15 P.M. on the 4th of March (or less than three days), since then mercantile messages have been received in about four days.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—MAY 3.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE IN COUNCIL OF INDIA (APPELLANT) V. THE CHURCHWARDENS AND OVERSEERS OF ST. MARY, LAMBETH (RESPONDENTS).

This was a special case, stated for the opinion of the Court by order of Mr. Justice Shee.

Mr. Denman, Q.C., appeared for respondents; Mr. Forryth, Q.C., and Mr. Maule, for the appellant.

It appeared that a rate had been made by the respondents upon the parish of which they were churchwardens and overseers. The appellant was thereupon rated to the amount of £115 as owner and occupier of the military stores of the East India Government, in the Belgrave-road. The appellant disputed his liability, and refused to pay the rate, upon which he was summoned at the Middlesex Quarter Sessions, and the present case was then stated for the opinion of the Court.

Mr. Denman was heard on behalf of the respondents, and contended that the appellant's objection was not a good one—namely, that he was a servant of the Crown, to whom the stores belonged, and that therefore he was not liable, the Crown being exempt from paying the rate.

The Court, without calling upon the other side, gave judgment for the appellant.

(Before Sir J. P. WILDE.)

BICK V. BICK.

In this case the husband petitioned for a dissolution of marriage on the ground of his wife's adultery.

Dr. Spinks was for the petitioner, there was no appearance on behalf of the respondent.

The petitioner, a merchant of Calcutta, was married to the respondent at that place in May, 1855. They visited this country in 1858, and remained here until 1859, during which time a child was born. After their return to India the respondent complained that the climate was injuring the health of herself and the child, in consequence of which she returned to England with her child in 1861, and lived in London, Liverpool, Gloucester, and other places, and the husband supplied her with ample funds for her support. In 1863 the petitioner returned to England, when he discovered that his wife had been unfaithful to him, being then pregnant, but he was unable to discover who was the father of the child. He accordingly filed the present petition.

The case having been proved,
His Lordship pronounced a decree nisi.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £300,000 in bills on India took place on the 3rd inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were—To Calcutta, £32,500; and to Madras, £12,000. The minimum price was, as before, on Calcutta and Madras, 1s. 11d.; and on Bombay, 1s. 11½d. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras will receive in full. On Bombay all the tenders were below the minimum.

THE MAILS, &c.—SOUTHAMPTON, May 4. —The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Nyanza, Captain Gaby, sailed hence to-day with the mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Ceylon, India (except Bombay), and China. She took out fifty-two first and twenty-four second-class passengers, and on freight a general cargo, and ninety-two boxes of specie, value £22,483. Amongst the passengers are Captains Hendee, O'Neill, and Papillon, Ensign Ruston, Staff Surgeon Blatherwick, Major Moxon, Lieutenants Hall and St. John Barnett.

INDIAN POULTRY AT THE ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—The newly imported species of Indian poultry now on view in the gardens of the Zoological Society have been brought home by Captain H. Fraser from Central India. It is intended that they shall be naturalised in Scotland, crossing them with Dorkings. The collection consists of cocks, hens, and pullets, seventeen in number, soon to be added to. It had hitherto been found extremely difficult to import them in anything like the required condition.

THE CHINESE MUSEUM, CRYSTAL PALACE.—A French museum of Chinese jewellery and articles of vertu has been added to the attractions of the Crystal Palace lately. It is a selection, made by a French officer, from the spoils of the sack of Peking. An extra charge of a shilling is made to view this unique museum.

MILITARY ITEMS.—At his annual official inspection of the troops stationed at Portsmouth on the 29th ult., F.M. the Duke of Cambridge took an opportunity to pay a compliment to a veteran Indian corps—the 52nd Foot—which regiment, his Excellency observed, "had but just returned from India, but he was very much pleased with their appearance."

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL.—From the report, read by the secretary at the annual meeting, held at St. James's hall on Thursday, the 27th ult., it appears that an expenditure was made by the society during the year, for the support of clergymen, missionaries, and schools in India and the East, of £40,000.

The death of an old Indian officer, Colonel Verner, is announced in the obituaries. In early life Colonel James Edward Verner entered the service of the East India Company, and went through a distinguished military career of thirty-two years.

THE OFFICES of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company and the East India Irrigation and Canal Company have been removed to 8 and 9, Queen-street-place, Southwark-bridge.

SECOND BANKRUPTCY OF COLONEL WILLIAM PETRIE WAUGH.—Colonel Waugh, the well-known director of the London and Eastern Banking Corporation, who recently obtained his certificate, and whose case so frequently came before the Bankruptcy Court, has been again adjudicated bankrupt upon his own petition. Colonel Waugh now describes himself as of No. 17, Gloucester-crescent, Camden-town, agent, a prisoner for debt in Whitecross-street prison. The failure in this instance is attributed to heavy domestic expenses during the fourteen months of Colonel Waugh's incarceration and expenses connected with his bankruptcy. The debts amount to the comparatively moderate sum of £2,400, and it is believed that a portion are not provable.

ASIATIC CORPORATION.—The first ordinary general meeting of the members of the Asiatic Corporation was held May 4th at the bank offices; Mr. F. Boykett in the chair. The report stated that for the half-year for which the accounts were rendered, during which only a portion of the existing branches had been working, the net profit, after deducting all charges on current business, and providing for bad and doubtful debts, was £70,439. 4s. 8d. The following division was recommended:—A dividend at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum, £37,500; a bonus of 10s. per share, equal to 5 per cent. per annum, £12,500, being together equal to 20 per cent. on the paid-up capital on the 31st of December; in liquidation of the whole of preliminary expenses, £8,484; reserve fund, £5,500; and £6,454 to be carried to the credit of the profit and loss account for the current year. The chairman said their profits, deposits, &c., were unparalleled. The report was unanimously adopted. The directors were authorised to make an ad interim dividend, and the retiring directors and auditors were re-elected.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The directors, in their seventh annual report, just issued, present to the shareholders the audited balance-sheet and profit and loss account of the bank for the year ended 31st of December last. After providing for all bad and doubtful debts, and defraying expense of management at all points, the net profit amounts to £126,082. 1s. 1d., to which has to be added a sum of £75,831. 11s. 2d., undivided profit brought forward from the preceding year, making a total of £201,913. 12s. 3d. The Newera Ellia and Tuticorin agencies have been closed, the results not answering expectations, and for a similar reason the Mauritius branch will be closed at the end of the current year.

TEA COMPANY OF CACHAR.—The second meeting of shareholders in the Indian Tea Company of Cachar was held on the 4th inst., under the presidency of Major Thomas Ross. The report stated that, whilst the amount of expenditure was clearly ascertainable, such was not the case as regarded their profits, which at the present moment could not be correctly stated. Assuming, however, that 250 chests of tea, shipped, but not arrived, would fetch prices proportionate to the 452 chests already sold, there would be an available balance of £1,614. 0s. 3d., which, with the £2,405. 18s. 4d. divided in November last would give a total profit for the year of £4,019. 18s. 7d., or fully 6 per cent. upon the paid-up capital. But the vendors of the estate having guaranteed 8 per cent. for the first two years the directors proposed to declare that dividend—any deficiency after the sale of the teas to be deducted from the purchase money. Mr. Smith, a director, gave a description of a visit he had paid to the property and the condition of the estates, which he described as satisfactory. The report was adopted.

THE EAST INDIA FINANCIAL ASSOCIATION (LIMITED).—The first ordinary general meeting of shareholders in the East India Financial Association (Limited) was held on the 29th ult., at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street; Mr. Lewis Balfour in the chair. The report stated that the operations of the company in India extended over a period of eight months only at Bombay, and only seven months at Calcutta, so that the company was not able to do more than meet all charges up to the middle of November last, since which date the whole of the profits had been made. The accounts submitted showed a net profit of £9,716. 1s. 3d., out of which the directors recommend an interim dividend of 7s. per share, free of income-tax, the payment of which would absorb £7,000, leaving a balance of £2,716. 1s. 3d. to be carried forward. The report was adopted unanimously.

THE INDIAN MISSIONS.—With regard to Indian Missions, it is confessed in the last report of the Church Missionary Society that "calculations, geographical and otherwise, which have been entered into to show that reckoning by human probabilities the work of Evangelising India by European agency must be utterly hopeless." This society has withdrawn from a number of missionary stations established in India.

DESCRIPTION OF CALCUTTA.—A Saturday Review article on "Calcutta" describes "the heap of showy houses and mud-huts which is called the City of Palaces," in no complimentary terms. The article takes the sanitary point of view; it makes known that "the very best of the English streets reek with poisonous gases in the hot weather." The contribution has the hall-mark of a writer personally acquainted with the place described.

THE NATIVE MIND IN INDIA.—The Hon. Arthur and Mrs. Kinnaird assembled a numerous party of the friends of Indian missions, at their residence, 2, Pall-mall East, on Tuesday evening, the 2nd inst., at which several native gentlemen were present, who addressed the meeting. They were introduced by Mr. Kinnaird, who alluded to the operations of a very useful committee which has been established in London for collecting information bearing on the social, moral, and material welfare of the people of India. The Rev. J. Ling (of the Nil Durpan case) followed, and set forth the wide openings for "unpaid female agency in India." He ably urged the importance of this department of missionary work. Mr. Thomas, formerly of Madras, gave encouraging details as to the progress of the native mind in South India. Dr. Davis made a forcible reply to some observations from Mr. Manomahar Ghore, a Hindoo student, in disparagement of Christian effort in India.

APPOINTMENTS—Foreign-office, March 31.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Sir Edmund Hornby, Knight, late Judge of the Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople, to be Judge of the Supreme Court for China and Japan. The Queen has also appointed Charles Wycliffe Goodwin, Esq., to be Assistant Judge of the Supreme Court for China and Japan, and John Fraser, Esq., to be Law Secretary and Registrar of the Supreme Court for China and Japan.

MAITLAND v. THE CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA.—An injunction has been obtained in the Vice-Chancellor's Court to restrain the circulation of certain bills of exchange now in the possession of the agent of the Bank in Hong Kong, which had been substituted for certain ship's papers which formed the security to the Bank for some heavy advances made by them to a member of the firm of Fletcher and Co.

THE CLERKS in the employment of the P. and O. Company have petitioned Parliament that the British Museum may be opened three evenings in the week.

FIRST REPORT OF THE COURT OF DIRECTORS TO THE SHAREHOLDERS.

The Court of Directors, in presenting their First Report and Balance-sheet, have great pleasure in congratulating their co-proprietors upon the position attained by the Bank during the brief period that has elapsed since the commencement of its operations.

The half-year for which the accounts are now rendered, and during which period a portion only of the existing branches of the Bank have been working, represents not only the least favourable season of the year in India, but has also been characterised by a severe monetary crisis in this country, which has necessitated the exercise of the utmost caution in conducting the business of the Bank, and a consequent restriction of its operations.

Notwithstanding these drawbacks, the net profits, after deducting all charges upon the current business of the Bank, and fully providing for all bad and doubtful debts, amount to £70,439. 4s. 8d.

This sum the Directors propose to distribute in the following manner, viz.:

£37,500 0 0 by a Dividend at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum.

£12,500 0 0 by a Bonus of 10s. per Share, equal to 5 per cent. per annum, being together equal to 20 per cent. per annum on the paid-up Capital on 31st December, to be paid to the proprietors free of income-tax.

£3,484 11 11 in liquidation of the whole of the Preliminary Expenses.

£5,500 0 0 to be added to the Reserve Fund, which, with the Premiums arising from the recent issue of New Shares, will then amount on 30th June next to £175,000; and the balance, say—

£6,454 12 9 they propose to carry to the credit of the Profit and Loss Account for the current year.

The Directors have further the pleasure to congratulate the Shareholders upon the successful issue of the New Shares, both here and in India, which were all promptly taken up upon the terms specified in the Circular addressed at the time to the Original Proprietors, the additional Capital, though not required by any exigencies of the Bank, was deemed desirable to place it upon a footing suitable to its increasing business.

The Directors, whose term of office has now expired, being eligible for re-election, offer themselves accordingly, and they recommend the re-election of the present able professional Auditors, and the election, in addition, of a non-professional Auditor for the current year.

The Directors also recommend the Shareholders to authorise them to declare and pay such an interim Dividend half-yearly, for the current and future years, as they may deem desirable, pending the final adjustment of the accounts.

F. BOYKETT, Chairman.

FIRST REPORT OF THE COURT OF DIRECTORS TO THE SHAREHOLDERS.

The Court of Directors, in presenting their First Report and Balance-sheet, have great pleasure in congratulating their co-proprietors upon the position attained by the Bank during the brief period that has elapsed since the commencement of its operations.

The half-year for which the accounts are now rendered, and during which period a portion only of the existing branches of the Bank have been working, represents not only the least favourable season of the year in India, but has also been characterised by a severe monetary crisis in this country, which has necessitated the exercise of the utmost caution in conducting the business of the Bank, and a consequent restriction of its operations.

Notwithstanding these drawbacks, the net profits, after deducting all charges upon the current business of the Bank, and fully providing for all bad and doubtful debts, amount to £70,439. 4s. 8d.

This sum the Directors propose to distribute in the following manner, viz. —

£27,500 0 0 by a Dividend at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum.
£19,500 0 0 by a Bonus of 10s. per Share, equal to 5 per cent. per annum, being together equal to 20 per cent. per annum on the paid-up Capital on 31st December, to be paid to the proprietors free of income-tax.
£3,484 11 11 in liquidation of the whole of the Preliminary Expenses.
£2,500 0 0 to be added to the Reserve Fund, which, with the Premiums arising from the recent issue of New Shares, will then amount on 30th June next to £175,000; and the Balance, say—
£6,454 13 9 they propose to carry to the credit of the Profit and Loss Account for the current year.

The Directors have further the pleasure to congratulate the Shareholders upon the successful issue of the New Shares, both here and in India, which were all promptly taken up upon the terms specified in the Circular addressed at the time to the Original Proprietors, the additional Capital, though not required by any exigencies of the Bank, was deemed desirable to place it upon a footing suitable to its increasing business.

The Directors, whose term of office has now expired, being eligible for re-election, offer themselves accordingly, and they recommend the re-election of the present able professional Auditors, and the election, in addition, of a non-professional Auditor for the current year.

The Directors also recommend the Shareholders to authorise them to declare and pay such an interim Dividend half-yearly, for the current and future years, as they may deem desirable, pending the final adjustment of the accounts.

F. BOYKETT, Chairman.

FIRST REPORT OF THE COURT OF DIRECTORS TO THE SHAREHOLDERS.

The Court of Directors, in presenting their First Report and Balance-sheet, have great pleasure in congratulating their co-proprietors upon the position attained by the Bank during the brief period that has elapsed since the commencement of its operations.

The half-year for which the accounts are now rendered, and during which period a portion only of the existing branches of the Bank have been working, represents not only the least favourable season of the year in India, but has also been characterised by a severe monetary crisis in this country, which has necessitated the exercise of the utmost caution in conducting the business of the Bank, and a consequent restriction of its operations.

Notwithstanding these drawbacks, the net profits, after deducting all charges upon the current business of the Bank, and fully providing for all bad and doubtful debts, amount to £70,439. 4s. 8d.

This sum the Directors propose to distribute in the following manner, viz.:

£37,500 0 0 by a Dividend at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum.

£12,500 0 0 by a Bonus of 10s. per Share, equal to 5 per cent. per annum, being together equal to 20 per cent. per annum on the paid-up Capital on 31st December, to be paid to the proprietors free of income-tax.

£8,484 11 11 in liquidation of the whole of the Preliminary Expenses.

£5,500 0 0 to be added to the Reserve Fund, which, with the Premiums arising from the recent issue of New Shares, will then amount on 30th June next to £175,000; and the balance, say—

£6,454 13 9 they propose to carry to the credit of the Profit and Loss Account for the current year.

The Directors have further the pleasure to congratulate the Shareholders upon the successful issue of the New Shares, both here and in India, which were all promptly taken up upon the terms specified in the Circular addressed at the time to the Original Proprietors, the additional Capital, though not required by any exigencies of the Bank, was deemed desirable to place it upon a footing suitable to its increasing business.

The Directors, whose term of office has now expired, being eligible for re-election, offer themselves accordingly, and they recommend the re-election of the present able professional Auditors, and the election, in addition, of a non-professional Auditor for the current year.

The Directors also recommend the Shareholders to authorise them to declare and pay such an interim Dividend half-yearly, for the current and future years, as they may deem desirable, pending the final adjustment of the accounts.

EXPANDING SADDLE.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Liniment of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co., 270, Regent-street London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.

This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as effluvia, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

REMOVED TO ABOVE ADDRESS FROM 210, REGENT-STREET, W.

Earl Russell sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.

Mr. TOWLE. Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

(Signed) GEORGE ALLEN, Chief Officer.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided: a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d. postage, 1s. 10d.

It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Persons who feel weak, low, and nervous, may rest assured some serious ailment is looming in the distance, against which instant action should be taken. Holloway's Pills present the ready means of exciting energetic action on the liver, liberating accumulated bile, and lifting at once a load from the spirits, and expelling a poison from the body. This simple and natural method of remedying the first tendency to disease gives present ease and insures future safety. The pallid and all those who are losing flesh should try these Pills, which are especially useful when the digestive or other functions are imperfectly performed and demand immediate correction, or in after-years neither mind nor body will be well developed.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 10th of April, being three days later than the last arrival via Bombay; from Madras to the 14th, and Ceylon to the 17th of the same month.

At Calcutta Sir C. Trevelyan's Budget and the war in Bhootan, still shared the honour of engrossing public attention. A deputation from the Chamber of Commerce, headed by Mr. Bullen, had waited upon the Governor-General on the morning of the departure of the mail, with the memorial agreed to by that body on the subject of the export duties. Sir John Lawrence, who had evidently not the remotest idea of interference from Sir Charles Wood, gave the deputation no hopes of relief; and he very frankly declared that if the income-tax was to be given up he did not see where the revenue was to come from without recourse to aid of the kind. Mr. Bullen and his friends were of course respectfully disappointed, and until they get the good news will be as hopeless as Sir John Lawrence himself. In the meantime the unpopular feature in the Budget was receiving rough treatment from the press, and the character of Sir Charles Trevelyan as a financier was experiencing what they call in commercial intelligence "a steady decline." A little attempt at a rally was made on the ground of his personal merits, but it was of a fluctuating nature, and showed no signs of steadiness up to the latest date. In the market of public opinion, in fact, Sir Charles stands very low just now; nor is there any hope that his position will be made more cheering by his official reception in this country. He is better off, however, than Mr. Massey, who has all his troubles to come, and who—were he not paid what Mr. Disraeli calls "a fabulous salary" by way of consolation—would deserve the sincere pity of the public. Condemned from the beginning in Calcutta and Bombay, the obnoxious export duties found, for a time at least, indulgence in Madras. But this was only while the news remained in a telegraphic state. On the particulars being known, the local Athenæum and Daily News was fairly surprised out of all toleration, and avowed that it looked upon the prospects of Indian finance with dismay. Thus, even in his old official home, where, in his quarrel concerning the income-tax he received the warmest support, poor Sir Charles can scarcely find a friend.

The only certain conclusion suggested by the Bhootan war is—that it is not peace. Nor, indeed, does there seem to be any prospect of pacification so long as the War Penlow continues to keep the upper hand over the Peace Penlow, as he has done throughout this unpleasant business. The conduct of the campaign, in the meantime, may well be embarrassing to the Government. It is easy enough to keep the force advancing, and to take place after place from the enemy, though even this is not such plain sailing, since sickness has set in among our troops, and the enemy have been found to fight. The difficulty is to know what to do with our successes, for holding the entire country would be very unprofitable work indeed. We suspect that the boldest policy is the safest in this as in so many other cases, and that a vigorous dash upon the capital and a little ruthless spoliation would be found easier, more economical, and more humane, than the present dilatory and distracting operations.

In Calcutta the temperature is said to be more depressing even than is usual at the season—a very trying one always for Europeans. The sanitary condition of the city, however, is a little better, epidemics being on the decline in the town and suburbs. The weather had not been made cooler by rumours of disturbances among the tribes near Peshawar, of which, however, there was no positive confirmation.

If it be true that the most prosperous periods in the life of nations are when they contribute nothing to history, Madras ought to be the most envied of the three Presidencies. It has about its fair proportion of newspapers, full of long and elaborate articles—written, too, with more than the usual colonial degree of care—but almost barren of news. This mail there seems to be more than usual, but that is little enough. One of the most important paragraphs perhaps is one which we have not quoted—to the effect that the management of the new "People's Park," are sending home by the next steamer a pair of tiger cubs, in exchange for a pair of lion cubs which they owe to the delicate attention of Dr. Mudge, of the India-office, who is said to be actively engaged in promoting the interests of the park in question.

The weather at Colombo is described as highly favourable to the preparation and and despatch of the staple production. At length there is an increase over previous years in the total exported, but only in consequence of the large quantity of native pushed forward. The new Governor, Sir

Hercules Robinson, whose arrival was announced by last mail, had assumed office, and held a levee, and the papers were busy telling him what to do, and speculating upon the chances of his being liked.

The half-yearly report of the directors of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway, to be submitted to the meeting on the 19th, announces the opening for traffic of a further portion of the Nagpore line, viz., thirty-two and three-quarter miles, from Mulkapore to Shegaum, and the satisfactory progress of the other uncompleted lines. The net profit of the half-year, carried to the credit of the company's interest account with the Government, is £83,713. 12s. 5d., against £58,697. 8s. 10d., in the corresponding half of the previous year.

"The Central India Cotton Spinning and Weaving Company" is a new undertaking of excellent promise. It proposes to establish spinning and weaving machinery in the great cotton field of Central India, and by means of operations on the spot, to save the cost of the carriage of the raw material to England and its return in a manufactured state. The enterprise is one which, if properly managed, can scarcely fail to be profitable, and that it will have every advantage in this respect the names of the directors give sufficient assurance.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay mail, due on the 21st via Marseilles, and on the 25th via Southampton.

THE REVOLUTION IN CENTRAL ASIA.

CASHMERE, Feb. 20.—The winter has now stopped all comers and goers, with the exception of an occasional instance of Cossids and such like, by either the Cabul, Budukshan or Ladak and Yarkand roads. Only here and there is even a whisper to be heard. However, I now give you the purport of those rumours which have lately reached my ears.

A Cashmeere merchant, at present at Yarkand, has written to say that it is only a chance whether he will ever again see Cashmere. The Thoonganeey or Tungusians, by the assistance of the Andejanee Khojahs, have turned out or killed all the Chinese authorities at Kashgar, Yarkand, Koten or Khathai, Illi, Akon, Thurfan, &c., and the whole country is in a state of confusion consequent on the change of government. The Emperor of China, on being applied to, has replied that no assistance can be sent for six months more—especially as this movement has been supposed by the Emperor to have been got up by the dispersed chiefs of the rebellion in China proper (the Taiping chiefs, I suppose), instigated by the intriguing Khojahs of Andejan. But in the midst of all this turmoil in those parts, the Russian agents, as Soudagurs or merchants, are said to be travelling about the country freely, and in great state and security, holding conferences with all the rebel Toonganees and Khojah chiefs. The Russians, at Illi, Akon, Thurfan and even at Kara Korum, Oorgah and Kyathka, and also from the entire line of range of the Mongolian and Khalkas provinces, are now busy in erecting grand and extensive Lamaserais, or Lama houses of worship, which are to accommodate large numbers of Lamas, whom they engage to protect by a suitable force of Mongols and Khalkass. The Kara Korum here referred to is not the range so called, but the Mongolian and Khalkass town and province usually termed Genghis Khanee or Zhyhenghree Kara Kooru, that being supposed to be Genghis Khan's birth-place. It lies S.W. of Oorga and of Kijathka or Kyathkah. Several of the Lama houses have already been erected, and the former ones enlarged, as at Oorgah, Kara Korum, Koko Nor and Tolo Nor, in which they say that now from 10,000 to 20,000 Lamas reside under Russian protection, but all those Lamaserais are said to be obliged by their protectors to pay the utmost reverence and submission to the great Lama of Lass (Lassa). All those new Lamaserais and Lamas are termed Roose Lama, and are said to be continued down in different directions and on the different roads, from the Khal Kass and Mongolian ranges (already Russian Provinces) by Koko Nor, Tolo Nor, Kara Korum, &c., to within 10 or 15 Cossid stages of Lassa. One of those large Lama houses is said to be within 3 or 4 stages of the Khylop ranges which bound the north of the Manuthelai or Mansarover lakes.

As for Kokan, Toorkistan, and Cabul matters, it is now said that the Russians have so re-installed the King of Kokan, that he now feels more pleased and easy in his situation than before, being free from the former continued dread of Bokhara. The great man, the Saihaibaani-Roos Kaubaan, Thoornceff Saihaib Buhadoor, is said to have crowned him with his own hand, on which there was a grand salute of a hundred-and-one-guns. The great Sultan-i-Roos (Emperor of Russia) has ordered that throughout the whole country of Kokan, Andejan, Khaarazon, &c., no revenue or tax of any kind is to be levied for the term of three years. The Khirghis capitation tax, is done away with, mosques and places of worship are to be built, and all male slaves are to be purchased and released by the Sultan-i-Roos, and enrolled in his service as free soldiers. It is believed that the great and beneficent Sultan-i-Roos has become the defender and protection of the faith and the faithful, and that Andejan is ordered to be revered as the Mecca of the Far East—the holy and auspicious birthplace of the sanctified Imam Mendee. The Saihaibaani-Roos, at Kokan and at Bokhara, have sent orders to all the chiefs of Toorkistan, dependent and independent, to send both to Kokan and Bokhara a true and accurate statement of all their troops, horse and foot; and those worthies, thinking that they will be highly rewarded for their services, have submitted statements of double the amount of troops and followers which they actually have. Thus it is said that the Budukshan man, who has lately revolted from Koonduz and gone over to the King of Bokhara, has rendered a statement of 15,000, whereas 10,000 is the most he could collect. At the present time he has 3,000 horse, with about the same number of foot soldiers, intended for the aid of Abdulruhman Khan (Afzul Khan's son). The whole of Toorkistan is said to be in waiting for Nouroze, a festival in about a month hence, and the breaking up of winter, to take lower Toorkistan south of the Oxus, and place Abdulruhman Khan, now son-in-law to the King of Bokhara, on the throne of Balk and Koonduz.

Shere Ali, at Cabul, seems to be going from bad to worse. He has imprisoned three more of his paternal brothers, Uzhim Khan, Hosein Khan and Hoossun Khan, and in the midst of the deep intrigue by which he now seems to see himself surrounded, he is said to be quite bewildered and does not know really what to do. All the Chiefs and Sirdars of Cabul, with the troops, are said to be in secret league against him, and every one says that both he and his son will be very lucky if they get out of the matter with their lives. His younger son Ibrahim Khan is so angry with both his father and his elder brother Mamood Allee Khan, that he is ready to murder both. But this younger son, Ibrahim Khan, is said to be put up to all this enmity, and is considered a very useful tool in the hands of the other great but as yet secret conspirators. Most of the influential and rich merchants under different pretexts have left Cabul, being in dread of Shere Ali robbing and imprisoning them, as he is said to be in great want of money to go and take Candahar from Mamood Ameen Khan, Shureeff Khan, and other Sirdars there. The Saihaibaani-Roos, at Kokan, it is said, has sent down an Eilchee or envoy to Cabul, to ask in a definite manner whether the Ameer will release Afzul Khan or not; but to this matter the Canbulees attach another meaning. They say that Shere Ali, seeing himself surrounded by secret enemies and difficulties on all sides, and disgusted or angry with the refusal of the British Government either to lend him money on interest or give him muskets as he requested; and also seeing how Sirdar Ameen Khan's son was allowed to go from Rawul Pindoe to Kohat, and with what is supposed by the Ameer, and throughout all Afghanistan, as being British gold and British means, has been enabled to raise a large body of troops south of Ghuznee, by which he is said now to be raising the whole country, to the great annoyance and detriment of the Ameer. It is said that the Ameer, considering all this, has resolved to escape the difficulty by altogether reversing his policy, again making friends with all his brethren, releasing Afzul Khan, and joining heart and soul with Bokhara, Persia, and Russia in all their views, schemes and intrigues. For this purpose he has himself requested the Saihaibaani-Roos at Kokan to send down the Eilchee that is at present said to have arrived at Cabul in order that he, the Ameer, may confer with him and settle matters, as he thinks in a peaceful way. —Friend of India.

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

Mr. Temple's Report on the Administration of the Central Provinces is, as usual, distinguished from the average of blue-books in both the manner and the matter. The most noticeable feature in the year's social history is the rapid rise in the price of all articles, whether the necessities of life or of luxuries. Wages of all descriptions of labour have shown a similar increase. What is more, the spirit and industry of the people have been awakened; and we are told that "the struggle for subsistence, for position, for fortune, is becoming more and more vigorous with all classes, whether European or native, whether gentry or the middle classes, or the yeomen, or the husbandman, or the poor." The rise in the price of food is chiefly attributed to the increased cultivation of cotton, much of which is believed to have displaced that of cereals. At the same time, there has been increased importation of grain. The Nerbudda Valley has been, from the earliest times, celebrated as one of the granaries of India. The poor were employed, in large numbers, upon public works; and lately, employment has been so abundant that labour, for any important purposes, is hardly procurable. Thousands of the non-labouring classes emigrated, during the year, to Chutteesgurh. With reference to the distribution of the wealth accruing from these increased prices of cotton and agricultural products in general, Mr. Temple observes—

"Much of the wealth thus arising doubtless accrues to traders, middlemen, and the like. Still, much of it is really enjoyed by the agricultural classes. And this share, again, is practically well distributed between the landlord and the ryot. If there be any difference at all, it is in favour of the ryot. While, on the one hand, he receives much more than he used to receive for his cotton, his grain, and other produce, yet his rent, if raised at all, is not raised proportionately. Previously, there was too much fixity in rent, and there was great difficulty in raising it. This is a defect which is now being remedied. But the fact remains, that while the ryot's income has increased his rent has not generally been raised. It may be safely said that the benefit of the increased value of cotton, grain, and other produce, has really reached the ryot. He is much more independent, and much less indebted to money-lenders than he was. The landlords, too, though their rent-rolls have not been swollen as might have been expected, have still benefited, for most of them have homestead farms under their own culture, the produce of which has brought them enlarged incomes. Many unthrifty landlords have in this way been enabled to clear off their debts."

There are drawbacks, however, to this prosperity; the price of some things has risen enormously. Cattle, for instance, for yoke or draught, have become enormously dear,—a pair that formerly cost fifty rupees fetching now a hundred and fifty, or even two hundred rupees. The demand for cotton causing its exportation, local prices have become extremely high. The weavers of the coarse native fabrics have, consequently, abandoned their looms for more lucrative employment, and the agriculturist has much more to pay for his cloths than formerly. The agriculturists are, nevertheless, making money rapidly; but money is not wealth, and Mr. Temple very pertinently asks, "Is this agricultural prosperity fructifying as it ought? Is the exportation of raw produce giving birth to a return trade, to an interchange of commodities, to new wants, which promote civilisation?" He answers, "I fear not, as yet." The imports, both in Nagpore and Chutteesgurh, have been insignificantly small, compared with the exports, the difference being made up by bullion remittances and cash payments, which they hoard or turn into ornaments. Precisely the same process is going on in the Nagpore and Wurdah districts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AN AUGURY FROM THE CYCLONE.—The Hurkaru says:—"A most singular notion has seized upon the ever-busy fancy of the Ma-hommedans. Not satisfied with drawing portents of the coming of the Imam Mehndee from the Afghan war, the advance of Russia, and the birth of monsters, they have come to the conclusion that the cyclone, so remarkable for its fury and the destruction it has occasioned, also foretells the speedy advent of the 'illustrious stranger.' The mystic year of 1290 has a great deal to answer for in predisposing the minds of Moslems to grasp at anything and everything which can fairly be construed into an omen. Hence they suppose the direction in which all fallen trees seem to point indicates the quarter whence the Star of Islamism will arise. As far as Calcutta is concerned, this would invest China Bazaar with a very remarkable suspicion."

ITEMS FROM BHOOTAN.—From the Bengal Hurkaru, April 10, we have the following:—At the taking of Buxa the troops of the Rajah of Cooch Behar, led by Captain Hidayut Ally, behaved in a very gallant and plucky manner. Their conduct was brought to the notice of the Government, who, to mark its sense of the merits of Captain Hidayut Ally's services, has appointed him assistant to the political agent for Cooch Behar. We learn from Darjeeling that there is every probability of a disturbance taking place between the Bhootas and the Thibetans. The Bhootas are trying to cross over the Thibetan territory of Pek Phari to attack Sikkim. This the latter oppose with vigor. The Dhurm Rajah of Lhasa has collected a strong force to prevent the Bhootas from entering his dominions. Tounsoo Penlow has determined to punish Cheboo Llama, whom he considers as the author of the war with the British. We learn from Darjeeling that the Sikkim Rajah, looking upon the threats of Tounsoo Penlow as a matter not to be despised, and in a great fright lest the Bhootas should advance on Sikkim to carry out their intention of punishing Cheboo Llama, despatched one of his kardars on an embassy to Lhasa. The Sikkim Rajah represented to the Dhurm Raj of Thibet that the Bhootas could only attack his territories by crossing the Thibetan district of Phari, and he therefore entreated the Dhurm Raj to prohibit their advance in this direction. In reply, he has been assured that the Thibetan authorities will not allow the Bhootas to cross any territory belonging to Lhasa, and that the policy of the Thibetan Government is one of non-interference. The Bhootas having involved themselves in a war must fight their own battles, and make the best terms they can. It will be remembered that on previous occasions of a British advance on Bhootan the Dhurm Raj of Lhasa has acted as if the Bhootas were in some way under his protection, and has assumed the office of mediator.

CALCUTTA ON DITS.—We have heard of some disturbances among the hill tribes on the North-west Frontier, but the particulars have not yet come to hand. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor will leave Belvidere on the 17th instant, the day fixed for the departure of the Viceroy and staff. We are glad to learn that her Highness the Secunder Begum of Bhopal has complied with the advice tendered her, and has abolished the prohibitive duties on grain passing through her territories. It is rumoured that the Government of India intends to bring one or two officers of the Engineer Corps from Madras to fill up permanently certain vacancies caused by the recent changes in the Department of Public Works at this Presidency. Her Highness the Secunder Begum of Bhopal we find, in order to perpetuate the dignity of the Star of India conferred on her, has presented her regiments with new colours, having the insignia of the Star of India beautifully worked thereon. We have been given to understand that the Hon. the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal has appointed Doctor J. Fawcus to officiate as Deputy-inspector-general of Jails in the Lower Provinces. The Government of Bengal has sanctioned the erection of a hospital at Assaloo, and a branch one at Longting, in North Cachar, at a cost of Rs. 600, for the reception and treatment of the Kookee tribes suffering from skin disease.—Hurkaru, April 10.

RADICAL CHANGES IN LOCAL LAWS AFFECTING BRITISH-BORN SUBJECTS.—Never, since the Charter of 1833, when the last relics of the East India Company's exclusive system disappeared, have Englishmen in India seen so radical a change in the law which affects them most closely, as in the present year. The Acts of Parliament of 1858 and 1861, which removed the Company and established a new judicial system, did not so nearly concern them. The Indian Rent, Civil Procedure and Penal Code Acts of 1859 left all their national beliefs and traditional customs untouched, except in the one case of the new adultery law. But in this year 1865 some of the most important of their rights, in both Civil and Criminal law, undergo a modification, and, we venture to think, not for the worst in the latter, greatly for the better in the former case. Under the Indian Succession Act, from the close of this year, the legal age of majority in the case of all Christians not otherwise exempt by Government, will be eighteen years. The property of the Englishman who dies without a will, must, in the absence of any valid contract made before marriage, be divided in the proportion of one-third to his widow and two-thirds equally among his surviving children. And the evils of marriage settlements are prevented by the law which gives the wife power over her own property. The High Courts Criminal Jurisdiction Bill was passed into law on Monday. Under it the Englishman who is accused will be tried in the manner which we lately described. The discussion was remarkable for the difference which it brought out between the views of a broad-minded Englishman like Mr. Maine, and those of a doctinaire old Indian like Sir C. Trevelyan. Both agreed, as all agree, in expressing satisfaction that at last a plan has been found for trying European offenders without injustice either to the accused or their native fellow-subjects. But, after the inevitable allusion to Lord W. Bentinck, Sir C. Trevelyan puts it in this form—"The only question was how the protection of the natives could be reconciled with the maintenance of the just and necessary rights of the Europeans"—as though he had been speaking of a time long since past. On the other hand Mr. Maine prevents all possibility of irritation, and directly administers a well-deserved rebuke to his colleague, in these words:—"If there be any fragment of truth at the bottom of these miserable assertions of the inveterate hostility of class to class—assertions which seem to me to create the very feeling which they affect to decry—I should expect them to disappear in the common discharge of a most sacred duty."—Friend of India.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT ON THE HOOGHLY.—The report of the drowning of four Englishmen, including Mr. Bovill, C.S., and Dr. Honegger, while crossing from Samnuggur to Chandernagore, we regret to find is confirmed. Another accident of the same kind is recorded in the Hurkaru of the 10th. It appears that a party of Europeans were crossing the river, near Somnaghur, when they were overtaken by a violent gust of wind, which capsized the boat, and threw the entire party into the river. We fear from the accounts that reach us that the lives of all on board were lost. The only names of the unfortunate gentlemen we have been able to learn are those of Mr. Fisk Williams and Mr. Hughes. Another of the party, we are informed, was a clerk in the house of Messrs. Wattenbach, Heilgers and Co., but we have been unable, up to the time of going to press, to obtain any further particulars.

SPECULATION IN CALCUTTA.—The Englishman says:—New and extensive undertakings are now brought forward, and attract all attention, to the detriment of the older joint-stock companies, and the shares of the latter are neglected. The new joint-stock companies, however, demand so much money in deposit, and the amount of calls for all is so great, that many of the shareholders find it difficult to pay up. For this reason, shares in these companies also are very heavy. Port Cannings are quoted at 3,000 prem., Salt Water Lake Reclamation at 100 and 200 Rs. The new financial bank, the Imperial, has also just been floated, and the shares allotted. The Sunderbuns Reclamation and Land Investment Company has put forward a scheme, on a most gigantic scale, for cultivating the whole Sunderbuns, or the waste lands of the Delta of the Ganges; this company is strongly supported both in Calcutta and Bombay; the shares have not yet been quoted. The direction is composed of the following gentlemen: F. Schiller, Esq., chairman; R. Brown Mackay, Esq., J. M. Hall, Esq., William Grant, Esq., Hy. Reinold, Esq., W. M. Whitney, Esq., F. G. Eldrige, Esq., Hugh Fraser, Esq., Rajah Sutt Shurn Ghosal Bahadur; Baboo Heeralall Seal, Baboo Ram Gopal Ghose, Baboo Degumber Mitter and Dhunjeebhoy Byramjee Mehta, Esq.—Bankers, the National Bank of India, and Secretaries and Treasurers, Messrs. Borrodale, Schiller & Co. The promoters in Bombay are Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart., the Hon. M. Scott, Hon. W. R. Cassels, J. Fleming, Esq., Premchund Roychund, Esq., Byramjee Hormusjee Cama, Esq., and others; and among the names in Calcutta are E. D. Kilburn, Esq., Seth Apar, Esq., H. Knowles, Esq., G. M. Struthers, Esq., W. C. Stuart, Esq., Baboo Samachurn Mullick, and others. The Salt Water Reclamation Company, which came out last week, does not appear to take well, or else the necessity of finding so large a deposit at first is weighing on the market. This company promises more immediate profits than any of the others, but is not so brilliantly supported by the great capitalists.

THE GENTLEMEN OF TIRHOOT (says the Englishman) must, without any flattery, be an uncommonly fine set of fellows. Their hospitality is proverbial, their kindness to strangers is known throughout India, and now they are mentioned in a special official letter, which we have much pleasure in reprinting elsewhere, as having organised, of their own free will, a dashing, well mounted, admirably equipped, and perfectly drilled corps, one hundred and twenty strong, of Mounted Rifles. The praise bestowed upon them is evidently well deserved, and we trust heartily that the corps will go on and prosper, and that such a gallant gentleman as James Forlong will live long to ride at their head.

THE MUNEEPOORIES GIVING TROUBLE.—We read in the Englishman:—The Viceroy has, we understand, thanked Lieutenant Williams, Dr. Nelson, and Messrs. Findlater and Belchambers, for their good conduct in dispersing a party of armed Muneepoories, assembled near Luckhipore. The exiled Rajahs of Muneepoor, now residing in British territory, assembled an armed force of Muneepoories to attack the Rajah of that country. On this occasion the police behaved in a very creditable manner, and held the Muneepoories in check till reinforced by the detachment of the 39th Native Infantry from Silchar.

ANOTHER GIGANTIC JOINT-STOCK COMPANY.—A new company, "The Imperial Finance Company Limited," is about to start here, and at Bombay, under most influential auspices. The capital will be one crore of rupees, in twenty-five thousand shares of four hundred rupees each, the payment on allotment being one hundred rupees per share. Ten thousand shares have been allotted to Calcutta, but applications have, we hear, been received for twenty-five thousand.—Englishman.

A FAILURE IN COTTON.—We noticed the other day how seriously the fall in cotton had affected the native merchants in the North-West; we had heard of one suicide amongst them, a practice not unusual amongst the respectable native merchants who have the same notions of honour as the Frenchman at Marseilles so graphically described by Dumas, who seemed to think that creditors should consider a discharge of a pistol as a sufficient discharge of their claims. The usual mode of committing suicide amongst the natives is poison, or, as they say, swallowing kunee or diamond dust; perhaps the crystals of corrosive sublimate are so elegantly named. But we have to-day heard of another mode of proceeding, an unhappy merchant at Dholpoor gathered a few bales of cotton together, well saturated with saltpetre, and then placing himself on the pile, set the whole on fire.

PROSPECTS IN BHOOTAN.—The Hurkaru contains the following:—There are strange rumours from Bhootan. The negotiations for peace would appear to have been definitively abandoned, the Bhoota peace-party not being sufficiently strong to resist the pressure of the party headed by Toungeoo Penlow. It is said that the Bhootas quite recently murdered three subordinates of the British Government, and that the British captured some Bhootas near Tajeegong, and that these events have led to the breaking off of the overtures on the part of the enemy. The Paro Penlow is the head of the western or peace-party, and the great rival of Toungeoo. His antagonism to the latter would seem to have arisen from circumstances connected with the appointment of the present Deb Rajah. He has, however, lost much influence, and indeed would seem to have incurred the hostility of many of the Kardars or Jungpeens in consequence of his reiterated assertions of the peaceful intentions of the British. He asserted that our troops would not for the future arrest travellers to the plains, that in fact the blockade of the hills would be considerably lightened. The Bhootas, however, complain that he has deceived them, as the runners and traders in pan and siparee have been seized at our outposts, and prevented from proceeding. This measure, they say, is a plain proof that the British have no real intention of concluding peace. It is remarkable that the party which would be most affected by our permanent occupation of the country are the party most in favour of peace, whilst the war-party is composed almost entirely of the men of the Eastern parts of Bhootan, who are absolutely safe from the danger of annexation. . . . The whole plateau of Dewangiri is in the hands of the General, but what will he do with it? This is a question which the public would like to see answered. One thing is certain—having retaken the position, it is a political necessity to hold it. We still, however, abide by our opinion that a substantial peace can only be conquered by an annexation of the south western corner of the country, that is by such an advance of our frontier as shall place us in a position to dictate our own terms to the Bhootan Durbar.

MACHINERY IN ALLIPORE JAIL.—The Lieutenant-governor has sanctioned the introduction of machinery into Allipore Jail, for the preparation of yarn from jute, at a total estimated cost of one lac of rupees. It has been calculated that by this measure a daily profit of Rs. 280 will accrue, which will be equal to a net annual return of Rs. 85,000. The machinery is to be supplied by Messrs. Jessop and Co.—Hurkaru.

THE INDIAN BRANCH RAILWAY, says the Hurkaru, will soon take up their work in Oudh in real earnest. They have a large staff on the spot, and with reference to their operations the Government has appointed three Commissioners to represent its interests and those of the inhabitants—the Deputy-commissioners of Lucknow and Oonao and the chief engineer of Oudh.

BURMAH.—A letter from Rangoon, dated March 14, contains the following:—Our cold season has all passed away, and we are now grilling under a noon day sun at 90 deg. in the shade, and so we must remain till about the middle of May, when our genial monsoon sets in with its usual vigor. At the same time the Rangoon merchants are up to their eyes in work; it is a most glorious sight to see our harbour so full of shipping and most of them first-class ships. The strand, by permission, is literally piled along the river's bank some thirty feet high, with bags of rice, catch, &c., &c.; most of this is for the Straits, China, Batavia, and Siam, a very small modicum going this year to England. At this time, even with the rumours of peace in America floating about, one or two firms are heavily engaged in cotton transactions; the majority, however, fight shy of it. There have been, on an average for the past six weeks, no less than eighty ships in harbour; they arrive as fast as others are loaded. Even the pilot service has broken down, and the master attendant advertises for six more candidates to pass as pilots; the present club are making a fortune by pilotage, and I am told at the present there are some thirty vessels outside waiting for pilots. Some captains risk coming up to town themselves when light. Colonel Phayre has returned from Calcutta—what transpired there between himself and the G. G. nobody knows. The chief commissioner went away just as the exhibition was about being opened, so he lost the sight of his secretary; Major Davies became his locum tenens, however, and the show has been pronounced a success. There were but very few Burmese exhibitors, which was rather unfortunate.

RAILWAY WORKS IN THE NORTH-WEST.—We (Hurkaru) have been informed that the Government of the North-Western Provinces has authorised the construction of several railway feeders and branch roads in the Bunderkund Division to promote the interests of commerce, and for the convenience of the people. The Lieut.-governor has solicited sanction of the Supreme Government to the employment for two years of an Executive Engineer on a salary of Rs. 1,200 per mensem, with subordinate assistants to inspect those roads now under construction in Ferozepore, Durbhangah, Mynpooree, &c., in connection with the main line of railway in that part of the country.

AN EXPENSIVE MARRIAGE.—We (Hurkaru) hear from Lahore that the marriage ceremonies of the young Maharajah of Putilallah have at last come to an end. It is said that the tumasha cost his Highness the very pretty little sum of fifty lakhs, or half a million sterling. Of course, we must not look forward to the success of our crusade against infanticide whilst we have such examples of extravagance as this has been set the people by their rulers. It is idle, of course, to blame the boy Rajah, but not so his Durbar. A heavy outlay would, of course, afford these men some very handsome pickings. We certainly think, however, that the influence of the British authorities might have been very properly exercised in this instance to reduce the expenses attending "marriages in high life" amongst the natives.

STORM IN THE HOOGHLY.—The Hurkaru of April 10 says:—"The storm of Monday evening, it appears, raged with great fury along the course of the river in the Hooghly district. The wind was very strong, and the storm was accompanied by an unusually heavy fall of hail. The villages have suffered in their crops especially. Many houses have been blown down, and many more damaged, whilst a large number of cattle are said to have perished in the hail storm."

THE MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH INDIAN ASSOCIATION have presented Sir Charles Trevelyan with a farewell address.

NATIVE LADIES IN EXILE.—We learn that the Begum Huzrut Mehal and her son Brijis Kudr, now in Nepal, have given up their intention of returning to the British territories. The great stumbling-block to the former arrangement would appear to be the suspicion entertained by the Begum and her son that they would be kept under more than surveillance. They have an unextinguishable suspicion of the motives of the Government, and do not understand that it really matters very little whether they join the Garden Reach family or not. From Nepal also there is a rumour that the stepmother of Nana Rao would like to return to the British dominions. It is said she has forwarded a petition to Government, in which she expresses her wish to return and end her days at the holy shrine of Benares, provided only the Government will not place her under surveillance. She asks for no allowances, having, as she says, ample funds of her own. The British Government does not make war upon women, and the refugees in Nepal have long ceased to be a source of anxiety to the Supreme Government. But although we would have these exiled ladies treated with respect and kindness, it would be a very great pity to shut our eyes to the fact that if allowed perfect freedom of action they would soon gather round them a little circle of busy intriguers, if not worse. The step-mother of Nana Rao, whether with or without her consent, would be a means of intercommunication of no slight importance in the eyes of those who persist in looking to the hills for a deliverer, or the head of a great conspiracy against our rule. If the ladies of the Nana's family wish to return to Benares, they might be told they can do so, but that they must submit to such a surveillance as shall defeat the aims of the disaffected, without needlessly interfering with their comfort or privacy.

MYNAGOREE.—A correspondent in Bhootan sends us the following, dated 19th ult.:—There are two routes from Mynagoree to Julpigoree—one by the bridge of boats over the Teesta at Palharpoore, and thence by the out-post of Domohani, around or rather along the two sides of an acute-angled triangle, a journey of some ten or twelve miles. The other route is by a ferry opposite Mr. Stewart's house at Julpigoree, and thence north-east to Mynagoree. For a great part of the way the road is a good country track, which may yet be made the foundation of a really good road. The rest of the way is across fields and ditches. The smoothing of the road—now called the road to Julpigoree via Dingreehat—is completed. Small pieces of bamboo have been stuck up at all places where a false turn might be made. There is a good direct road passable by carts between Mynagoree and the left bank of the Teesta. A tiger, which was the terror of the inhabitants of Mynagoree, has met with his quietus at the hands of the Deputy Commissioner. The road-making operations did not seriously interrupt the cultivation of the peasantry. Dingreehat is a village about four miles from Mynagoree, at which a large market is held twice a week. About 2,000 people assemble there; the staples are rice, and other kinds of grain, cotton, jute, vegetables, fish and country cloth. The Mynagoreeans nearly all speak a dialect of Bengali, different somewhat to that of their neighbours, but yet easily understood after a little practice at it. The villages are called baris. The people have no idea of the measurement or quantity of land, and estimate their holdings by ploughs, and a jote is described as an ath hull jote or a dus hull jote, as the case may be. Their tenure is one on a varying rental. The rents are low, as a general rule, as may be supposed when it is remembered what kind of a country they are levied in, and seem fixed on some very arbitrary principle, if indeed they are fixed on any principle at all. As regards the Bhootea rule, they seem to have been passively acquiescent. The regular payments demanded were not grievous, and as regards oppression and plunder, one man said that the chances were it would not be his village which was plundered, leaving a very unchristian ergo to be supplied, namely, that it did not matter to him whether his neighbour's village was looted or not. The immediate neighbourhood of Mynagoree is said to be healthy. The people are also well to do, both men and women being better fed and better clad than their neighbours in many of the districts of Lower Bengal.—Bengal Hurkaru.

WHAT TO DO WITH DEWANGIRI.—Letters from Assam state that the difference between Colonel Hopkinson and the military is a subject of some remark. The commissioner, it would seem, advocates very much the same views in regard to Dewangiri as those which have found a place in the columns of the Hurkaru. We are glad to find that those upon the spot, whose position enables them to judge of the actual facts of the case, have come to the same conclusions with ourselves. It shows that our opinions are correct. Dewangiri should be given up this season, as irrespective of any question of policy, health, &c., the demands of the expedition for labourers and carriage are more than the districts contiguous to its line of march can possibly supply. Their resources are already crippled, and the arrival and movements of the European infantry and artillery will simply exhaust them. To give our readers some idea of the immense and extraordinary demand for men which has suddenly sprung up, we may mention that it is reported 220 or 230 men were required to grind flour only for the 29th Punjab Infantry. It must be borne in mind, moreover, that roads have to be made, barracks and huts built, and a general transport service organised in addition to such demands as that given above. The Government should call upon the chief civil and military officers for a report of the present state of the resources of the expedition. We believe it would be found that it is actually unable to make the advance so obstinately persisted in, at the very worst season of the year.—Hurkaru.

THE EXPORT DUTIES.—DEPUTATION FROM THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The deputation headed by Mr. Bullen, President of the Chamber of Commerce, on the subject of the export duties, waited on Sir John Lawrence this day (April 10) at noon. They represented that the articles taken could not bear the duties now laid upon them. It was stated that the average export of silk had fallen off from 13,158 cwt. to 12,507 cwt., and that silk now conducted at a loss; that sugar which in 1852-4 averaged an export of 38,355 tons has averaged only 13,136 tons; that hides have fallen from 36,87,845 to 30,86,867 pieces, and that jute has experienced a very heavy fall in price. Under these circumstances it was represented that the trade of the country was unable to bear an increase in the export duties, which would not have been necessary had the opium average not been placed so low as eight hundred and fifty rupees per chest. The Viceroy, in reply, said that he could hold out no hope of the duties now imposed being taken off. It was very difficult to see how the revenue was to be raised if we are to give up our income-tax and have no export duties. That opium was very uncertain, no man being able to calculate within a million or a million and a half sterling what the yield would be. We have to face an increased expenditure every year, improved government and extra outlay being synonymous, and really he did not see where the increased revenue was to come from. He would, however, lay the matter before the Council, and would do whatever he could in fairness to meet the wishes of the deputation.

THE SUCCESSION AND INHERITANCE (PARSEES) BILL has been passed by the Legislative Council. The Hon. Mr. Anderson stated that the object of the Bill is to relieve the Parsees from the operation of that portion of the Indian Succession Act of 1865 which related to intestate property, and to state the provisions by which partition of such property should be regulated for that community. The Bill, then, as it now stands, has two prominent features. Firstly, it exempts the Parsees from the provisions of the Indian Succession Act relative to intestate property; secondly, it provides that the share of daughters in relation to such property shall be equal to one-fourth of the share of sons. The Indian Succession Act provides that daughters shall succeed equally with sons to intestate property. A large number of Parsees, principally residing in the Mofussil, consider that daughters should have no share at all, or at most only a minute fraction. The great majority of the Parsee community, and especially of those residing in Bombay, consider that the course proposed in the present Bill should be followed. That course, it will be observed, is a via media between the two extremes just stated.

THE SETTLEMENT OF SINDE.—The India Government directed the Government of Bombay to follow in the settlement of the province of Sindh the plan in force in Bengal. In reply Sir Bartle Frere pointed out that the operation of two such widely differing systems side by side would produce endless confusion and trouble, and that it would be better under all the circumstances of the case to follow the principles of the Bombay settlement. Sir Bartle's common sense view of the matter has had its proper effect, the Supreme Government having decided not to press the matter.—Hurkaru, April 10.

STRAWBERRIES IN CALCUTTA.—We have not seen it noticed before that we owe to Mr. William Taylor, of Patna, the introduction of strawberries to the Calcutta residents. He has taken advantage of the railway to send the produce of his garden to this city, and we shall, ere long, have grapes from the same quarter. This example should stimulate gardeners all along the lines of railway, and fruits in a condition unknown to Calcutta, heretofore, will be sent to us, paying the producers handsomely, and adding to the few luxuries we now possess.—Englishman.

HOSTILE CHIEFS.—We have heard of disturbances in Tipperah between the Rajahs, whose contention was so recently a nine days' wonder in the Calcutta High Court. The defeated chieftain intends to try the justice of the sword, having failed at law, and is making preparations to seat himself on the gudgeon by force of arms. The authorities, as recent events would show, are thoroughly on the alert, and have despatched a strong police force to keep the peace.

MAJOR IMPEY.—The Hurkaru has heard that in connection with the appointments in Rajpootana, Major E. C. Impey has been appointed agent at Jodhpore. Colonel Seymour Blane will revert to his old appointment as military secretary to the Viceroy. A better appointment than that of Major Impey could not have been made. Few officers know Central India and its politics better than he does.—Hurkaru.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MHOW SCANDAL.—A letter from Mhow, dated April 2nd, and addressed to the Madras Athenæum, gives some further particulars of the affair in the 15th N. I. A few weeks ago, on the 11th January last, the Mhow force was ordered out for brigade exercise to a village called Hussora, a few miles distant from camp. Whilst the troops were advancing in line, a gallant commandant of an equally gallant native Infantry corps, determining that although there was no glory to be gained, the parade should not pass without bloodshed, suddenly made a violent charge from the rear on a wretched sepoy, and for some imaginary fault, first cut him over the shoulder with his sword, and then, to the astonishment of Ram Buxus, also gave him the point in the back, saying at the same time that he wished his sword was sharp enough to cut the unfortunate man in two; also using a word which, I fear, if written would shock your readers. On the return of the troops to camp, the man who had been so hardly used was obliged to go into hospital from the effects of the wound received from the point of his commanding officer's sword. On another occasion, the 25th of January, when the brigade was out for the same purpose as on the 4th, the commandant was not inclined to let well alone. A captain in the corps, who was in the act of dressing coverers for some formation, took some time in getting them into a proper line; and the commandant, instead of remonstrating with him quietly, rode up and used the most intemperate and violent language towards him, so that he was overheard by several officers of another regiment that was on the right. A few days after, this officer applied (being only attached and not belonging to the corps) to be transferred to the other Native Infantry regiment quartered in Mhow, for reasons which he said he did not wish to give publicly, unless he was actually forced to state; that he had several times previously witnessed his commanding officer's intemperate conduct, and especially on two late occasions, which had become a common subject of station gossip, and in one of which he was the sufferer. The commandant, when he found the cutting and stabbing of the sepoy was coming against him, pretended entire ignorance of the whole affair,—was, of course, astonished to hear that such a story was the common subject of conversation in camp, and wondered with exceeding wonder how he had not heard anything of such a gross fabrication. He therefore despatched his adjutant immediately to suspend the captain. The matter, I understand, went on to the brigade authorities, and the officer commanding the station (the general being absent on a tour of inspection) ordered the captain to withdraw his statements and apologise to the commandant; but that officer not feeling inclined to acknowledge himself a perverter of the truth, respectfully declined to comply, for which he was ordered under arrest. After having been suspended about three weeks, a Court of Inquiry assembled to investigate the case, and after having heard some evidence, all of which, I may say, was in favour of the junior officer, it adjourned on account of some of the witnesses, officers in a distinguished Highland corps, being absent, their regiment having left Mhow. The evidence of these officers being written for, and obtained, the court re-assembled, and their statements are read in the presence of the commandant and the captain, and from what has oozed out I learn that this evidence is of so conclusive a nature that it entirely exempts the junior officer from any charge of untruth, while it literally condemns the senior. How, then, can you account for the former being still allowed to remain under arrest and suffer pecuniary loss therefrom, whilst the real offender is permitted to roam at large?

EPISODE IN ELEPHANT HUNTING.—Information has reached us that two gentlemen, Messrs. Thompson and Linton, whilst out elephant shooting in the neighbourhood of Cholady, South-East Wynaad, came upon a "rogue," when Mr. Thompson fired and wounded him in the head. The brute now turned and charged, seizing Mr. Linton by his belt. This fortunately gave way, but not before Mr. Linton was elevated considerably in the air, from which position he fell with great force. The elephant next tried to crush Mr. Linton with his feet, in which attempt he seems to have been frustrated by the blood from the wound running over his eyes and blinding him, so that Mr. Linton had an opportunity of making his escape—a very providential one. —Madras Times.

THE 4TH REGIMENT N. I.—We continue to receive unfavourable accounts of the health of this regiment, now on the march to Secunderabad. Colonel Brine, the commandant, was attacked by cholera, and happily recovered, but it is confidently stated that at least one subaltern, in addition to Lieutenant Young, has fallen a victim to that disease. Until we have positive evidence of this alleged casualty, it is well not to mention the name of the officer whose death is announced. —Madras Times.

COMMERCIAL PROSPECTS IN MADRAS.—The Athenæum and Daily News of the 14th says:—"Our commercial intelligence, we regret to say, is but of a gloomy character. The sudden receipt of advice from Europe of a fall in the value of cotton, and the daily telegrams announcing further decline in the value of that staple, have materially affected our market, and business within the fortnight has been brought completely to a stand still. The exporters of cotton must suffer a very heavy loss, considering that Rs. 380 was about the ruling price here in July, August, and September last, and that the price now realised would hardly get five pence per pound, or about Rs. 100 per candy. Already we hear sinister rumours of serious losses, and the prospect of what is to follow looks very discouraging. Local native dealers will also suffer severely, and in the absence of demand for their stocks by others they are shipping freely on their own account. Cotton cost the present holders about Rs. 250 per candy, and there is now no demand for it even at Rs. 100! Produce of other kinds is scarce, and prices are fully maintained. It is impossible to effect sales of cotton fabrics at present, for the fact is that no one has confidence in the stability of the market, and prices are constantly giving way. In the absence of speculators money is accumulating, and the rates of interest are falling. Last week the directors of the Bank of Madras reduced their previous rates two per cent. all round. The value of Government Securities and Bank shares has improved this week. We fear that the whole of this month will prove a season of great trial to merchants and dealers, more particularly to those who shipped cotton extensively within the last nine months."

STOCK AND SHARE MARKET.—On the 28th ult. the Bank of Madras reduced its rates of discount and interest one per cent., and on the 4th inst. the directors announced a further reduction of two per cent. all round. Loans are now granted on the deposit of Government securities at the rate of 8 per cent., and money is increasingly plentiful. There has been an active inquiry for Government securities since the publication of the financial statement of the Government of India, and considerable purchases have been made at improving rates. We now quote 5½ per Cents. at 112, 5 per Cents. at 103 to 103½, and 4 per Cents. at 92. A margin of fully 2 per cent. is visible between the rate ruling here for 5½ per Cent. stock and that advised from Calcutta. Bank of Madras shares have also participated in the beneficial influence of the improved state of the money market, and there have been large purchases at prices ranging from Rs. 85 to Rs. 105 per cent. premium during the fortnight. These securities are now firmly held for 108 per cent. premium.

THE MADRAS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND THE BUDGET.—The Athenæum and Statesman of the 14th says:—"We have learned that the Madras Chamber of Commerce had a meeting on Wednesday last, when it was resolved to memorialise Government against the imposition of the new duties proposed by Sir Charles Trevelyan in his Budget; but we are not yet aware whether they have any definite suggestions to offer, as to what other expedients he should have recourse to, to make up in part the deficiency caused by the expiration of the Income-tax."

A LEGAL BRIGADIER-GENERAL.—We see it reported that Brigadier-general Shubrick, commanding at Kamptee, will not allow any of the officers under his command to be summoned before the Cantonment Joint Magistrate's Court, which is also the Small Cause Court for Kamptee. In most of the stations in the North-West Provinces Courts of Requests have been abolished where there are Courts of Small Causes. The Brigadier-general argues that Courts of Request were established by Act of Parliament, and therefore a similar Act is necessary for their abolition.

COURT MARTIAL.—According to the Central India Times, a court of inquiry, of which Colonel Halliday, 12th Regiment N.I., is president, has been sitting at Kamptee, to investigate charges of a social character, made against Captain Deacon, Paymaster of the Royal Regiment.

EXHIBITION AT NAGPORE.—We are informed that it has been proposed by the chief commissioner to have an Exhibition, rural and industrial, at Nagpore, in December or January next, and Government have promised to give Rs. 20,000 towards it, on condition that an equal sum is raised locally.

EXPORTS.—The dealers have at last credited the news that has suddenly stopped the operations of merchants, and have gradually reduced their demands from Rs. 200 to Rs. 150 per candy for far Western and purchases to some extent, it is believed, can now be effected at Rs. 120. The accumulations of Cotton are already very large, and the dealers are still bringing in fresh supplies from up-country. The shipments from this port during the first three months were 32,256 cwt. in 1862, 57,978 in 1863, 65,702 in 1864, and 89,214 in 1865; and 15,79,916 acres are now under Cotton cultivation in this Presidency, against 15,57,535 acres at the same date last year. Shipments of Indigo continue to be made to Suez on native account, and high rates are demanded for good samples, but we hear of no operations on European account.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NATURE AT PLAY.—Wondrous births and growths are frequently reported in Scinde. The other day we mentioned the birth of a monster; we now hear of that of twin-calves, both females, and that the pair are doing well. Then there is a story of five nim trees (Azadirachta Indica), which constantly exude a liquor resembling toddy in colour, but of a most abominable smell; it is rather sweet to the taste; this liquor exudes from orifices about ten feet above the roots of the trees, three of which have now been at work for upwards of two months, the other two having been in operation for a month only. When the liquor is put into a bottle and corked up its effervescing power is so great that it forces out the cork; it makes capital yeast, as was found by having some flour kneaded with it into a loaf which turned out well; but the smell was so bad that it spoilt the bread; the loaf was given to a dog to see whether there was anything poisonous about the nim juice, and it produced no bad effect.

CABOOL.—Hostilities have already commenced in Toorkistan. Abdalrahman Khan, the son of Afzul Khan, has come down to Ukcha, and laid siege to the place. The Ameer's commander has shut himself up, being unable to give battle. The King of Bokhara has mixed himself conspicuously in the matter. Auzim Khan is also giving trouble. The people of Cabool are in great apprehension, and the Ameer has been endeavouring to restore confidence. The means resorted to by him for the purpose are highly characteristic. The Ameer sent for Meer Syud Jan, merchant, and addressed him thus: "What a foolish set of men you are; at the slightest rumour of disturbance you begin removing your goods and suspend business. Please persuade all the shopkeepers to carry on their business as usual, or I will pass an order confiscating all their property." "It is not surprising if the men do secure their goods and make such arrangements as they think proper," replied Syud Jan, "when the Ameer's two brothers, Sirdars Mahomed Ameen Khan and Mahomed Auzim Khan, are close to Cabool. Besides, when there are no gates or fortifications to the city," continued Syud Jan, "what would the Ameer do if we were suddenly attacked. I will, however, inform every one of the Ameer's order, and reassure them as much as lies in my power." Everything in Cabool is sold at famine prices. Wheat-flour, one and three-quarter Cabool seers, barley two and half seers to the rupee; firewood and grass eight rupees per ass-load; other things in the same proportion.

MONTGOMERY MEMORIAL HALL.—Subscriptions for the purpose of erecting a memorial hall in honour of Sir Robert Montgomery, late Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, have been realised to the extent of upwards of seventy thousand rupees, and the sum of one lac, it is expected, will eventually be reached. The form which the memorial is to take is not yet decided, the present idea being that of a banqueting-hall!

PRESENTS TO CASHMERE.—The Lahore Chronicle states that his Excellency Sir Hugh Rose, on the eve of his departure from India, forwarded a magnificent present, consisting of costly Japanese cabinets, which he has requested Mr. Cooper, Commissioner of the Lahore Division, to forward, with his Excellency's parting good wishes, to his Highness the Maharajah of Cashmere—in memory of many courtly and hospitable attentions received during a tour through his Highness's dominions.

THE INDIAN BUDGET IN A BAD WAY.

THE Budget of Sir Charles Trevelyan, which was to have been taken for better or worse, according to general anticipation, has received a heavy blow and great discouragement at the hands of the Home Government. Since our last publication, Sir Charles Wood has announced from his place in Parliament that the new Export Duties and the new Loan will not be allowed to take effect. The Budget, shorn of two of its principal supports, thus falls to pieces, and the surplus, which was its proud result, becomes simply impossible. What Mr. Massey will say to the decision is difficult to anticipate; but it will assuredly prove a hard trial for his maiden attempt to make both ends meet.

It has been the opinion of many of Sir Charles Trevelyan's friends and supporters that he would be likely to fall into the error of unnecessary consistency in sacrificing the Income-tax as a matter of policy—irrespective of ways and means to supply its place. And, remembering the grounds upon which Sir Charles was recalled from Madras, it is impossible for the suggestion not to arise that his strong antipathy to the tax as a question of principle may have blinded him to its merits as a question of expediency. That Sir Charles was right in his original condemnation of the measure was proved by subsequent events—albeit that it was not his business, as a subordinate Governor, to publish his opinions to the world. But it was equally certain that, the tax being enforced, and relieved of a great deal of its most vexatious pressure, it was at last tolerably well received, and, with the aid of considerable compromises, worked remarkably well. It did not yield half what it would have yielded if thoroughly enforced; but it brought in a good round sum, and its continuance would have relieved the Exchequer from any present embarrassment, and in fact have enabled the Government to carry on with success pending the development of so many increasing sources of revenue. Under these circumstances, the opinion seems to have been largely entertained in India that the Income-tax should have been retained for at any rate another year. It is true that it had been imposed only as a special necessity; it is true that its termination had been promised at a particular time. But special necessities are matters for the judgment of authority; and even when a particular time is fixed for relief, there must always be a margin allowed for the exigencies of the occasion. The promise to take off a tax is always understood as contingent upon the revenue being able to bear the loss; and the most punctual fulfilment of such a pledge is no gain to the people if a new and, perhaps, unaccustomed impost be the consequence. In the present case the country had a narrow escape from an increase in the Salt-tax, and it is indeed possible that such will now be the resort, though we will not anticipate so mischievous a measure, opposed as it is to the wishes of the Governor-general himself. His is, however, certain—that the ex-Finance Minister has incurred the charge of gratifying a prejudice at the cost of such an anomalous proceeding as making a reduction of taxation simultaneously with a deficit and an opened loan.

Such a course would be open to strong disapproval if the loan were the only objection. Not, however, that we are inclined to take exception upon this score. Pressing public works for military purposes, for which the loan was principally designed, may well justify a little infliction upon a future generation; and we doubt whether, supposing the Budget to have been otherwise unexceptionable, that this item would have been condemned. But when a deficit is held to be needlessly created, the means taken to meet the requirement are sure to be jealously watched; and so it seems that the loan, in conjunction with the export duties, are more than the Indian Secretary is disposed to suffer. That the export duties were a mistake is admitted by all competent authorities; and as far as the principle is concerned, even Sir Charles Trevelyan himself has made but a mild attempt to defend them. The present prosperity of the country, which he has pictured in such forcible terms, is attributable entirely to the new policy of allowing capital and enterprise fair play—of giving an unrestricted field to the pioneers of progress, who, by increasing the wealth of the people, offer the surest guarantee for the support of the State. Now that the effects of that policy have become so unmistakably a matter of revenue, the most sceptical Government must hold them in respect; and it is to the credit of Sir Charles Wood that he has not allowed official considerations to interfere with the plain duty before him. Sir Charles Trevelyan's Budget has given satisfaction in India "as a whole"; but in a part it has found scarcely a single defender outside the Council Chamber. That it passed the Council at all is due, doubtless, to the all-powerful support of the Governor-General; and Sir John Lawrence, who was particularly reticent upon the subject of the Income-tax, was of course influenced by practical considerations, which compel a ruler to get revenue upon any terms besides his avowed dislike to an increase of the Salt-tax, which seemed the only alternative.

How Mr. Massey will manage to reconcile conflicting principles, and accommodate circumstances generally so as to bring the finances into favourable form, remains to be seen; but the task before him is not an enviable one, and as far as success is concerned, there is just this chance—that a new head may hit upon some expedient which old heads, it is evident, are unable to perceive.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 8.

EXPORT DUTIES ON INDIAN PRODUCE.

Mr. CAIRD asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was the intention of the Government in India to impose export duties on the more important staples of that country, and whether the home Government approved of that course of policy.

Mr. CRAWFORD likewise asked whether the right hon. baronet had received an official copy of Sir C. Trevelyan's financial statement; and, if so, whether he would lay it upon the table.

Sir C. WOOD said he had not received any official despatches containing an account of the new Indian financial proposals; but he had received private letters communicating the course which the Council of India had taken with respect to those proposals. That course was one which he did not think he would have taken had he been in their place. He had only received those letters yesterday, and as yet he had not had time to fully master their contents. But he quite agreed that the question involved was of the greatest importance, and that it was most desirable the trade of the country should be informed of the determination of the Government on the subject. He had, therefore, collected together as many members of the Council as he could, and he had communicated to them that it would be his duty not to allow of the imposition of these export duties—(cheers).

A LOAN FOR INDIA.

Mr. CRAWFORD asked whether it was the intention of the right hon. bart. the Secretary of State for India to raise a loan for the purposes of the Indian Government.

Sir C. WOOD: it is not my intention to raise any large loan in this country.

THE LUCKNOW BOUNTY.

Sir S. NORTHCOTE asked the Secretary of State for India what was the total amount of the booty taken at the Begum's Coote, Lucknow, in December, 1858; what proportion of that amount was awarded to the troops by whom it was captured; whether the whole amount which was awarded had been distributed; and, if not, when the final distribution might be expected.

Sir C. WOOD said the original prize money derivable upon the capture of Lucknow had been distributed; some time subsequently to the capture, however, an additional sum of £12,000 had been found, and of that one-fourth had been distributed under the orders of Sir Hope Grant. He was not aware that any further sum remained for distribution.

THE AZEEM JAH PETITIONS COMMITTEE.

On the order of the day for the consideration of the report of the select committee appointed to inquire into the signatures attached to the petitions in favour of the Azeem Jah claims,

Mr. Cox presented a petition from William Morris Mitchell, complaining that he had not been allowed the opportunity of meeting the case which had been brought forward against him, and asserting the untruthfulness of the evidence.

After a debate of some duration, but of little interest, the ATTORNEY-GENERAL moved an adjournment till the following day.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 9.

OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Lord PROBY, Comptroller of the Household, appeared at the bar, and read the following reply from the Throne:—

"I have received your address, praying for redress of all such grievances complained of by officers of the Indian army which have arisen from a departure from the regulations of Parliament. I will give directions to inquire into the effect of the measures which have been adopted for this purpose, and, if it should be shown that ample redress has not been afforded I will direct such further steps to be taken as the case may require."

IRRIGATION WORKS IN INDIA.

Mr. LIDDELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether there was any objection to lay upon the table of the House a copy of his own despatch of the 8th of August last, and of the minute of Lieut. Colonel Strachey, late Secretary of Public Works, upon the policy of the Government undertaking the construction of the necessary irrigation works in India in preference to entrusting their construction to private companies.

Sir C. WOOD said he had received the minute alluded to, but had not yet had time to consider it, and it was unusual to lay such documents on the table until they had been duly considered by the Government.

THE AZEEM JAH PETITIONS COMMITTEE.

The adjourned debate on the report of the committee on the signatures to the petitions in favour of the claims of Azeem Jah, Nawab of the Carnatic, was resumed by the ATTORNEY-GENERAL, who said that, having carefully read and weighed the bearings of the evidence, he was satisfied that the inquiry had been conducted with a sincere desire on the part of the committee to do justice to George Morris Mitchell, who was charged with having himself fabricated, and knowingly procured other fabricated signatures to several of the petitions. He suggested, however, that the wisest and simplest course of proceeding would be to adopt the amendment of Lord R. Cecil, to refer the report back to the committee, with an instruction to take the petition of Mitchell, presented on the previous day, into their consideration. After some discussion this suggestion was agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 11.

THE LAND TENURES OF OUDE.

Lord STANLEY asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had received any recent reports relative to the investigation into the land tenures of Oude; and, if so, whether he was able to state the substance of such reports, or to lay them upon the table.

Sir C. WOOD said he had not received any public documents that could be laid upon the table.

THE TRANSPORT OF TROOPS TO AND FROM INDIA.

Lord STANLEY asked the Secretary of State for India what amount of expenditure it was intended to incur in the establishment of a line of steam transports to convey troops by the overland route; whether all transport of troops to and from India was to take place hereafter by that line; and, if so, at what seasons of the year, and what use, if any, will be made of the transports during the months not available for the conveyance of troops.

Sir C. WOOD said the question of the transport of troops to India had been under discussion for three or four years past. The Government of India had recommended the overland route as constituting a great gain in point of time alike to the soldier and the Government, and the result of the inquiry had been to prove that by the establishment of a line of transports between Suez and India troops might be conveyed to and from India at a cheaper rate than at present. It was therefore proposed to build five transports of a very large size, at a cost of something under £200,000 each; and under the advice of the Admiralty contracts had been entered into for that purpose. For three-fifths of the year these vessels would be in the employment of the Indian Government, and for the remaining two-fifths in that of the Admiralty. From the beginning of October to the end of March would be the period of year when they would be passing through the Red Sea.

INDIAN TRANSPORT SERVICE.

Mr. A. MILLS asked whether the million of money to be spent in conveying troops from India was to be a charge upon the Indian revenue or upon the home expenditure.

Sir C. WOOD replied that the money was advanced by the Government of India, but the annual charge would fall upon this country and upon India in proportion to the services each required.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MAY 12.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Lord BERNERS presented petitions from Captian Barrat, of the Bombay army; from Colonel C. Birdwood, of the Bombay army; from Lieut.-Colonel J. D. Stewart, Bombay army; from Major H. C. Cuppage, of the 15th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry; from Captain S. A. T. Judge, of the 67th Regiment Bengal Infantry; from Lieutenant P. L. Gordon, of the 6th Regiment Madras Cavalry; from Major J. A. Auldjo, of the 36th Regiment Bengal Infantry; from Major G. G. Anderson, of the 15th Regiment Bengal Infantry; from Captain E. P. W. Ripley, of the 1st Punjab Cavalry; from Lieutenant C. M. Smith, of the 32nd Regiment Madras Infantry; and from Veterinary Surgeon Underwood, of the Madras army, complaining of the violation of rights secured to them by Act of Parliament, and humbly praying for redress.

The Marquis of CLANRICARDE presented a similar petition.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 12.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.

Colonel DUNNE asked the Secretary of State for India why the third instalment of the Delhi prize money had not been paid, according to the recommendation of the Prize Committee, and when it would be paid.

Sir C. WOOD replied that the commissioners had considered the advisability of making a third distribution, but they found that a number of claims had not yet been preferred, and of course if they made the third distribution they would not have had the means of meeting those prior claims. The payment had been suspended only until these outstanding claims had been disposed of.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA.—The directors of the National Bank of India have given notice that they will allot the unissued 10,000 shares of £50 each, of which already 5,000 shares have been subscribed for in Bombay, at £2 premium. The remaining 5,000 shares will be allotted to the existing shareholders at the same premium, at the rate of one new for every two old shares.

THE ISTHMUS OF SUEZ CANAL.—The Malta Times states that an inspection of the works of the Suez Maritime Canal, recently opened, has just taken place, on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce at Malta. The width of the canal varies at present, according to localities, from about sixteen to fifty-eight metres. Its average depth at present is not more than two to three feet. The company have contracted with various French firms for the completion of the whole of the works from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea by the 1st of July, 1868. The conclusion Mr. Christian, of the Malta Chamber of Commerce, arrives at, after a careful inspection, is, that the completion of the Ship Canal is only a question of time and money. It still, of course, remains an open question how far the canal will be useful to our sailing Indiamen, owing to the prevalent winds in the Red Sea; but that, in a very few years, an uninterrupted water route will be open, and the sea voyage from Europe to India for steamers shortened by fully one-half, there can be little doubt.

IMPORTS OF HEMP AND JUTE.—The quantity of hemp imported into this country last year was 1,010,688 cwts., against 1,067,913 cwts. in 1863, and against 915,807 cwt. in 1862. The chief sources of supply are Russia, Austria, British India, Philippine Islands; and these countries in 1864 furnished us with 540,093 cwts., 157,299 cwts., 75,522 cwts., and 183,943 cwts. respectively—all other places contributing 53,831 cwts. Reviewing the statistics of this article of commerce during the past fifteen years, it cannot be said to have exhibited any marked advance. Of jute and other vegetable substances of like nature the quantity brought into this country last year was 2,047,287 cwts., or 792,682 cwts. in excess of that in 1863, or 1,083,513 cwts. more than in 1862. Twelve years since, when jute was first specified in the official account under a heading distinct from that of hemp, the annual importation did not exceed 275,578 cwts.; the increment has been, therefore, more than sevenfold. Almost the entire supply was brought from India, Singapore, and Ceylon.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—At the annual meeting on Wednesday of the Universal Life Assurance Society, Mr. J. F. Leath in the chair, the new policies for the year were stated to have been for £268,207, yielding in premiums £10,843. The total of the existing assurances is £2,411,475, the assets are £818,594, and the annual income £137,327. A reduction of 50 per cent. was declared for the current year on all participating premiums. Mr. Osgood Hanbury, Jun., of the firm of Messrs. Barnetts, Hoares, Hanburys, and Lloyd, was elected a director.

THE MAILS, &c.—SOUTHAMPTON, May 12.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Delta, Captain Babot, sailed hence this afternoon with the mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Bombay, and Upper Bengal. She took out 22 first and 25 second-class passengers, and on freight a general cargo and five boxes of specie, value £4,485. 10s., of which amount £2,340 in sovereigns and watches, jewellery, and gold thread, value £1,038. 10s., are for Bombay; for Alexandria, sovereigns, £1,000; and for Suez, watches, £107.

THE SURVEY OF NORTH-WESTERN INDIA.—A Royal medal for the encouragement of geographical science and discovery entrusted to the Royal Geographical Society has this year been awarded to Captain Montgomerie for his extensive and elaborate survey of North-western India and the Karakoram range.

MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA TELEGRAPH.—The re-opening of this telegraph, for the transmission of messages, is announced, a telegram having been received from Malta, dated the 13th May, 4.15 p.m., conveying intelligence of the successful completion of the repairs on the interrupted section of the line between Benghazi and Alexandria.

KEW GARDENS—INDIAN PLANTS.—In Sir W. J. Hooker's last report on Kew Gardens it is mentioned that most flourishing accounts of the Chincona plantations continue to arrive from India; in the Neilgherries the plants have been propagated at the rate of 30,000 to 40,000 monthly. In Ceylon there were in September 190,000 plants, the tallest six feet high; and it was expected to issue 20,000 monthly. Steps are being taken to introduce the ipecacuanha into Ceylon and India.

COLONEL WAUGH.—The case of Colonel Waugh, who is undergoing a second bankruptcy before he was well clear of the first, was brought before Mr. Commissioner Goulburn on the 10th inst. The colonel applied to be released from prison, but several of the detaining creditors opposed, and the commissioner refused to interfere in the matter till after the choice of assignees, which is expected to take place on the 27th inst.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENTS.—Foreign-office, May 11.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Francis Gerhard Myburgh, Esq., now her Majesty's Consul at Nagasaki, to be her Majesty's Consul at Kanagawa; Francis Howard Vyse, Esq., now her Majesty's Consul at Hakodadi, to be her Majesty's Consul at Nagasaki; and Abel A. J. Gower, Esq., to be her Majesty's Consul at Hakodadi. The Queen also has been pleased to approve of Don Juan Pisani as Consul at Gibraltar for his Majesty the Emperor of Mexico.

MILITARY ITEMS.—56th Regiment.—Capt. Gubbins is about to retire from the service, Lieutenant Bolton and Ensign de Mottee purchasing the steps in succession. 72nd Highlanders.—Captain MacNeill is about to retire from the service, Lieutenant Murray succeeding to the vacant company, and Ensign Goad to the lieutenantcy, by purchase. 79th Highlanders.—Lieutenant Hayward is about to retire, Ensign Morley succeeding to the vacant lieutenantcy. 93rd Highlanders.—Lieutenant Greig is about to retire from the service. 95th Regiment.—Lieutenant Fleming has arrived home from India with detachments. 102nd Regiment.—Captain Harcourt has arrived home from India with detachments. 103rd Regiment.—Lieutenant Bridges has arrived home from India with detachments. 105th Regiment.—Ensign Power has arrived home from India with detachments. 106th Regiment.—Lieutenant Heathcote has arrived home from India with detachments.

FAILURE OF MESSRS. HANKEY BROTHERS AND CO.—It was generally known in commercial circles on Friday afternoon that Messrs. Hankey Brothers and Co., merchants, of Liverpool, were in difficulties, but a confident feeling prevailed that, with the assistance of their influential connections, they would have been enabled to make a satisfactory arrangement with their creditors. Owing, however, to the name being made public, there is no longer any hope of such a result. The house was engaged in trade with India and Egypt, and entered extensively into cotton operations. It was established about two years ago, with a capital of £60,000. The liabilities are estimated at £250,000, but a favourable liquidation is expected, although much is said to depend upon the realisation of assets in the East.—Daily Telegraph.

The Bishop of Oxford, it is said, is about to send out to India a body of "artisan missionaries."

ABBREVED PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed for the purpose of spinning and weaving cotton by machinery in that part of her Majesty's dominions which affords the greatest facilities for such manufacturing, viz., the coal and cotton field of Central India, at Benar, near the Bombay and Calcutta Railway, where the difference between the cost of raw cotton and the selling price of yarn (twenty-four's twist) averages 8d. per lb. more than in Lancashire, hence the returns from spinning would average 8d. per lb. more.

This difference represents the cost of taking the raw cotton to England, and returning it in the form of yarn and cloth to Central India, all charges inclusive, except the cost of manufacturing, which is not included.

It is estimated by practical men who have already established mills in India, that the proposed capital will be amply sufficient for a fire-proof mill of 100,000 spindles and 1,200 looms, leaving one-fifth of the amount for floating capital. As the average out-turn of yarn is 45lbs. per spindle per annum, each penny per lb. profit would give a return of 7½ per cent. on the capital. This estimate includes interest of 5 per cent. per annum on all subscriptions during the erection of the mills, and all other expenses.

At Calcutta, where the facilities for cotton spinning are much less than in Central India, the New Fort Gloucester Mills have paid dividends of 33 per cent. per annum from 1862, and the last quoted price of the shares, with £60 paid, is £140 to £145, although the period has been one of unprecedented difficulty to the cotton spinning trade.

Printed copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association may be seen at the Office of the Solicitors.

A deposit of £1 per Share must be paid to the Bankers of the Company.

Detailed Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained from the Bankers, Solicitors, or at the Offices of the Company. Should no allotment be made the deposit will be returned in full.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

SIR,—As a Proprietor of East-India Stock, you were presented, we believe, by the East-India Company with a copy of Mr. EDWARD THORNTON'S "HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA," the sixth volume of which, bringing down the history to 1844, was issued in the year 1846.

Indian history since the recall of Lord Ellenborough has been so fruitful of great events and striking episodes, that we cannot but think the time has fully come for adding another volume to Mr. Thornton's unfinished work. The two campaigns on the Sutlej, followed by the conquest of the Punjab, the second Burmese war, crowned by the annexation of Pegu, the splendid reign of Lord Dalhousie, illustrated by the establishment of railways, the swift growth of the electric telegraph, the gradual settlement of the Punjab, all these things, followed as they were by the annexation of Oude, and the mighty explosion of 1857, which annihilated the old Sepoy army of Bengal, nearly shattered to pieces the power founded by Clive and Hastings, and brought about the political death of the great East-India Company, seem to furnish abundant matter for at least one interesting volume, written with due conciseness and a careful regard for truth.

The history of a time so fraught with stirring incidents and momentous issues can hardly fail, with fair handling, to interest Englishmen of very diverse tastes. We have therefore arranged with a gentleman of some literary culture, Captain L. J. TROTTER, late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, for the production of a volume which shall bring the history of British India down to its natural halting-place—the death of Lord Canning.

We annex herewith a Prospectus of the volume; and, as only a limited edition will be printed, we shall be obliged by an early intimation of your wish, if any such you should have, to complete your copy of "Thornton's History."

We have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servants,

WM. H. ALLEN AND CO.,

ROBERT GORDON LATHAM, M.A., M.D., F.R.S., &c.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAFTEL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

'The "Channel Islands" is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many hands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interesting as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Nafel and M. Petere Le Lièvre. The result is not a merely handsome volume of the old "Keepsake" style, made to sell and be looked at, but a book of rare merit and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit.'—Athenaeum, Nov. 15, 1862.

BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it finally rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 160 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown.—(See Times, 11th October, 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided: a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 22s, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d. postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 1s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d. KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect.

SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying fleas in their dogs, as also ladies for their pet dogs.

Being the Original Importer of this now invaluable article, which has found so great a sale that it has tempted others to vend a so-called article, the public are therefore cautioned to observe that the packets of the genuine Powder bear the autograph of THOMAS KEATING.

Sold in Packets and Bottles of various sizes, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—There is no question whatever that rheumatism, neuralgia, and such like painful maladies have been more rife this season than for some years past. The number of testimonials of cures effected by Holloway's remedies is unprecedented, and should be enforced on the attention of all sufferers from these complaints. The parts in pain should be fomented for some minutes with warm brine, dried, and immediately well rubbed with the Ointment. It will pass into the pores of the skin and give the greatest relief. Many valuable lives are annually lost which might be saved if early recourse in illness were made to these remarkable remedies, which must necessarily prove beneficial, and cannot do harm.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incidental to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.
"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.

This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of our usual files of papers from Bombay to the 28th of April, and Calcutta to the 22nd of that month.

Sir Charles Wood's telegraphic demolition of the Export Duties had reached Bombay, and was a general subject of conversation. The news had given much satisfaction, mingled with just a little jealousy of home authority. The Bombay Gazette, though agreeing in opinion with the Indian Secretary, still doubts the propriety of "inflicting on the Viceregal Government the humiliation of a public disavowal of the chief financial measure of the year." The writer, in fact, considers that "the boon which the remission of the new duties would confer on the mercantile community of India is much more than counterbalanced by the loss of reputation which our Government at Calcutta suffers when the people of India are able to read in one column of a newspaper a speech by the Viceroy rejecting the prayer of the Calcutta memorialists that the duties may not be imposed, and in another column the telegram announcing that "Sir Charles Wood had refused to sanction them," and he adds:—"Such a system of Government necessarily deprives the Viceroy of all power and dignity, and makes him in fact an object of contempt to the natives. . . . For the sake of appearances, at least, the broad principles of an Imperial policy should be agreed upon between the Home Government and the Viceroy in Council before a financial statement is published, or an important Bill brought before the Legislative Council. If the telegraphic wire had been used before hand for its legitimate purpose, that is, to ascertain if the Budget would be approved at home, the public scandal of this disagreement between Sir Charles Wood and Sir Charles Trevelyan would have been avoided."

The weather, which has been more than usually hot all over India, was very oppressive at Bombay, but some rain had fallen, and an early monsoon was expected. Cases of cholera had occurred in several parts. At Kurrachee there had been two cases in the 23rd Regiment N.L.I., but the commanding officer being promptly and efficiently assisted by the local managers of the Scinde Railway, was enabled to remove the whole of his troops in the course of twelve hours to a change of air. This example of activity is contrasted with an instance of apparent neglect in official quarters in a manner not very flattering to the latter. On the 11th inst., it seems, one of the usual artillery relief parties, consisting of about 100 Europeans, was ordered to march from Mhow to Kirkee. The General commanding at Mhow protested to head-quarters against the men being taken through the deadly jungle during the fiercest heat of the season. His interference was disregarded; and the consequence was, that thirty-six miles from the station a large portion of the force was stricken down, and the rest compelled to return to save their own lives. The number left dead in the jungle was no less than twenty-five. There has been a general outburst of indignation against the authority which would not listen to the Generals' warning, and a court of inquiry has been ordered on the subject.

The Bombay International Exhibition is to be a fact after all. The project is getting influential and effective support. It is to be brought out under a system of guarantees, the joint-stock company having been broken up.

Financial affairs at Bombay were "getting no better very fast." The news from America was creating serious alarm for the fate of cotton and all concerned in it. Nothing but confidence in England kept off a serious panic. A great deal of discussion had been caused by the action of the Bank of Bombay, which had decided to advance money on the security of reclamation shares, &c., fixing for Back Bay the value of 30,000 rupees, viz.: 5,000 for the first call (paid up), and 25,000 per share. The Bank of Bombay, being, as a writer on the subject remarks, the leading bank of the Presidency, the Government bank, and the bank of deposit for the spare cash of all the other banks, as well as that of merchants and private individuals, it is natural that its proceedings should be scrutinised with some strictness.

Lady Frere had left for England with the general good wishes of the community, expressed in one instance in a public manner.

Calcutta was principally remarkable for having been just abandoned by the Governor-general, who had proceeded to Simla for the hot season, his inevitable following upon this occasion having the addition of Mr. Massey. That gentleman, by the way, was stated to be unwell—a fact suggestive of unpleasant ideas, for which, let us hope, there is no foundation. On his arrival it is noticeable that the Finance Minister caused some astonishment by his fresh and (comparatively) youthful appearance. Old Indians cannot understand what mere boys men of fifty are at home.

Notwithstanding the remark made in Bombay about Sir Charles Wood's condemnation of the Customs Duties appearing side by side with Sir John Lawrence's confirmation of those imposts, it does not appear that the eventful news was known in Calcutta at the latest date from that city. There was certainly no allusion to the fact in the files that reached us, and the local press would be the reverse of reticent on the subject. Sir Charles Trevelyan had taken his departure, not quite uncheered on his journey, for the British Indian Association gave him an address, and so did the Mahomedan Association, thus putting a stamp upon Sir Charles's unpopularity, to prevent mistakes. Among the coming departures from Calcutta is that of the Hon. H. B. Harington, who retires after forty years' service, during which he have won the respect of all, both by his public and private conduct. Mr. Harington went to India in 1824, as an ensign, and his first "public appearance" was in planting the colours of the 37th Regt. on the walls of Bhurtpore. He then returned to England, and entered the Civil Service of the East India Company, becoming, in conjunction with Sir Charles Trevelyan, an assistant under Sir E. Colebrooke in 1829. Mr. Temple, the Chief Commissioner of Nagpore, returns to England for a twelve-months' leave. He seems to have been "addressed" extensively before leaving his seat of government.

Sir William Mansfield's appointments are given elsewhere; but we see in addition that he has taken the Hon. Walter Harbord, of the 7th Hussars, on to his personal staff.

The news from Bhootan is meagre. The last telegram from Tombs was dated the 7th of April. The celebrated operation of the King of France with fifty thousand men had been repeated at Dewangiri. The place had been taken, not because it was wanted, or was intended to be kept, but as a moral lesson to the enemy. Having been formally occupied by our troops it was then as formally evacuated. Jugar Penlow, it seems, had been slain. He was next in authority to Tongso the Warlike, who, though opposed by the amlahs, or landlords, who desire to make peace, is gathering up stores with the evident intention of giving trouble when the rains come to his assistance. Our force now assumes a defensive attitude, and every consideration is given to the villagers. It is intended only to secure the Dooars, though the post of Bishen Singh, which is to be occupied, is quite within the boundary of Bhootan Proper. The Gazette contains a notification of the breaking up of the Bhootan Field Brigades. They are again united in one brigade, under the command of General Tytler, with headquarters "ordinarily" at Gowhatty. In consequence of this arrangement Brigadier General Tombs reverts to the command of the Gwalior district. Sir Hugh Rose has left behind him a minute on the occupation of the Dooars, which may claim our attention next number.

We notice that the Lahore and Mooltan line was to be opened for public traffic on the 24th of April.

Several shocks of earthquake have been felt in the North-West. Two days after the cyclone at Calcutta, says a letter published in that city, a visitation of the same kind, though milder, took place at Rio de Janiero. If this be true, what becomes of Mr. Piddington's "circular" theory?

The House of Lords has been discussing the Indian Army grievance during the week, and in the House of Commons the competition system in the Civil Service has had its usual airing. The opponents of the system may be right or wrong, but it is quite time they left off telling the "wallahs" that they are not gentlemen. Whatever the "wallahs" are they are public servants, and therefore entitled to a degree of consideration on the decorous side of insult from the members of the House of Commons.

BENGAL

THE LESSON TAUGHT BY THE ADVANCE OF RUSSIA.

The conquests of Russia in Central Asia have attracted the attention of the civilised world from America to China. When it was known in Europe that the Amoor provinces had been annexed there was a start of surprise at the quiet and stealthy advance of Russia, and the important addition she had made to her Siberian territory. It was, however, thought to be quite natural for a country, the coast line of which was hemmed in by Arctic seas, to seek an outlet for her trade by the Pacific. But the late series of subjugations, commencing with the Caucasus and ending we cannot yet say where, have roused strange suspicions as to her ambitious projects. Numerous European journals have uttered words full of import. The one thing all of them unite in believing is, that these Central Asian conquests have some present or future bearing on India. And now another envoy from Kokhan awaits an interview with the Viceroy at Jhelum.

We would utter a caution not to trust to the unmitigated liars of Central Asia, though they appear in the position of envoys. Such a character is easily assumed by them, and we have no practical means of testing the truth of their stories. The Toorks of Central Asia are treacherous to the last degree, and manifest a most unaccountable hatred of Englishmen and everything English. It therefore seems rather strange that there should still be an envoy from Kokhan, when there can be no question that half a year ago the country was annexed and settled by Russia. It is possible that attempts are being made, whether by the fanatic Khan of Bokhara, the rebels at large in his territory, or the Russians themselves, to mislead the British Government into taking prominent action in the matter, and sending troops beyond the frontiers where they would soon prove an easy prey to physical suffering, starvation, and unknown enemies. A circumstance must have been marked by those who have conversed with Yarkundis, that notwithstanding their known bitter hate of the English, they still invite Englishmen into Toorkistan, and promise them the country. So far as we are aware, the object of this deceit is to inveigle the simple and credulous to a certain and shameful death. But it may be asked, why should the Central Asian tribes wish Englishmen and English troops to enter and perish in Toorkistan? The reply to this has a reference to the state of Moslem feelings, against Government, so well illustrated during the mutinies and in the Patna conspiracy, the embers of which have not yet been trampled out. The Mussulmans of India, especially those of the North-West and the Punjab, look to Toorkistan as their Wilayet, their home, and the citadel of their faith. They refer to it with pride as to a country never yet attempted by the British, and where alone Englishmen have met with their deserts. There would be no greater satisfaction and triumph to the Mussulmans of India than to hear that a British army had perished in the wilds of Central Asia. And those who could see far into the future would hail the march of a British army across our northern frontier as the first step to a series of humiliations and complications which might ultimately cost us the country. That the Russians should wish a British army to perish in Toorkistan is not improbable from the uses to which they could turn the fact. If, therefore, we value our prestige we should take care that we do not listen to tales which, for all we know, may be false.

The reasons given why it is probable that Russia should invade India are these:—What other object can she have in advancing so near our Cashmere outposts? It is possible she might have that end in view, but it is as possible that she has not. Central Asia, especially Bokhara and Yarkund, are exceedingly rich, fertile and populous provinces, and it is likely that Russia has her eye more on Toorkistan, the old cradle of the human race, as giving her a most enviable and commanding position among the nations of the earth. That in case of a war with England, Russia, near at hand, might attempt some mischief to India, is not unlikely. But we do not think she would do very serious injury unless she had an eye on the country, nor is it very probable that she has yet had India seriously in her eye. All her energies have for ages been directed to suppressing the Turkish and other Mahomedan powers, and we believe that in all her movements she has this object more in view than any other. She might have an eye even to China, but we hardly think it likely that for a long time to come she will interfere with India; and by that time it is possible that India may stand in other relations to England, and be able to defy the might of the whole Russian empire, if that be brought to bear on her. Still, it is our imperious duty, as the first power in Asia, to know what is actually going on very close to our frontier. The notorious ambition and greed of Russia are assigned as reasons for a probable advance. We know of these only with reference to Mahomedan powers, and it is possible she has a mission to fulfil with respect to the Mahomedan world. Such, at least, is her own belief, and the conviction of the Turks themselves. These two reasons, we believe, constitute the sum of all that have ever been advanced, and they will not stand examination. But a third reason is brought forward by some who know a good deal of the question, and that is that the Russians openly talk of going on to India, and the Central Asian peoples believe it. On this point we can only say it is possible a Russian organ may have said something in an idle mood, and that is merely in the anticipations of the people of Central Asia that the Russians talk of marching on India. Such rude Orientals as the Toorks, who have for ages marked the advance of England from the south and that of Russia from the north, and who cannot understand how two European States can live in peace and amity, when near each other, they may think many things which may not turn out to be facts. We have all along advocated a non-interference policy. But at the same time we have called out more than once, and now reiterate it, that we must have more sure and certain information of what is going on not far from our borders.

Having disposed of the arguments urged for Russia invading India, we now turn to the reasons which have been advanced why she should not do so. And here we find every reason hitherto urged insufficient. First, the physical difficulties are insurmountable. We confess we are surprised to hear such an objection from writers who, if they are ignorant of the geographical features of the country, can be under no mistake as to the facts of history. We know that in the very remotest ages the Aryans penetrated India from the north-west. That they had a severe struggle, or were strongly opposed there, cannot be a question, when they reduced the entire aboriginal population either to the state of helots, or drove them into fastnesses. How, we might ask, in those primitive times, when agriculture was carried on only to the point that would suffice for domestic purposes, could the vast tribe of the Aryans have migrated without starving by the way, or perishing on the mountains, or falling beneath the flint arrows and hatchets of the aboriginal Indians? The next record we have is of the invasion of Alexander the Great, which, coming all the way from Europe, and thinned step by step, yet passed through the mountains of Balch and Kafiristan, and, notwithstanding the most energetic opposition of the most martial of the Indian nations, entered India in triumph. How was this accomplished? The invasions of the Mongols and Toorks after that became numerous, and how were these effected? It is only the other day that Cabul lost Cashmere. How could she have retained it so long? The truth is that the master of Cabul has a large vantage ground in any invasion of the Punjab. It is generally believed that there are only one or two passes. This is mistake. There are one or two grand passes; but all along the frontier there are numerous small highways and byways. The hills do not present the blank surface of a wall of a compound with one gate attached. This, however, is the usual idea of those ignorant of the physical features of the hills of the North-west. The whole country between Peshawur and Simla is a series of passes large and small.

But if the physical features of the ground near India may be overcome, there are immense ranges and deserts far beyond. These ranges are all in the same condition as the North-Western Himalayas, only a few great passes are used. But who proposes to oppose Russia at the Hindoo Koosh? Certainly not those who raise this objection. As for the deserts they are all imaginary. There is hardly any finer country—not excepting India herself—than Toorkistan. The so-called deserts are mere specks, are always traversed, and have never been much accounted of. The great Gobi desert does not lie in the way of Russia when advancing to India. But, it is said there are wild tribes on the way? We do not know of any. The Central Asian peoples are not wild tribes, but long settled nations with fixed forms of government. Again it is objected that there is no base for the operations of an army. Alexander the Great had no base, nor had Timour, nor had Nadir Shah. But we cannot conceive how this objection can be started with the magnificent base of the Caspian, or the line of forts which run across from the Aral Sea to a point not three hundred miles north of Cashmere, that is, as it were, from Calcutta to Patna in a straight line. Besides, it is an assumption to suppose that a Russian army would ever invade India without first providing for itself a base. Finally, the careless reasoner declares that the invasion will not be in our day. This is a convenient excuse for inaction. So is that other idea, that if Russia ever sends an army into India, it will never get out again. In the case of an invasion of Great Britain the utter annihilation of the invaders is a far more probable thing, but yet neither the army, navy, nor volunteers have therefore disregarded the very least signs of a probable invasion. We have not met with any other objections that can be thought of in respect of a Russian invasion of India. These which we have briefly examined either are not consistent with facts, or form but an idle excuse for inaction. The chances, therefore, on both sides of the question, are equal. The reasons stated for Russia invading India do not stand the test of examination, and the reasons given why Russia should not do so are found even more unsound. In this state of doubt the question must rest till the future course of events makes things plain.

The actual progress Russia has made in Central Asia appears to be this. She has taken Kokhan, and from both east and west, the Kokhan and the Caspian side, she is hemming in Khiva. Her Arab settlements, and her conquest of the Caucasus enable her to press in also from the north and south. Thus surrounded and hemmed in on all sides by victorious and veteran troops, the fate of Khiva can no longer be doubted. With Khiva and Kokhan in her possession she has only the south-east corner of Toorkistan, adjoining India, further to annex, and her appearance at Bokhara is suspicious, as to her further intentions that way. A letter from Cashmere lately stated that it was reported that the Russians had penetrated far to the east into Tartary. It is possible that the insurrection in East Toorkistan has been occasioned by Russian intrigues, and that it has spread to the confines of China. But how the Russians could have got over the large and populous and important viceroyalty of Ila without some report of it having reached China, we cannot imagine. To the east of Kashgar the rumours are all vague and indefinite. There is an insurrection, and the Russians are somehow named in it. But nothing further can be said with certainty.

A brief review of the whole State of Central Asia at the present time, and a glance at the reasons started for and against the invasion of India by Russia, teach us above all things to keep ourselves properly informed of events. The semi-official mission from Lahore is the first step in that direction.—Friend of India.

THE MONEY MARKET.

A continued and increasing depression has pervaded our share market. The stocks of the older commercial and tea companies are still difficult to dispose of. Those of the new companies have, with the single exception of the Imperial Finance, all largely declined. Owing partly to the general depression, and partly to forced sales on account of defaulters, the shares of the Port Canning Land Investment, Reclamation, and Dock Company, Limited, have receded to Rs. 1,100 premium. The price of Salt Water Lake shares from the same causes fell to Rs. 200 discount, and there are now purchasers at Rs. 100 discount. In the case of the Sunderbans Reclamation Company no transactions are as yet reported, and, owing to the excellent arrangements connected with their allotment, they are not likely to be hurriedly placed on the market. There have been several transactions in the Imperial Finance Company's shares at from 5 to 10 premium. Those of the Bengal Credit Mobilier have exhibited a downward tendency during the whole of this period, and are now quoted at Rs. 80 to 85 premium. National Bank's are quoted at 295. Bank of Bengal's have receded to Rs. 1,750. Transactions have been principally confined to the above stocks.

Money is plentiful. The Bank of Bengal reduced its rate discount one per cent. all round on the 13th; and there have since been large transactions in company's paper, but prices of this stock have a downward tendency. It seems at first sight strange that, with an easy money market, there should have been so general a decline in the prices of joint-stock shares of every description. But the fact is that a combination of causes influencing the market, among which the unfavourable news regarding the course of the cotton trade, brought almost daily by the wires from Europe, and the deplorable reports from China, have an effect in discouraging buyers, but are not by any means the principal influence. There can be little doubt that the strain upon the capital on this side of India, caused by the almost simultaneous demands of so many new companies, has been more than it could conveniently sustain, and the pressure has been greatly aggravated by the extreme caution of the banks, which discourages the most legitimate speculations by an indiscriminate refusal to make advances upon joint-stock shares. The Bombay banks have, we are happy to say, reversed their former policy in this respect; and a similarly politic and liberal movement here would aid largely in restoring the market.—Englishman, April 22.

The Hurkaru pronounces as follows on the same subject:—Bombay has apparently, to use an odd expression, fairly taken "the bull by the horns," that is, if the share-market panic in full bloom amongst the ducks may be called a "bull." We have extracted from the Bombay Gazette an article on the action taken by the Bank of Bombay at a most critical juncture of the market. This proceeding of the bank is well timed, and we cannot see that anything but good can result from a proper and careful administration of the advances proposed on some stock shares. We know the question has become more frequent, and is likely to be more closely asked in Calcutta, with reference to one or more of our City banks which have received very heavy deposits from the general public, how, to three-fourths, if not to all that general public, loans on well approved securities have been persistently refused. Caution is, or should be, the very soul of business, but caution may at times be carried too far. The position of this market is comparatively similar to our neighbours; abundance of capital, easy rates for money, and yet amongst a large section of the community a pressure and difficulty little short of, or if not amounting too frequently to, actual ruin. We do not anticipate any movement here on the part of the Bank of Bengal, although we are informed its able secretary is cheerfully lending his attention to the position.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CENTRAL PROVINCES, April 8.—Colonel Elliot's death took every one by surprise, as we were not even aware that he was so dangerously ill. He is much regretted by a large circle of acquaintances. Up to the last he subscribed and took an interest in all our public institutions, gardens, and societies. I hear that Major Meade at Indore is likely to get Colonel Elliot's appointment. Mr. Temple leaves us on the 17th instant, and the following will be the appointments created by his departure. Mr. Campbell will officiate as Chief Commissioner, Mr. Egerton as Judicial Commissioner, and Mr. Lyall, C.S., from Hoshungabad, as Commissioner of the Nagpore division, whilst Major Crichton, lately returned from England, will take Mr. Lyall's place as Deputy Commissioner of Hoshungabad. There are two appointments which have only been filled up temporarily, namely, Judge of the Small Cause Court at Nagpore, in which Mr. Drysdale is officiating, and Director of Public Instruction, in which Mr. Wyllie, Assistant Secretary, is acting, but Mr. Temple has intimated on the Bombay Government for two officers to fill those appointments. Some new appointments have been made in the Educational Department, Mr. Christopher Brits to officiate as head master of the Saugor school, and Mr. A. Drysdale, head master of the Kamptee school.—Delhi Gazette.

PRESENTATION OF MEDALS, &c., TO CLEARY.—The gallant young sailor Edward Cleary (says the Englishman) received his medals and testimonials on the 13th April, at sun-set; and the quiet spirit with which he bore his honors was in full keeping with his previous courage and daring. It was the same Cleary who went out during the cyclone last October, "just to see if anything was to be done." The same unconsciousness of self marked the man throughout this presentation, in the presence of the Viceroy, and with the Lieutenant Governor as the presenter. The patient recipient of all this glory, though he uttered no word, seemed really to find it a harder thing to bear than swimming the Hooghly with a hawser in his teeth. Cleary has just recovered from what Dr. Chevers describes as the very worst case he has known of cholera from which a patient has recovered. The effects of his late physical prostration, from which he is, as yet, but partially restored, were evident to every beholder, and his utter absence of pretensions and of all sense of having done anything more than his duty, disarmed envy, and carried all hearts with it. The Lieutenant Governor and several other gentlemen delivered addresses on the occasion. Mr. Beadon's opening remarks were as follows:—

"I have been asked by your friend, Mr. Roberts, to deliver to you, publicly, in the presence of your messmates, and of many others of the same calling as your own, the honorary and substantial rewards which have been assigned to you by the two excellent societies in our native country, the Royal Humane Society, and the Shipwrecked Mariners' Royal Benevolent Society. These rewards consist of a bronze medal from one of these societies, and a gold medal with a purse of ten sovereigns from the other. The purse which hold the sovereigns has been knitted by the fair hands of one of your countrywomen in Calcutta, and the money grant from the benevolent society is, I believe, the largest they have ever given. It affords me the greatest pleasure to be the instrument of conferring upon you these rewards, which you have so richly and deservedly earned by your gallant conduct in saving the captain and crew of the Gorindpore when wrecked in the cyclone of last October, and I trust that the medals may be carefully preserved in your family as a memorial of one of the bravest of the many brave acts for which British seamen have always been justly renowned throughout the world."

WASTE LANDS.—The Gazette of India has just published the rules for the granting of waste lands in British Burmah, alternative to those dated June 30, 1863. By these rules the land is divided into five classes, each of which is granted for a number of years free, and for a corresponding number at a fixed rate per acre. For instance, forest jungle or hill land is granted for thirty-two years free, for the succeeding eight years the rated assessment is four annas an acre, for the next eight years the rate is increased to eight annas, and during the following sixteen years it is raised to twelve annas an acre, making a total duration of sixty-four years. The other classes of land are granted in a similar manner, except that the periods of the grant diminish as the class of land increases in value. The most valuable class is the short grass jungle and fallow land, which is granted for only four years free, for other four years it is charged rates similar to that of the first class, and thus the whole period extends over only eight years. On the completion of the term of each grant it shall be at the option of the grantee to demand a settlement of the land revenue of his grant in perpetuity, at the yearly rent of one rupee and a-half per acre payable to Government, and this payment shall be the maximum rate payable for ever as land revenue for such grant. The nature of three-fourths of the land is to determine the class of the whole. No one grant is to be more than 10,000 acres, and none are to include fisheries, forests, &c. The lands assigned are to be the hereditary property of the grantee, provided he adheres to the terms on which he receives them; but if he neglect to do so, the grant is to be resumed: grantees must satisfy the local revenue officers that they possess capital necessary to cultivate during their lease according to a graduated scale. Each grant will be registered and surveyed; and in case of transfer, the deed of transfer must be attested by the principals or their agents. Forms of application may be obtained from any of the Deputy Commissioners or local revenue officers.—Hurkaru, April 22.

TESTS FOR THE STAFF CORPS.—The Secretary of State rules, and the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief concurs in the view, that an officer who has been preparing to pass the tests, and has but a short time to complete the period of probation required for admission to the Staff corps before his corps embarks, may remain in India on Indian pay and allowances, provided he may be fairly expected to pass the tests satisfactorily, and there is a vacancy to which he may be posted, or that his appointment does not unduly increase the number of reserve officers.

THE SUNDERBUNS RECLAMATION COMPANY.—The Englishman says:—In our last overland paper we announced the formation and favourable reception of one of those vast undertakings which are likely to do so much for India and for England, and the success of which will, in as great a degree, secure our rule and our revenue beyond all accidents, as they will lead to individual and national enrichment. We refer to the Sunderbuns Reclamation Company, which was ready to take off the hands of Government, at an average price, the whole Delta of the Ganges, by so doing rendering available to the State a large sum for the reproductive works now so urgently required, and bringing within the prospect of early utilisation lands which have lain waste for ages, and several hundred thousand acres of which can never be separately taken up by individual enterprise, except at a loss. Under the general term of Sunderbuns, the Government conceded to the company, without reservation, about two million acres of land. With this concession the project was launched upon the market. It appears, however, that the Viceroy had not fully apprehended the magnitude of the undertaking. The discovery that he had conceded so vast an area to one company was no sooner made than its novelty alarmed him into a revoke. Like the manager of a well-known bank in the olden times, who considered no security good enough to warrant his lending one man the enormous sum of three lakhs of rupees, the Viceroy felt that two millions of acres exceeded the limit of land with which one company, however powerful and well-supported, could be trusted.

THE CHURCH MISSION AT UMITSUR.—Yesterday, Sunday, the 9th April, the Bishop of Calcutta concluded his visitation at this station by confirming upwards of forty native Christians of various ages, from the almost grey beard of fifty to the tender orphan of fifteen. The ceremony was preceded by the ordinary evening service, which having concluded, the Bishop read, with great precision and singularly correct intonation, an address in the vernacular bearing on the importance of the ceremony he was about to perform. His Lordship then proceeded to the imposition of hands on all the candidates for confirmation one by one, and to judge by the earnestness he displayed was himself deeply impressed on the occasion. The Bishop left Umitsur on Monday morning by train, and proceeded on arrival at Lahore to the Government House. The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor invited all the clergy at Lahore, including the members of the American Presbyterian Mission, to meet his Lordship at breakfast, on Thursday morning, the 11th April.—Delhi Gazette.

A CONTRACT LAW FOR INDIA.—A Bill to regulate Contracts for Labour has been passed by the Bengal Council. It fixes minimum rate of wages below which no contracts will be recognised; these rates are Rs. 5, 4, and 3 per month for men, women, and children respectively. A "protector" of coolies is to be appointed with ministerial powers. He will travel through the districts where the emigrant labourers are mostly employed—the tea-plantations in the north-east of India. The coolies who desire the intervention of the "protector" must give at least forty-eight hours' notice before his arrival.

EARTHQUAKES.—In the Hurkaru of the 19th instant were recorded the earthquakes that happened on various dates at Nynee Tal, Simla, and Mussoorie. We hear that on the 11th there was one at Sabathoo, which, however, did no damage; and another at Roorkee on the 13th.

A CONFLAGRATION took place on the 8th April in the Sudder Bazaar, outside the city of Delhi, destroying many houses and lives. The fire originated in a stack of grass.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE AND THE TALOOQDARS.—The Oudh Gazette contains the following, which we fear is not of much significance:—"We congratulate the press and the public of England and India on the certain prospect of a speedy termination to the Oudh Talooqdarees question, which called forth such a spontaneous outburst of independent opinion, excited the fears of some, roused the indignation of many, and engaged the attention of all. Sir Charles Wood has sent peremptory orders to Sir John Lawrence to assure the Talooqdars of Oudh that the sunnuds granted to them by the Government of India, sanctioned by the Cabinet, and approved by the Parliament and the people of England, will be upheld to the letter."

THE LATE FINANCIER.—The Hurkaru says:—"In the plenitude of his pretensions to universality, Sir Charles Trevelyan wrote one of his usually clever 'minutes' on 'Dentistry in the Army,' the object of which, in common with many other equally sensible objects advocated by him, was that our soldiers should have their teeth kept in order without Government being put to any expense. We believe that it was his idea that army surgeons should be compelled to pass an examination in dentistry before getting their commissions. But, as army surgeons had quite enough to study, it was felt to be impossible to add to their tasks, and Sir Charles Trevelyan's scheme fell to the ground, like so many others of his clever but impracticable 'ideas.'"

THE DISTURBANCES AT TIPPERAH.—We learn from Tipperah that by the timely interference of the police, the armed bands collected by the contending chief have dispersed. Nilkissen Thakoor, without further disturbing the peace of the country, has petitioned the Governor-general that the title of Rajah Bahadur be not conferred on Beer Chunder Thakoor, till his appeal case has finally been disposed of by the Privy Council.—Hurkaru.

THE RAJPOOTANA APPOINTMENT is gazetted. Colonel W. F. Eden succeeds the late Colonel Elliott as Agent Governor-General; Major J. P. Nixon gets the political agency of Meywar, and Captain E. C. Impey that of Marwar. Colonel S. Blane will, it is surmised, succeed Captain Impey as Military Secretary to the Governor-General.—Delhi Gazette, April 8.

COTTON.—The Mofussilite of the 11th instant says that cotton in the bazaar here is offered for sale at Rs. 11-8, in the district at Rs. 10-8. The staple is of inferior quality, and can only be had in small quantities. Large holders will not sell. There is no doubt that the price of cotton will rise and go up to its former price of Rs. 24 per maund.

THE PUNJAB RAILWAY.—We learn from the official progress reports of the Punjab Railway for the half-year ending December, 1864, that in little less than six months sixty-eight miles of this railway had been laid, and that the Lahore and Mooltan section of 208 miles will be open for public traffic immediately.

THE BAR AND "THE LANGUAGES."—The Indian Daily News says:—"It is probable that a Government notification will shortly be issued inviting barristers to submit themselves to an examination in the vernacular languages, in view of appointments from the Bar to the judicial appointments likely to become vacant or to be created."

MR. TEMPLE.—From the Imperial Gazette we learn that Mr. Temple proceeds home shortly on leave for six months. Mr. J. S. Campbell, Judicial Commissioner, will officiate as Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, Mr. R. E. Egerton as Judicial Commissioner, and Mr. A. C. Lyall as Commissioner of the Nagpore Division.

BAD NEWS.—The Pioneer says:—"We are sorry to say that Mr. Massey is already ill. This augurs badly for the future. We hear that Mr. Muir is ailing also, and that Mr. G. Noble Taylor has had a relapse."

OFFICIAL TELEGRAMS FROM BHOOTAN.—From Dewangiri, from General Tombs, to Calcutta, to Colonel Norman (no date). We had heavy rain all last night at Dewangiri, and the troops, being without bedding or shelter, will, I fear, suffer. I shall evacuate the sixth, after destroying every stone building and the fine trees at the Rajah's house. I have had parties out scouring roads and jungles, but beyond wounded men have come across no other Bhootas. The enemy could not have lost less than two hundred men on the second; one hundred and twenty bodies have been counted, and we have upwards of forty prisoners, some of whom are badly wounded. Our own casualties will amount to eighty, but a great number of these are slightly wounded. From Koomreehatta, through Gowhatti, from General Tombs, to Calcutta, to Colonel Norman. April 7, 10 A.M.—Dewangiri was evacuated yesterday. Everything that could be destroyed, was. Not a Bhoota was seen. The country for miles deserted. Jugar Penlow, who is next in authority to the Toungsoo, was killed on the second. Sky very cloudy, every appearance of continued rain.

DEATH BY CHOLERA.—We regret to announce the death by cholera of Lieutenant Alexander, of the 22nd M. N. I., on the evening of the 10th inst., at Bangalore.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PROJECTED SANITARIUM.—Government are about to try whether the Puchmaree Hill, in the Central Provinces, can be used for the purpose of a sanitarium. With this view orders have been issued to clear it to a certain extent, and Captain Mackenzie, Commissioner of the Nerbudda division, has been directed to proceed there at once, and lay out plans for a station. The climate is said to be mild and genial, and a company of soldiers from Jubbalpore will be sent up as an experiment to see whether it will prove a sanitarium or not.

A COURT OF ENQUIRY, of which Colonel Halliday, 12th Regiment N. I. is president, has been sitting at Kamptee, to investigate charges of a social character, made against Captain Deacon, Paymaster of the Royal Regiment, which we fear will oblige that officer to resign the service.—Central India Times.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION AT NAGPORE.—It has been proposed by the Chief Commissioner to have an Exhibition, Rural and Industrial, at Nagpore in December or January next, and Government have promised to give 20,000 rupees towards it on condition that an equal sum is raised locally. We shall notice this more fully in our next.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN M'BRIDE.—We are sorry to announce the death of Captain John M'Brice, Assistant Commissary of Ordnance of the Madras Veteran Establishment, well known as a long resident in this station. The deceased officer landed in India in 1818 or '19, and was appointed to the Ordnance Department on the 27th December, 1825. He served with the force from Sholapore directed to proceed against Vuttoo in 1824, proceeded from Sholapore with the force ordered against Oomraige in 1825 in charge of a six-pounder gun, and lost his right eye by a gunshot wound at the assault of that place on the 28th February, 1825.—Central India Times.

COURTS OF REQUESTS.—We learn with some surprise that Brigadier General Shubrick, commanding at Kamptee, will not allow any of the officers under his command to be summoned before the Cantonment Joint Magistrate's Court, which is also the Small Cause Court for Kamptee. In most of the stations in the North-West Provinces Courts of Requests have been abolished where there are Courts of Small Causes. The Brigadier General, we believe, argues that Courts of Requests were established by Act of Parliament, and therefore a similar Act is necessary for their abolition, hence his objection to recognise Captain Playfair's Court.

LIEUT. COL. F. J. GOLDSMID.—The Governor-general in Council has been pleased to nominate Lieutenant-Colonel F. J. Goldsmid, Madras Staff Corps, to be Superintendent of the Indo-European Telegraph, vice Lieutenant-Colonel P. Stewart, deceased.

FEMALE NORMAL SCHOOL AT NAGPORE.—We hear that a Female Normal School is to be immediately established in the city of Nagpore, and that the services of a qualified European lady have been obtained for the Institution.

FAREWELL TO MR. TEMPLE.—Mr. Temple, Chief Commissioner for the Central Provinces, leaves India on the 14th May, on twelve months' visit to England. He has parted from his subjects amidst the most cordial demonstrations of esteem. The Rajah Janojee Bhonsla gave a splendid entertainment at the Toulsee Bagh of Nagpore in honour of Mr. Temple, when the Rajah delivered, in Hindustani, a speech highly eulogistic of the Commissioner, enumerating the great and substantial benefits which the Central Provinces have received from his enlightened and vigorous administration. A few days afterwards Mr. Temple held a farewell durbar, the Residency being illuminated with great splendour. There were present 150 native gentlemen, as well as most of the European residents of Nagpore. Mr. Temple addressed the assembly, especially thanking the honorary magistrates for the assistance they had rendered him.—Times of India.

MESSES IN MADRAS.—A correspondent of the Athenaeum and Daily News makes the following remarks on this subject:—"Where are those homes of bachelors, those well-kept and well-attended institutions, of which our Presidency was justly proud? and where are their supporters? Echo glances at the Army List, and forbears the time-honoured answer—where? Without deep research corps may be found with only one officer actually belonging to the regiment with it, and he not a dining member, whilst only three of the whole corps can ever more return to that regiment in the course of events. Staff corps men and officers of broken-up regiments you may attach in dozens to reap the benefit of the thrift or judgment of the former members of the mess, but they pay no donations, and are but birds of passage. The palmy days of regimental (N.I.) messes are numbered with the past, and yet the order is not issued to break up the messes, and give to members a fair share of their own (as has been done in Bengal and with the broken-up regiments), and unhappy local officers are to see the properties of the mess they have subscribed to for years unequally at the mercy of a shoal of outsiders. Let Government choose this opportunity to establish station messes wherever the Madras troops are stationed—let the allowances of the messes be given in proportion to the number of regiments, and you would again have creditable mess-houses, good messes and a great degree of tone pervading each cantonment. Most regiments march camp fashion, and they could lay in the stores before starting from the station mess, making over the surplus if they had any at the new station. Every year would add to the prosperity and wealth of a mess that never had to move."

MISSION INTO CENTRAL ASIA.—A flat contradiction is given by the Lahore Chronicle to the statement of the Friend of India regarding a proposed expedition into Central Asia. The Chronicle says:—"The Friend of India of the 13th inst. publishes a very circumstantial account of a proposed expedition into Central Asia, which he highly approves, and thinks ought to have been undertaken long ago. We feel grieved to awaken our contemporary from his pleasant dream, for really his statement is nothing less than visionary; but it is our stern duty to assure him that the Punjab Government has neither encouraged nor sanctioned any wild mission of the nature he describes, nor has it the least intention of doing so; and we may further express our belief that the head of the local administration never heard that such a scheme was afloat until he read the account in the Friend, who owes it to himself to explain from whence he derived his information, as people will, otherwise, be apt to think the canard was hatched at Serampore." Our Lahore correspondent writes to us, under date the 11th April, on the subject of this mission, as follows:—"After all, the proposed mission to Khokund has ended in smoke, Government having stepped in at the last moment and cruelly put an extinguisher on it by prohibiting the party from proceeding. Thus are crushed all the fond hopes of the enthusiastic individuals whose souls have for the last month been wrapped up in the thought of this romantic and lovely undertaking."

A FATAL MARCH.—The military station of Mhow seems destined to be continually associated with military errors and misfortunes of one kind or another. We deeply regret to learn that a grievous disaster has befallen a detachment of artillery consisting of one hundred Europeans which left Mhow on the 12th inst., en route for Kirkee. A march or two from Mhow they were attacked by cholera, and the detachment was obliged to return to Mhow with a loss of nearly one-third of the number. We trust that Government will institute an inquiry into the orders which have led to such a deplorable waste of life, and that no pains will be spared to ascertain the exact quarter in which the blame lies. The road through the jungle there is well known to be deadly at this season, and unless the military authorities at Mhow exerted themselves to prevent the march of these brave men, they are clearly responsible for their untimely deaths. If they did perform their duty in that respect, then a very grave responsibility rests elsewhere.—Times of India.

THE MAHARAJA HOLKAR AND HIS HAREM.—Preparations on a grand scale are being made, both at Indore and Mhow, on account of the Maharaja Holkar adding another lady to his harem. It is said the number already there is very great, among whom is an Englishwoman.—Letter in Bombay Catholic Examiner.

ATTEMPT ON THE LIFE OF AN OFFICER.—

A correspondent has kindly favoured us with the following account of an attempt, by a sowar, on the life of Major Mainwaring, of the 2nd Regiment Sind Horse:—"Jacobabad, April 10.—This morning a sowar of the 2nd Regt. Sind Horse, having obtained permission to absent himself from the quarter-guard, went to the bungalow of the officer commanding the regiment, Major Dick. He had, providentially, selected a longer route on his return from the parade-ground, and by so doing had unwittingly disappointed the man's expectations. Foiled here, he next visited the adjacent bungalow of the officer commanding the 1st Regt. Sind Horse; not finding that officer, and determined to secure some victim, he went to the next bungalow. Addressing Major Mainwaring's orderly, he asked to see the owner of the house, and to the orderly's rejoinder as to what he wanted, said that he had a request to make of the 'sahib.' Major Mainwaring chanced to overhear the conversation, and having come out, asked the man what he wanted. The sowar immediately levelled his carbine and fired at him; the first shot missed, and Major Mainwaring's orderly was just in time to render the contents of the second barrel useless by knocking up the carbine as it was being discharged. Breaking from the orderly, the sowar, with sword drawn, rushed at Major Mainwaring, who dodged the cut aimed at him, grappled with the man, and with the assistance of his orderly and servants secured him. Major Mainwaring, with the exception of a slight wound in the hand, escaped unscathed. While struggling with Major Mainwaring, the sowar received a rather severe sword-cut on the left arm and shoulder, from the orderly. The man is now awaiting trial in Jacobabad jail. He is a Mussulman; he had been refused furlough a short time before the occurrence, and disappointed in the special object of his revenge, determined to avenge himself on the class to which his intended victim belonged. Intoxication by spirituous liquor or drug, fanaticism, or insanity, do not seem to have actuated him.—Bombay Gazette.

COMMERCIAL PROSPECTS IN BOMBAY.—The Bombay Gazette gives rather a doleful account of commercial prospects in that Presidency. The troubles are accumulating in Bombay, pretty much in the same manner as the gathering clouds portend the storm. It is impossible to say whether the storm will burst right upon us, or pass lightly off. Although there is the most disastrous outlook ahead for Bombay, the confidence of the public has not been so much affected by the last American news announcing the capture of Richmond and Petersburg as the character of the news might have suggested. That confidence is maintained more by the apparent firmness of English feeling in the face of events that have almost put an end to the Southern Confederacy, than by the remotest expectation that any return to the old "prosperity" is in the least degree probable. But as the American struggle drags itself nearer and nearer to its issue, and the prospects of peace become more probable; as every day may bring a telegram from England announcing that the faith of English merchants is departing, the feeling in Bombay is very unsettled and desponding. The depots are still filled with cotton bales which no amount of shipments seems to diminish,—every day pouring in a fresh supply from the interior—and as much of the cotton has been purchased at a time when rates ruled double their present figures, the losses to large numbers of dealers will be immense. One of the most pregnant signs of the time is the closing of the share market. It has utterly collapsed for the present. Who could have prophesied such a catastrophe to speculation in Bombay four months ago? We might have indulged in the dream that shares would fall to a reasonable quotation, but the formal closing of the share market, never.

THE RAJAH OF BHUTPORE.—On his way to Hurdwar, the Rajah Bulwent Sing of Bhutpore paid a visit to Roorkee, and took the opportunity of inspecting the workshops. His Highness, who was attended by a number of native gentlemen, members of his court, appeared surprised and delighted with all that was shown him, and more especially with the castings in the foundry, under the immediate superintendence of the foreman. His Highness, who appears to be about fifteen years of age, is an intelligent looking youth, and displays much solicitude to learn something of everything calculated to improve the welfare of the people over whom he reigns. Before taking leave, the Rajah ordered the sum of Rs. 300 to be distributed among the workmen.

RETURN OF NATIVE REGIMENTS FROM CHINA.

—A letter from Hong Kong, dated the 19th of March, says:—"The head-quarters of the 22nd Regt. N.I., consisting of Col. Beale and 607 men and officers, left Hong Kong in the sailing ship Oasis on the morning of the 16th inst. The men were very much crowded and inconvenienced. A medical board had protested against more than 500 men being put on board this ship, which is only 1,116 tons register. The remaining portion of the 22nd Regt. leave Hong Kong about the 25th inst. in the ship Jane Leech, 910 tons register, and consists of 126 men and native officers, under Major J. G. Scott. They are expected to take about fifty days on the passage. There were several steamers fit, and could have been got for £5,000, capable of conveying the whole regiment, and the voyage could have been accomplished in twenty days. But no; the removal of the native troops had caused Indian pay to cease in Hong Kong, so no consideration was likely to be shown. The Oasis was taken up for £1,750, and the Jane Leech tendered at £13 a-head, for the 126 men. The amount of money Government will lose by their proceeding is just £4,600, as the men's rations cease on reaching India. The men are many of them in a very sickly state, and with a fifty days' voyage feeding on parched gram and other dry food, it may be safely assumed that there will be numerous cases of scurvy among them. But there is no Mansfield in China to protect native soldiers. The sepoys feel acutely the way they have been treated in China, and they may not unlikely spread reports that would deter native regiments from again embarking for the Celestial Empire.—Times of India.

SIGNS OF THE SEASON.—In nearly all parts of India the heat has been excessive, less rain than usual having fallen; but there has recently been rain in Southern India, and an early monsoon is generally expected. There have been a great number of isolated cases of cholera in many parts of India; but in nearly every instance the proximate cause is apparent, as,—impure or stagnant water—foul accumulations on the windward of cantonments and villages—or the crowding together of travel-worn and dirty pilgrims. In nearly all these circumstances foresight and energy would avert the danger. An instance where these qualities were exercised, and probably several lives saved thereby, should be named. At Kurrachee one or two cases of cholera had occurred in the 23rd Regt. N.I., but the commanding officer, Major Campbell, being promptly and efficiently assisted by the managers there of the Scinde Railway, was enabled to remove the whole of the troops in the course of twelve hours.—Times of India.

VERY SAD.—The Chaplain of Anarkullee has great cause of complaint against certain members of the congregation who write their names, but more frequently only their initials, in a most illegible manner, on the cards they put into the offertory plate. We have one or two before us now, of which it is impossible to make anything. One card is inscribed with the single word "Miss," no doubt by mistake. Lahore Chronicle.

HOTEL ACCOMMODATION.—The Bombay Gazette says:—"If there were ever a real need in Bombay it is that of hotel accommodation, a most amusing incident in connection with which has recently occurred. The P. and O. Company's steamer Ottawa, which arrived from China on Sunday last, brought on to Bombay a large number of Australian and other passengers who, unable to proceed by the corresponding steamer at Galle, and unable, also, to procure hotel accommodation at the latter place, determined on coming to Bombay, for the purpose of being conveyed to England by the steamer of the 29th. On arrival here they found the Orissa, the boat which takes on the next mail, full to overflowing; and as to hotel accommodation, there was none of any kind whatever to be had. In this emergency the Superintendent of the P. and O. Company permitted these unfortunate passengers to be located on board the Ottawa, an advantage which, they assure us, it took but little time to appreciate. Now, in the first place, there never was such an opportunity for the display of individual cleverness and joint-stock enterprise as at the present time, in the formation of a good hotel company; the thing, if properly managed, would pay magnificently. In the second, a line of steamers to run on alternate fortnights with the P. and O. would be an immense boon. It is to be hoped Messrs. Sterns, Hobart and Co. will persevere in their efforts, and not be deterred by any illiberality of patronage they may at first experience. The want of a second line of steamers is severely felt, and that want the above-named gentlemen can supply far better than any Messageries Imperiales Company.

THE BOMBAY EXHIBITION.—The Gazette says:—"We are glad to learn that there is now no doubt of the scheme of an International Exhibition for Bombay being carried out next year. The difficulty of obtaining money in these hard times from a great number of petty shareholders has induced the promoters of the Exhibition to determine to wind up the joint-stock company, and to rely upon a system of guarantees. The leading native gentlemen of the Presidency have come nobly forward to save Bombay from the disgrace and ridicule of a collapse of this grand undertaking, and the sum of twenty-five lakhs, to be raised it is hoped to forty-five lakhs, has already been guaranteed. The guarantors have resolved to appoint Mr. T. C. Hayllar managing director in Bombay. The Governor, who takes the warmest interest in the project, has applied to the Governor-General to become the Indian patron of the Exhibition, her Majesty the Queen having graciously consented to accept the office of patron in England, and it is anticipated that the Prince of Wales will now become president of the home committee.

WEEKLY COMMUNICATION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND BOMBAY.—A memorial from the members of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce to Lord Stanley of Alderley in support of the London merchants' memorial for a weekly mail to India on a fixed day of the week, and praying for the establishment of a weekly mail in the same manner from Bombay to England, was transmitted through the Government of Bombay by the mail of the 14th inst.—Times of India, April 28.

MEET ME BY MOONLIGHT ALONE.—The Times of India has "received an authenticated letter from a resident at an out-station, complaining that a letter was addressed to his wife by an officer asking her to meet him clandestinely. She handed the letter to her husband, who sends us the name of the officer inculpated, and requests us to publish the facts of the case."

THE ROHILLAS are reported to be getting troublesome again in the Nizam's territories, and some gang robberies having taken place a party of Arab troops have been despatched against them.

FAREWELL TO LADY FRERE.—The Student's Literary and Scientific Society presented an address to Lady Frere, on the occasion of her departure to England. A deputation waited on her ladyship at Government-house, Parell. It was received with great kindness by the Governor and Lady Frere; Miss Frere, Lord John Hay, and the private secretaries being also present.

THE CHOLERA has broken out in the lines of the 23rd N.L.I. at Kurrachee. Ten of the corps have died, and the authorities, to prevent the further spread of the scourge, have ordered them to move into tents. A special train conveyed some of the sepoys with their families to Landi, where they will stay while the epidemic lasts.

BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

RETIRING PENSIONS OF CHAPLAINS.

April 5.—No. 3,205.—The Gov. gen. in Council directs the publication of the following despatch from the Right hon. the Secy. of State for India, No. 32, dated Feb. 17.

The rules contained in this despatch supersede those published in the Gazette of India of Oct. 15, 1864:—

Financial.—No. 32.

India Office, London, Feb. 17.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in Council your Ecclesiastical letter, dated Dec. 8 last, No. 13, in which you recommend for favourable consideration the proposition of the Bishop of Calcutta, that chaplains who may retire prior to the occurrence of a vacancy in the senior chaplaincies, and who would consequently only receive a pension of £292 per annum, may be admitted to the increased pension of £365 as soon as a vacancy occurs, which would render pensions of that amount available.

2. On a reconsideration of the whole question, and the inconvenience shown to be likely to arise from not limiting the period of chaplain's service, H.M.'s Government are of opinion that, instead of acceding to the proposition now submitted, it would be better, for the interests of the service, that the following rules should be published in substitution of those sanctioned in my financial despatch of the 30th July last, No. 186, to take effect from the 15th October last, the date of the publication of that despatch in India:—

I.—A chaplain retiring after completing the full period of service, as prescribed by Government regulations, shall receive a pension of £365 per annum. This rule to come into operation in each Presidency as soon as either of the two senior chaplaincies in that Presidency is vacant.

II.—Every chaplain shall be compelled to retire after 25 years from the date of the commencement of his service in India, unless specially retained in the service by the Secretary of State for India in Council on the recommendation of the Governor General in Council or Governor in Council of his Presidency. This rule to come into operation in three years.

III.—During the next three years the second chaplain may succeed to the senior chaplaincy, and the third to the second chaplaincy; but if either of them accepts that advantage, he thereby forfeits his claim to the increased pension. After three years there shall be no more appointments to the two senior chaplaincies, but the incumbents then existing, if any, may retain them, unless they fall under the operation of Rule II. The incumbents now existing, in order to entitle themselves to the increased pension, must resign before the end of three years.

IV.—The lower rates of pension payable to chaplains compelled by ill health to retire after a shorter period of service, shall remain as at present.

I have, &c.,

In para. 1 the words "otherwise than by sea," are to be inserted after the words "proceeding on public duty."

The following will be substituted for the 5th and 6th paras. of the G.O. above adverted to.

5. When a commissioned or warrant officer is ordered to travel on public duty under any of the above conditions, he must apply to the divisional officer of the quarter master gen.'s dept., or, if time does not admit of a reference to the head quarters of the division, to the brig. or station staff officer on the spot, who will furnish him with either a railway pass, or passage order by any vessel or conveyance by which free or contract passages can be provided, on which pass or order is to be entered a copy of the general, divisional, or garrison order referred to in para. 2.

When no railway pass or passage order can be provided, a certificate to that effect is to be given to the officer.

6. The charge for conveyance supplied on Govt. pass or passage order will be adjusted as heretofore; the officer's certificate that the passage was provided, and, in the case of vessels, that he was messaged on board from, and to such a date, being the only other voucher required. Bills for other passages, vouched by the same certificates and by a certified copy of the order to proceed at the public expense, will be payable on demand to the person supplying the passage by the nearest paymaster; or, if the officer has to pay for his passage, he can recover the amount in the usual way.

INDIAN PAY DURING ABSENCE.

No. 357.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secy. of State for India, No. 52, dated 25th Feb. last, is published for general information:—

MILITARY No. 52.

India Office, London, Feb. 25, 1865.

To His Excellency the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

Sir,—Your letter dated 21st Dec. last, No. 491, solicits instructions whether an officer of a British regt. which may be ordered home, and embark not long before the completion of his period of probation, may be allowed to continue in India on Indian pay and allowances, in order to complete the period, pass the tests, and join the staff corps.

2. Your Government are of opinion that, if there is any vacancy for the officer so situated to fill on his passing, or if his joining the staff corps will not unduly increase the number of reserve officers, he may be allowed to remain, provided fair reason for expecting him to pass the tests satisfactorily can be shown, and the application is supported by the head of his department and by the Commander-in-Chief.

3. I agree in the view taken by your Government on this subject.

4. This despatch has been submitted to, and has received the concurrence of, the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief.—I have, &c.,

DR. F. ANDERSON.

No. 358.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 54 of Feb. 28 last, is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 54.

India Office, London, Feb. 28, 1865.

To H.E. the Right. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—With your letter dated Jan. 6, No. 13, you transmit papers relative to a question raised by Dr. F. Anderson, deputy inspector general of hospitals, as to whether an officer of the Indian medical service can retire on half-pay under the same conditions as are necessary in the case of an officer of the British medical department, i.e., without residing in a temperate climate for the usual term of a furlough.

2. My despatch dated May 16 last (No. 152, para. 15), out of which this question has arisen, referred to officers compelled to leave the service on account of ill health, and entitled to half pay pension under present regulations. By those regulations an officer is precluded from retiring from the service on half pay pension in India. Under these circumstances, the view taken by your Govt. is quite correct, viz., that my despatch referred to merely altered the rate of pension and did not affect the rule of the service, which requires an officer, to entitle him to half pay pension, first to try the effects of a temperate climate.—I have, &c.,

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO STAFF OFFICERS.

No. 387.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 61, dated March 9, 1865, is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 61.

India-office, London, March 9, 1865.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

SIR,—I have considered in Council the correspondence regarding the grant of leave to officers of the British service holding staff appointments in India, forwarded with para. 9 of your letter No. 462, dated Dec. 21, 1864.

In reply to an inquiry made by H.E. the C. in C., you have informed H.E. that, as all officers, whether of the British or Indian service, holding staff appointments in India, and retaining these appointments whilst on leave to Europe, must obtain such leave from the Government in G.G.O., it appears to the Gov. gen. in Council desirable that they should obtain leave under the same terms and for such periods as may be fixed by the medical committee in accordance with the rules laid down in the New Furlough Regulations, and that British officers proceeding to England as staff officers, with retention of appointment, should appear, therefore, before the same board as Indian officers similarly situated, viz., the Army Medical Board at the Presidency.

I approve of this decision, which has been communicated to H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C., with the suggestion that all such officers desirous of obtaining extension of leave in England, with retention of appointment to the full extent allowed by the New Furlough Regulations, should make their application to this office.

H.R.H. has expressed his concurrence in this arrangement.—I have, &c.,

(Signed)

C. WOOD.

REGIMENTAL ALLOWANCES—ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

No. 388.—The following mily. letter from the Right Hon. the Secy. of State for India, No. 69, dated March 9, is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 69.

India Office, March 9.

H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

SIR,—I have considered in Council your military letter, No. 37, dated Jan. 21, recommending, with reference to my despatch, No. 266, of Aug. 26, 1864, that the rule hitherto in force in Bengal, by which officers serving in the ordnance dept. are granted regimental allowances at the field rate, wherever stationed, may be extended to the same class of officers at Madras and Bombay, in which presidencies officers now draw pay at full or half batta rates according to their location.

2. As these appts. may be considered in one sense as regtl. appts., and as the distinction between half and full batta stations as affecting regtl. officers as well as non-commissioned officers and soldiers has been recently abolished, I shall not object to the proposed rule with regard to the pay of officers of the ordnance dept.

3. This measure, as you observe, will place all on the same footing, the only exception being that of ordnance officers at the Presidency, who, like other staff officers similarly situated, draw Presidency rates of house rent.—I have, &c., Signed, C. WOOD.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, May 24, 1865.

A NEW PHASE OF THE INDIAN ARMY QUESTION.

THE vote in the House of Commons upon the claims of Indian officers is to result in another Royal Commission, to inquire how far the recommendations of the first have been carried out. Lord Dufferin has made this announcement in the House of Lords since our last publication; and the general opinion expressed, both in and out of doors, is that the Government have adopted the best possible means not to give satisfaction. A conclusion in which nothing is concluded is usually considered an anomaly; but an inquiry into what everybody knows is something worse. In the one case the insufficiency may be supplied, but in the other the loss of time is beyond recall, and is the more vexatious from being utterly unnecessary.

The debate which arose from the motion of Lord Donoughmore on this subject was more animated and to the point than that elicited by Captain Jervis in the other House. Lord Dufferin represented the official side of the question with a vigour which lost nothing from his suavity; and, if anybody could persuade people who happen to know better, that the utmost has been done in the case of the claimants that the most unremitting diligence and determination could effect, and that the condition of the said claimants has been greatly improved instead of greatly injured by the change complained of—that man would be the noble lord. But people who happen to know better are apt to be obstinate; so Lord Dufferin made no impression upon the best informed of the Peers, who, besides putting the Ministerial vision right in some matters of fact, reminded their lordships that after all the question is not one of legality. Whatever be the law of the case, argued Lord Lyveden, the claimants have been treated ungenerously and shabbily; and the honour of the country, added Lord Houghton—who said no more, doubtless, than Lord Lyveden meant—is involved in the liquidation of the claims. The speakers who attempted to support the views of the Government showed, upon some material points, a very imperfect acquaintance with the subject. It was stated, for instance, that the principal grievance—in relation to the Staff Corps—had not been admitted by the Royal Commission. This misapprehension is founded upon the fact that the Commissioners declared that, as far as promotion was concerned, they could not think the retention upon the cadres of their old regiments of the names of officers transferred to the Staff Corps, was practically a departure from the assurance given by Parliament. But they added that the rules upon which the Staff Corps has been formed, which give superior rank to many of the officers selected for the Corps, and so cause extensive supercession, are a just ground of complaint, and an unnecessary departure from the Parliamentary guarantee—the latter point being the whole gist of the question, so far as the Staff Corps is concerned.

But the most important avowal made by the apologists of Government was that of Lord Cranworth, who let us into the truth of the principle upon which the case seems to have been judged. The claimants, he declared, had been denied a full measure of satisfaction because it was found impossible to accord it. The Amalgamation measure did not admit of a full concession of the advantages which they had enjoyed under the old system. The great difficulty in the way of an adjustment was the "unfortunate clause" which gave the guarantee. The claimants had no legal rights, and the clause should never have been made a part of the Act. Such an opinion, coming as it does from the learned lord, may well be regarded with astonishment. Lord Cranworth may not object to have the decision of the Commission, of which he was the head, set at nought in several important respects. That he should choose to waive his own dignity in the matter is his affair. But when he accepted the office he accepted the basis upon which the deliberations of the Commissioners were to be made. He accepted the guarantee, in fact, and was bound to respect it as the test of the claims which he undertook to investigate. His legal opinion was not asked for, irrespective of the condition by which the Legislature was bound. It is too much, therefore, that he should now come forward and prejudice the case by the gratuitous assertion that the officers of the Indian army had no legal rights, and that the "unfortunate clause" should never have been allowed. The clause may be unfortunate as far as presenting a difficulty is concerned. The work of amalgamation might doubtless have been much simplified by ruining the Indian officers out of hand. But the Government which the learned lord goes so far out of his way to support, never intended proceeding to this extremity. There are many cases in which fair dealing is less convenient than unfair dealing, in which a disregard of honesty would come particularly handy; but States as well as individuals usually accept the condition as necessary to their own honour, and paramount to all other considerations. It is to be regretted, therefore, that Lord Cranworth's too exclusively legal view of this matter should have blinded his better judgment, and caused an inference which can scarcely be in accordance with his real sentiments. If Sir Charles Wood has been actuated by the same reasoning to regard the "unfortunate clause" as an undeserved concession, his own unwillingness to carry out its provisions is sufficiently explained.

But Lord Cranworth, and those whom he may have influenced in this matter, must remember an important fact. The "unfortunate clause" was a deliberate vote of the Legislature, and conferred whatever legal rights may have been previously wanting. It was because such legal rights were doubtful, or difficult of enforcement, that the provision was made. The Royal Commissioners declared that the guarantee had been violated in several important respects; and it being clearly shown that the Government, though consenting to make concessions in some particulars, had still failed to give it full effect, the House of Commons came to another vote on the subject. This vote, we regret to find, has not been met in a satisfactory manner. There was no need for another Royal Commission, for the delay and vexation of further consideration, another report, more discussion, and with no security that the claims, however fully admitted, will be satisfied in the end. As for the inherent difficulties of amalgamation, the argument is one which the Government have no right to employ. The objections to the measure were pointed out at the time by the first Indian authorities—including Lord Canning, Sir James Outram, and Sir John Lawrence—who declared, in fact, the fusion to be incompatible with justice to the Indian officers. The Government, having undertaken the task, have surely no right to complain if the responsibility is now urged upon them. That the position of the claimants can be maintained in its integrity we do not, of course, suppose; but something more in the way of equivalents they have a right to expect, and these, we trust, will not be withheld in the end, however unpromising may be the present delay.

CAPT. BENJAMIN MORTIN FESLING, K.H., R.N., died lately at Hill House, Dorchester-road, Weymouth, aged seventy-one. He served on the East India and China station in H.M.S. Tyne, twenty-four; and Wellesley, seventy-four, from 1814 to 1816.

BOOKS.

A Digest of Moohummudan Law, on the Subjects to which it is Usually Applied by British Courts of Justice in India. Compiled and translated from authorities in the original Arabic, with an Introduction and Explanatory Notes. By Neil B. E. Baillie, Member of the Royal Asiatic Society, &c. Smith, Elder, and Co.

This "digest," which extends to a volume of 800 pages, is, we are told by the author in his preface, intended to exhibit the doctrines of the Hanifaea sect on all the subjects to which the Moohummudan law is usually applied by British Courts of Justice in India. The Hanifaea is the first, and by far the most numerous of the four Soonee or orthodox schools of Moohummudan lawyers. Its doctrines are law throughout the Turkish Empire, and generally throughout the Mussulman countries of Asia, with the exception of Persia, where the Shia is the prevailing sect. The Nawab Viziers of Oude were of this persuasion, but so long as they preserved a nominal allegiance to the Sovereigns of Delhi, the Hanifaea code remained the law of the province. Since they attained independent regal dignity the Hanifaea has been gradually superseded by the Imameea code, which Mr. Baillie believes to be now administered by the British Government to Mussulmans of the province as the recognised law. The present work is founded chiefly on the great digest of Moohummudan Law, compiled by command of the Emperor Arumgebe Alumgeer, and known as the Futawa Alumgeeree. That work, having been compiled in India, and by the authority of a Mussulman sovereign, should, the author thinks, have been adopted as the standard authority for its courts of justice. "It was," he adds, "perhaps, thought too voluminous for translation; and the preference for that purpose was given to the Hidayah, which was first translated into Persian by learned natives of that country, and from the Persian language translated into English by Mr. Charles Hamilton. This adoption of the Hidayah has rendered it necessary to keep that work in view wherever it may seem to differ from the authorities to which the compilers of the Futawa Alumgeeree have given the preference. I have not confined my use of it to these points, but have freely quoted from the Hidayah and its two celebrated commentaries, the Kifayah and Mayah, as well as other available authorities, wherever I thought it necessary for a more complete exposition of the law." Such is the scope and plan of the work. With regard to the execution, we need only say that it appears marked by care and efficiency; and that the arrangement and references are well adapted for convenience in consultation. It has also had the advantage of revision by Mr. William Macpherson, barrister-at-law, and formerly Master in Equity of the Supreme Court at Calcutta.

THE LATE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN INDIA.
—Sir Hugh Rose, accompanied by Major Burne, A.D.C., arrived in London on Sunday morning last, from Paris.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

CLAIMS OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

After several petitions had been presented from officers of the Indian army complaining of the manner in which the amalgamation with the army of the Queen had been effected, the Earl of DONOUGHMORE at some length directed attention to the grievances under which the petitioners were suffering, and expressed a hope that Government would take the matter into their serious consideration, and, if necessary, agree to a commission of inquiry.

Lord DUFFERIN, speaking in behalf of the Indian Government, contended that if any grievances had ever existed, they had not only been removed by the arrangements recently made, but the position of these officers was better now than previously. He intimated, however, that a commission would be issued to inquire how far the recommendations of the former commission had been carried out.

Lord LYVEDEN expressed an opinion that the Indian Government had treated the officers of the Indian army in a shabby and ungenerous spirit, for from the first, so far from attending to their complaints, they had declined to carry out the recommendations of a Royal Commission in their favour. Instead of suspending the matter by commission after commission, it would be much better to meet these complaints in a wise and liberal manner.

Lord HOUGHTON strongly supported the claims of the petitioners, which were disputed by the Duke of ARGYLE. Observations were also made by Lord CRANWORTH in explanation of the proceedings of the last commission; and the Earl of DONOUGHMORE, in briefly replying, ridiculed the appointment of another commission.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 15.

THE INDIAN MEDAL.

Mr. W. MILLER asked the Secretary of State for India when the return moved for on the 20th of March, relative to the grant of the Indian medal to the troops and police employed in suppressing the mutiny and rebellion in the Bombay presidency, would be laid upon the table; and why had no action been taken on Lord Elphinstone's protest to satisfy the troops and police who were promised the medal, and then refused by the Commander-in-Chief (especially in regard to the police, who were under the civil power, and not subject to any control whatever from the Commander-in-Chief); and on what principle did the Secretary of State for India explain the distinction he had made in granting the medal to the men at Kolaporn, under General Jacob, and denying it to those who were engaged in other parts of the Bombay presidency.

Sir C. WOOD said, in reply to the first part of the question, that the delay in the production of the return had been the result of sickness in the department, which had crippled its efficiency; but he believed that the desired information would be laid before the House in the course of a few days. With regard to the second question, he had to state that he was not aware what was meant by the protest of Lord Elphinstone, and the fact was that he could not find any trace of such a document. In answer to the third question, he had to say that the Bombay Government, as well as the Commander-in-Chief, were of opinion that the force employed in that particular service to which the hon. gentleman referred were not entitled to the medal; and the Indian Government arrived at a similar conclusion. It was asked why the medal was given to the Madras force while it was denied to the Bombay force. But the fact was that it was not given generally to either the one or the other of those two bodies. The principle adopted in the case of the Bombay force was to give it to those men who had been engaged in the field against the enemy, and to confine it to them exclusively.

STAFF CORPS PROMOTION IN MADRAS.

Mr. HEYGATE asked the Secretary of State for India whether any return had been furnished by the Madras authorities in India, showing the effect of the staff corps promotions on the lieutenant-colonels of the local service in that presidency; what had been the effect on these lieutenant-colonels by the brevet promotions which were to remedy the supersession caused by the staff corps warrant; and if he would lay upon the table of the House copies of any representations from the Government of India, Madras, or Bombay, and from the commanders-in-chief of the presidencies respecting army arrangements ordered by the Secretary of State for India in 1861.

Sir C. WOOD said the Government had determined to recommend Her Majesty to appoint a commission to inquire into the subject.

CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA.

Mr. TORRENS asked the Secretary of State for India when it was intended that the new rule for open competitive examinations for the civil service in India, fixing the maximum limit of age at twenty-one years, was to have effect; and whether there would be any objection to postpone its operation until such a time that it could not injuriously effect persons who had studied for the examinations under the belief that the old rule, making the maximum limit twenty-two years, would not be altered; and what publicity had been given to the new rule; whether its publication by the Civil Service Commissioners or the Secretary of State had been confined to the note at the foot of the printed "Regulations for the Open Competition of 1865," or had it been published in the English, Irish, Scotch, Colonial, or Indian official gazettes, as well as in some of the London and provincial newspapers.

Sir C. WOOD stated that the new regulations with respect to the civil service examinations in India would take effect in 1866.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 16.

EAST INDIA CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. A. MILLS drew attention to the existing regulations for examination of candidates for the civil service in India; and moved an address for copy of all correspondence on the subject between the India Office and the Civil Service Commissioners which had not yet been laid before Parliament. The hon. member said that the system of competitive examination had been established ten years ago, and he would now therefore discuss any of the questions which had arisen as to whether it was or was not an improvement of the system which it displaced. The point he wished to raise was simply the present system so constructed as to secure to the civil service the best possible class of servants. The examination papers under the fourth regulations gave a list of twelve or thirteen subjects, and required that every candidate should be "examined only in the following branches, viz., English language history, literature, and composition; the language, literature, and history of Greece, Rome, France, Germany, and Italy; mathematics, pure and mixed; chemistry, geology, mineralogy, the moral sciences and logic, &c. What he should suggest was that the candidates should have the option of selecting three or four subjects out of the list, and be limited to three or four—(hear). This would be a great advantage to the examiners themselves, although he did not presume to pry into the mysteries of marks, because he thought the examiners would then be able to concentrate their attention with more effect on each case, and to decide more accurately as to the qualities of the young men. He proposed this change also in the interest of the public service itself. They might be told that the present system had worked well; and he found, from a paper lately read by Mr. Horace Mann, on the subject of "The Civil Service of India," that out of fifty candidates, thirty-five were approved, and only five plucked. It was a remarkable fact, that the proportion of candidates from Oxford and Cambridge had gone on gradually diminishing since that system had been established. That was manifestly a circumstance which should excite serious attention, and which should be regarded with some regret. Another subject which deserved careful consideration was the existence of the practice of allowing the young men, after they had passed the examinations, to remain for many months in London without subjecting them to any kind of control. He would not undertake to say how far that practice ought to be changed; but it would certainly be desirable to impose, if possible, some checks on the abuses it was apt to occasion. The object they ought all to have in view in that matter was to obtain the best servants they could for India, and, at the same time, to do nothing to damage the cause of education in England. The hon. gentleman concluded by moving for a copy of the correspondence.

Mr. B. COCHRANE seconded the motion.

After a discussion in which Mr. Neate, Lord Stanley, Mr. H. Seymour, Mr. Smollett, Mr. G. Duff, Mr. P. Hennessey, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Torrens, Sir F. Heygate, and Mr. Vansittart took part,

Sir C. WOOD said, with regard to the competitive examination referred to at the time when the noble lord was Secretary for India, if he remembered rightly, there were thirty vacancies to be competed for, and that the examination of the 400 who appeared was of the most elementary character—reading, writing, and ciphering. He should not go into the question of competitive examination generally. The real question which the hon. gentleman wished to raise was as to the examination as it stood for the India civil service. The principle of the system was that it should be open to all British subjects in all parts of the world and of all colour. It was only just to the natives of India that they should have their choice. At the last examination a very intelligent Hindoo was successful, and now held a situation in the civil service in India. He hoped the education now given to the natives would enable them to qualify themselves for taking a share in the civil service of their country—(hear, hear). The system of competitive examination should be so open as to embrace persons educated in any portion of the empire, either at the universities or at schools, public or commercial. Such an examination was not to be regarded as a test of knowledge on any particular subject so much as of general capacity and intellectual ability. If honourable gentlemen would read the names of the commissioners, among whom were those of Lord Macaulay and the Rev. Henry Melvill, they would see that they were men who were not likely to recommend any system which would deter university men from coming forward. It was not his own belief that the system tended to discourage university men. He admitted that the number of university candidates had fallen off, and he was sorry for it, because, independently of their education, their character eminently fitted them for the duties of the service. But the circumstance referred to by the noble lord was quite sufficient to account for that falling off. He had been informed that better opportunities of advancement for such men now existed in this country, and that they were not disposed to go to India. Besides, a great increase and a great improvement had taken place in other educational establishments in the kingdom, and more candidates capable of competing came forward. His attention had been called to the subject brought forward by the hon. gentleman opposite, and he had referred to the civil service commissioners on the subject. Although the tendency of the competitive examination was to encourage cramming, still it seemed to be thought that the object which the hon. gentleman opposite had in view might be attained by a more careful system of marking. The hon. gentleman referred to the change which had been made as to remaining a longer time in this country. It was perfectly true that the great object they sought in the further examination was mainly the attainment of a knowledge of administration of the law, not a theoretical acquaintance, but a practical knowledge of its mode of administration. There was hardly a civil servant in India who had not more or less to administer judicial or quasi-judicial duties. He might be a judge, or a magistrate, or a revenue collector; and the attendance was required at the courts in order that the party might see how justice was administered, and acquire the knowledge which was essential to the proper performance of their functions in India. Hence the year which heretofore was passed in the presidency was now passed in London. There was no doubt a further question as to whether an establishment in the immediate neighbourhood of London similar to what Haileybury was, should be formed for their reception. That was a subject which had been considered. It had been urged that a very large portion of the candidates who passed the year in London stayed with their families or other relatives, and had therefore a moral superintendence over their conduct which could not be exerted to the same extent in a college. Their opinion upon the matter was reserved until they saw how the thing worked; and if their experience should show such an institution to be necessary the Government would not shrink from any consideration of expense. The Government of India were strongly of opinion that it was indispensable not to increase the ultimate high limit of age in the civil service—that was that they, the parties, should not go out to India older than they did hitherto; and, therefore, being kept longer in this country, it was indispensable to reduce the age at which they were taken. Their object in providing for the service of India was to go into the world at large, to throw their net as widely as they could, to get well-educated people wherever they found them, in whatever they might be educated, whether Latin, Greek, Sanscrit, French, or German, mathematics or moral science, whether trained in the commercial schools or the universities, if educated up to a certain point and possessing the qualifications which the Government required. With regard to the motion before the House the papers were being printed, and would be published in the appendix to the report of the civil service commission.

Mr. A. MILLS said he would be glad if the right hon. gentleman would lay the papers on the table.

Sir C. WOOD had not the slightest objection to produce them. The only point of objection which occurred to him was as to their being printed in a separate form, causing an unnecessary expense.

The motion was then withdrawn.

TRANSFER OF INDIAN NAVAL OFFICERS.

Mr. MITCHELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether, in the event of the transfer of Singapore from his department to that of the colonies, full provision would be made for the continued employment of naval officers holding command under him in the Straits of Malacca.

Sir C. WOOD replied that he did not understand the question.

Mr. MITCHELL explained that there were certain officers employed at that moment in the Straits of Malacca, and they found that under the recent changes they would be superseded by officers of the Royal navy.

Sir C. WOOD promised to make inquiries, and answer on a later day.

LIGHTHOUSES AT CEYLON.

Mr. B. COCHRANE asked the President of the Board of Trade to lay upon the table a copy of all correspondence which had passed since 1854 between the colonial government of Ceylon, the Board of Trade, and the Colonial Office, respecting the lighthouse to be erected on the Basses Rocks, Ceylon, and of any reports referring to the same.

Mr. M. GIBSON said the whole correspondence was already upon the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 18.

Petitions were presented by Sir F. KELLY, from Capt. Wm. Phillips of the Bengal Native Infantry, retired on half-pay, praying for his sick leave to count as service to enable him to retire on full pension, with a step of honorary rank, and such remedy as to the House may seem just. From Mr. F. M. Lewin for alteration in the rules for examination for the Indian Civil Service. By Mr. DUTTON, from Capt. T. C. J. Brownlow, 2nd in command of Bengal Cavalry, and from Wellesley Campbell, Lieut. in the Bengal Army, complaining of violation of rights secured to them by Parliamentary guarantees, and praying for redress.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MAY 19.

THE INDIA OFFICE BILL.

The India Office Bill was read a second time with the Public Offices (site and approaches) Bill, after a few words from Lord REDESDALE and Lord LONGFORD.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 19.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

Mr. G. DUFF called attention to the manner in which the information required to be laid before Parliament by the Government of India Act was supplied.

Mr. KENNAIRD thought the spirit of the law was not complied with, and suggested that if the Government could not draw up a summary of the Indian documents, it might, at least, order a larger number of copies of the reports printed in India to be laid on the table of the library.

Sir C. WOOD was understood to state that, for use, the text of these documents was better than a mere summary.

MEDALS FOR INDIAN SERVICE.

Mr. MILLER asked the Secretary of State for India, with reference to his reply to a question addressed to him on the 15th instant, whether he was prepared to order that the medal be now distributed to all the troops, regular and irregular, who were actually engaged (that being the admitted principle and limitation) in the field against rebels and mutineers in the Bombay Presidency during 1857, 1858, and 1859, as it was a matter of absolute certainty that officers and men of several corps, regular and irregular, employed in the Deccan and elsewhere, and who were actually engaged against rebels and mutineers, had not received the medal.

Sir C. WOOD could not admit that any officer entitled to a medal had not received it, and was not prepared, therefore, to give any general order on the subject. If any case of omission were brought under his notice they would receive attention.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE begged leave to ask whether there were not certain officers employed against the Bheels who, as in the case of the Tantia Toperaid, were practically rebels; and whether those officers were not, therefore, entitled to medals.

Sir C. WOOD was under the impression that they were troops employed in putting down bands of robbers, and the Government in India did not consider that putting down a band of robbers was to be treated in the same way as the suppression of an open rebellion.

THE RIGHTS OF JUDGES IN INDIA.

Mr. VANSITTART asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the memorial of Mr. Buckle, relating to his arbitrary dismissal from the office of civil and sessions judge of Moorsheadabad by Mr. Beadon, the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, contrary to the protests of the judges of the High Court of Judicature; and, if so, what steps had been taken on the subject.

Sir C. Wood said that Mr. Buckle, who had succeeded an old officer to a judgeship, pursuant to the practice usual in that country, was found to be incompetent to deal with all kinds of cases that came before him, although he was able to dispose satisfactorily of others, and he was removed from official employment altogether. He (Sir C. Wood) agreed that the grounds of his removal from employment altogether were insufficient, and he had directed the lieutenant-governor to employ Mr. Buckle in some situation for which he was properly qualified—(hear).

HOUSE OF LORDS, MAY 23.

TREATMENT OF BRITISH SUBJECTS IN ABYSSINIA.

Lord CHELMSFORD moved for the correspondence connected with the imprisonment of Captain Cameron and other British subjects in Abyssinia, which if not caused had been seriously prolonged by the delay of the Foreign Office in replying to or acknowledging an autograph letter of the Emperor Theodoros.

Earl RUSSELL said that remarks which might be supposed to reflect on the conduct of the Emperor of Abyssinia were very likely to be retaliated upon the unfortunate captives; and in that case the noble and learned lord would be responsible. The matter was an extremely delicate one; but the imputations levelled against the Foreign Office were altogether groundless. He had consulted the highest authorities on the best manner of approaching the Emperor, and had acted on their advice. Information had been received that the prisoners were no longer kept in chains, and as officers were already waiting at Massowah with a letter from the Queen and presents for the Emperor, he trusted they would soon be set at liberty.

The House having divided, the motion was carried by forty-three to forty-two against the Government.

THE LEVEE.

Herbert, Bengal Staff Corps, were presented by the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Secretary of State for India.

The following presentations of officers and gentlemen connected with India took place:—
Capt. C. Barton, 7th Dragoon Guards, by Col. Custance.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The undersigned, delegates of the Chambers of Commerce to the Canal of Suez, after having examined the works already done, and taken into consideration the possibility of the enterprise, report:—

"We started on the 7th inst. from Alexandria by railway for Cairo, where we remained until the morning of the 9th. We then proceeded by railway to Zagazig, where we embarked at 9 o'clock A.M. in boats drawn by mules and camels on the fresh-water canal made by Mehemet Ali, and arrived the same day at Tel-el-Kebir, a station of the company.

"On the 10th, in the morning, we continued our journey in the same manner, and at noon we entered upon the fresh-water canal made by the company. At 5 o'clock P.M. we arrived at Ismailia, the central station on the Suez Canal.

"The 11th we remained at Ismailia to examine the works there, as well as those of Serapium, the most elevated points of the isthmus.

"The 12th we started from Ismailia by the sea canal in boats of small draught drawn by mules and camels. We arrived at Kantara at 4 o'clock P.M., having visited the important workshops and works of El Guisr and El Terdan. From this point, in many places, and for a length altogether of 60 kilometres (about 36 miles), the canal is already excavated to its full width. The portion previously traversed was only about one-third of the width proposed.

"The 13th we left Kantara in the same way for Port Said. Twenty kilometres (12 miles) before reaching this place we found five small steamboats, which brought us to the Mediterranean. There we examined the piers in course of construction.

"The 14th we remained at Port Said to visit the important buildings, workshops, and materials which the company possess in that town.

"The 15th we returned by boat to Ismailia; and the 16th, in the morning, we started for Suez by the fresh-water canal in boats drawn by mules and camels, arriving at Suez in the evening. The two locks intended to connect the sea canal with the fresh-water canal, in course of construction at Ismailia, are not yet finished, and a transshipment here is now necessary.

"Our passage from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea was accomplished in 27 hours, as follows:—11 hours from Port Said to Ismailia, and 16 hours thence to Suez.

"A telegraphic wire extends the whole length of the canal, communicating with the wires of Cairo, Alexandria, and Suez.

"During our voyage we had opportunity to observe the excavators and other machines used for digging the canal. All the works belonging to the company appeared to us built and equipped in a solid and permanent manner. In our opinion the construction of a ship canal across the Isthmus is only a question of time and money.

"We are informed that the company has already made contracts with various contractors for the completion of the ship canal by the 1st of July, 1868, without exceeding the actual capital, including therein the indemnity due by the Egyptian Government under the award of the Emperor Napoleon III.

"During the whole of our trip we received the greatest hospitality from M. de Lesseps and the engineers of the company, and these gentlemen answered freely all the questions which we put to them. (Signed by the Delegates.)

"Cairo, April 17, 1865."

RUMCHUND V. ANDERSON.

The plaintiff is a native of the East Indies and a money-lender and banker at Poonah, at which place the defendant, Major Anderson, was stationed with his regiment, the 6th Dragoons, and the action was brought to recover a sum of £567. 4s. 9d., alleged to be the balance of principal and interest remaining due to the plaintiff for money lent by him to the defendant, the defendant's answer being that the true balance was not more than £80. 9s. 6d., and that he had paid into court more than enough to cover that sum—viz., £85.

On the part of the plaintiff two documents and certain payments of interest that had been made and memoranda relating to them were relied upon as establishing his case; but these were met by the direct and positive testimony of Major and Mrs. Anderson, who were both present when the acknowledgments were signed at Poonah, and who stated that all that remained due on the 16th of November was the sum of 2,000 rupees, and that both these acknowledgments related to that sum only, which was put in the acknowledgment by the plaintiff at 1,999 rupees 15 annas to save the stamp duty, and that the second acknowledgment was nothing more than a duplicate of the first for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to hand it to the paymaster as an authority for any money he might pay, according to the terms of the acknowledgment. The documents and the testimony of the defendant and his wife constituted the whole evidence, the plaintiff being absent at Poonah.

After hearing counsel on both sides,

Baron Martin expressed an opinion that the memoranda and payments of interest, instead of being inconsistent with the defendant's evidence, went to support it, and he characterized these proceedings by the plaintiff to get his money twice over as one of the most scandalous frauds he had ever known attempted in a court of justice.

The jury immediately found a verdict for the defendant.

ALLEGED FRAUDS ON THE BANK OF HINDUSTAN.

Mr. Louis Speltz, described as a merchant at Liverpool, was brought up in custody at the Mansion House, having been apprehended on a warrant, signed by the Lord Mayor, charging him with obtaining £1,673. 0s. 9d. from the Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan (Limited).

In the month of February, last year, the prisoner applied by letter to the Bank of Hindustan to discount a bill drawn by him upon Messrs. Hoffman and Co., of Calcutta, offering as collateral security the bills of lading and shipping documents relating to six cases of quinine, valued at £1,969. 19s. 4d. He was slightly known at the bank, having had business transactions with it about a twelvemonth previously; and the bank, relying on the faith of the accuracy of the documents set forth in the letters alluded to, caused a cheque to be made out for the amount the prisoner specified—namely, £1,673. 8s. 3d. on the Alliance Bank, and which was sent to him at Liverpool on the 5th of February. The bank at once forwarded the bill of exchange and the bills of lading for the six cases of quinine to the Calcutta branch of the Hindustan Bank by the mail leaving England on the 10th of February, and nothing was heard till a short time since, when the bank received an official communication from their agents at Calcutta, to the effect that the six cases of quinine set forth in the bills of lading in question only contained 250 ounces each, instead of 1,000 ounces specified in the original invoice clearing, showing a gross fraud had been committed on the bank, whereupon they caused an inquiry to be instituted into the facts of the previous possession of the quinine by the prisoner. It transpired that the prisoner was the representative in England of Messrs. Hoffman and Co., of Calcutta (since failed). In December last Messrs. Boehringer and Soelme, of Stuttgart, manufacturers of chemicals, received an order, purporting to come from Messrs. Hoffman and Co., for six cases of quinine, containing 250 ounces each, to be sent to Messrs. Dumas, Hankey, and Co., of Fenchurch-street, there to be at the disposal of the prisoner, then Messrs. Hoffman's agent. The quinine was duly forwarded; it was valued at £418. 7s. 9d., and Messrs. Boehringer and Soelme drew upon the prisoner a bill of exchange for the amount, payable to their order in London, at the Joint-Stock Bank. The cases of quinine were marked and numbered B. and S. 1609—14, and upon reference to the invoice of the six cases shipped by the prisoner on board the Agra for Calcutta to Messrs. Hoffman and Co., the numbers and marks on them were found to be identical. On these discoveries being made, the bank applied to the Lord Mayor for a warrant to take the prisoner into custody on the charge of fraud.

The Lord Mayor said he would allow bail, and fixed it at two securities of £750 each, and the prisoner himself in £1,000, the usual time of twenty-four hours being given the attorney of the prosecutors to inquire into the validity of the bail offered. The prisoner was then removed.

GREAT FAILURE.

The failure of Messrs. Byramjee Cama and Son, reported the other day, and which then created great astonishment in monetary and commercial circles, was officially announced yesterday afternoon. The firm are styled East India merchants, having their head house at Bombay, with branches in London and Liverpool. It appears that a telegram was received in the City yesterday, from Mr. Byramjee Hormusjee Cama, of Bombay, the only partner in the house, announcing his suspension on the 17th inst. The liabilities of the London agency are understood to exceed £1,000,000, and the total amount of debts of the firm to reach somewhere between £3,000,000 and £4,000,000. The house was one of the largest in the East Indian trade, and the failure is said to have arisen through enormous time-bargains in cotton and in many descriptions of share property. It is reported that, owing to the knowledge of the speculative engagements entered into by Mr. B. H. Cama, the house has latterly not enjoyed the high credit it formerly did. At one time it is said that the accumulated wealth of the firm ranged between £750,000 and £1,000,000. The following circular has been issued to the creditors:—

"21, Gresham-house, London, May 23, 1865.

"Gentlemen,—We regret to inform you that we have this day received a telegram from Bombay, dated 17th inst., announcing the suspension of Mr. B. H. Cama (the only partner in the firm of Byramjee Cama and Son of this city, and of Liverpool), and desiring us to suspend payment, and call a meeting of creditors. We beg therefore to announce our suspension, and that we have placed our books in the hands of Messrs. Coleman, Turquand, Youngs, and Co., with instructions to prepare a statement to lay before the creditors. We should add that the telegram states that a meeting of the creditors of Mr. B. H. Cama has been held at Bombay, and trustees appointed to realise all assets, English and foreign, and the full particulars will follow by mail, which, however, cannot arrive before the 24th or 25th proximo.—We are, Gentlemen, Yours, &c.,

"BYRAMJEE CAMA & SON, per B. T. E. ERANEE."

MISCELLANEOUS.

KNIGHTHOOD.—On Wednesday, the 17th inst., at Windsor, the Queen was graciously pleased to confer the honour of knighthood upon the following officers, knights commanders of the Bath, previous to their investiture, by the Prince of Wales, with the insignia of their dignity, viz.:—General Abraham Roberts, Lieut.-general W. Cator, Lieut.-gen. Patrick Montgomerie, Lieut.-general Wm. Wylie, Lieut.-general Charles Ash Windham, Colonel Edward H. Greathed, Major-general Charles Warren. The knights were severally introduced and presented by the Lord Chamberlain, when the Queen conferred on each the honour of knighthood. Each knight then kissed her Majesty's hand and retired.

SCRIPTURE READERS.—A lieutenant of engineers has offered to support a Scripture reader in the Bombay Presidency at his own cost, and the offer has been thankfully accepted by the Army Scripture Readers' and Soldiers' Friend Society. In India especially the workings of this society had, according to their last published report, produced valuable results.

PROPOSED ALTERATION IN THE WEEKLY MAIL TO INDIA.—In reply to a memorial transmitted to the Postmaster-General on the 30th of January, from merchants, bankers, and others, suggesting that the East India mails should be despatched from London on the evening of every Friday, instead of four times in each month, his lordship answers (G.P.O., March 30) that the Post-office, while fully recognizing the advantages which would be derived from an arrangement under which the mails might be despatched on a fixed day in each week, has been deterred from the adoption of the plan by the large additional expense which it would probably cause in a service already entailing a heavy loss. The Postmaster-General observes, in his letter to R. W. Crawford, Esq., M.P.:—"Any change in the days for the despatch of the Indian mails would, of course, affect the despatch, also, of the mails for Australia, which are carried as far as Point de Galle by the Indian Mail Packets; and, in consequence of the receipt of the memorial referred to, the form of tender which had been issued for the conveyance of the Australian mails has been altered, with a view of ascertaining what would be the extent of the additional cost for this portion of the whole service, in the event of the mails being despatched every fourth week instead of once in a calendar month. The tenders are to be sent in on the 10th of next month, and when received they will, in addition to other information already obtained, afford the means of judging what would be the probable cost of the entire service beyond that which is now paid, if the proposed arrangement were carried into effect."

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA.

—The seventh annual meeting of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, was held on the 16th inst. at the bank premises, Threadneedle-street, Mr. G. Nicol presiding. The report stated that, after providing for all bad and doubtful debts, defraying the expenses of management at all points, the net profit amounted to £126,082, to which had to be added the sum of £75,831 undivided profit brought forward from the preceding year, making a total of £201,913. Out of this total £136,153 had been paid in two half yearly dividends, making together 20 per cent. on the paid-up capital of the bank, the unappropriated balance of £65,760 being carried to the profit and loss account of the current year. The last instalment of £12. 10s., due in January last upon 10,000 new shares, 1st December, 1863, had been paid, and the Newera Ellia and Tuticorin agencies had been closed, the results not answering expectations. For a similar reason the Mauritius branch would be closed at the end of the current year. Some losses had been incurred in the course of the present year, owing to commercial difficulty, and the profits of the bank would be considerably lessened by the large reserves which they were compelled to keep in the event of contingency, their coin and bullion amounting to £2,178,027, and cash with bankers and money at call to £1,213,917. At the adjourned meeting held yesterday (May 23), Mr. James Murray Robertson and Mr. Ellis James Gilman were unanimously elected directors in the place of Mr. G. P. Robinson and Mr. T. Stenhouse resigned. The chairman availed himself of the opportunity of stating, for the satisfaction of the proprietors, that the failure of Messrs. R. H. Cama and Co., of which intelligence had that morning been received, would cause only a very trifling loss to the bank, owing to the precautions that had been taken and the timely orders sent to Bombay some months since. Nor was the bank affected by any failure since that of Messrs. Buchanan, Hamilton, and Co. The chairman further stated that it was the intention of the board to prevent hereafter retransfers of shares from the London to the Bombay register, it having been found that the facility so afforded gave rise to abuses.

THREE NEW SCHOLARSHIPS IN THE UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH.—We understand that Sir John Bowring, Dr. Holland, and Dr. Verity, the trustees to whom has been confided the very handsome fund left for educational objects by Dr. J. B. Gilchrist, the celebrated Hindustanee scholar, and long a resident in Edinburgh, have, in consideration of the claims of his native city, expressed a willingness to grant to the University of Edinburgh three scholarships of £100 a-year each, to be held for three years by natives of British India who shall have passed competitive examinations in the presidential colleges. These scholarships will be attached respectively to the medical, law, literary, and scientific classes in our university. The views of the donor absolutely exclude all religious tests or distinctions. It is intended, we believe, to attach a similar scholarship to the London University College; and it is to be hoped that out of the generous rivalry between the English and the Scottish capitals great good will redound to our magnificent Indian possessions, and the intellectual light of Western Europe be reflected on the Far East.

CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.

—The directors' report states that the remunerative character of the line depended chiefly on the development and prosperity of the port and town of Canning. Within the last six months a company had been formed in Calcutta and Bombay entitled the Port Canning Land Investment, Reclamation, and Dock Company (Limited). To carry out those objects the capital of £1,200,000 was readily subscribed, and the first call, amounting to £600,000, was paid without a single default. The sanction of the Government had been obtained to the construction of a goods shed at the Calcutta terminus of the railway, 500 feet long, which the contractors engaged to finish in November. The project of constructing a bridge over the Hooghly, and a large metropolitan station in the neighbourhood of the Canning Company's terminus at Sealdah, was under the consideration of the authorities. The revenue account still showed a deficit, but there was now every prospect of converting it into a considerable profit at an early period. The capital account showed that £400,000 had been received on shares and loans, and £244,668 from the Treasury, Calcutta, on capital account in excess of payments, making together £644,668, and £452,770 expended, leaving balances in England of £190,327, and of £1,571 in India.

THE SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI BANK.—The half-yearly report of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Bank Corporation to be presented on the 30th inst. shows a profit balance of £3,707, but owing to the late failures in the Indian trade, this, together with the reserve fund of £24,674 will be absorbed by losses, and a further sum of £5,238 will remain to be provided for.

THE MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY has published its half-yearly report. It gives a detailed account of operations, and states that the funds in hand at the end of last year amounted to £184,821.

THE EAST INDIA IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY has issued its report, in anticipation of the eighth ordinary general meeting of shareholders. Operations have been prosecuted with energy, and the balance of cash in hand on the 31st of December last was £102,776.

CAPT. MONTGOMERY, OF THE PUNJAB SURVEY.—At the annual meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, held on Monday, the society's gold medal was presented to Captain Montgomery, of the Punjab Survey.

APPOINTMENT.—(Downing-street, May 20).—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Edwin Hutchinson Pollard, Esq., to be one of her Majesty's Counsel for the Colony of Hong Kong.

EXPANDING SADDLE.GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.

Lieutenant James For-yth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger on a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LO-KFAST BREECH-LOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown.—(See Times, 11th October 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incident to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co., 270, Regent-street London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.—This invaluable remedy has preserved hundreds of children when their night past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as effluvia, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery, where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bill, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London, to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe, are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

Earl Russell sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.
Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.

Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect.

SEMPER MEN find this an invaluable remedy for destroying fleas in their dogs, as also ladies for their pet dogs.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We have received our usual advices from Calcutta to the 22nd of April, Madras to the 28th of that month, and Ceylon to the 1st of May.

The Calcutta arrivals being of no later date than those received by the Bombay mail on Wednesday, there is nothing calling for particular notice in that Presidency. We may mention, however, that the report of Mr. Massey's indisposition seems to be founded simply upon the fact that he suffered somewhat from exposure to the sun while in the Red Sea, and had to take care of himself for a few days. The alarmist paragraph which sent the news flying through what orators call "the length and breadth of the land," appeared originally in one of the "one too many" Oudh journals—a fact calculated in itself to cause suspicion, as it is one of the principal consolations of provincial life in India to abuse the climate of the Presidency towns, and in this case the anticipated fate of the Finance Minister was of course laid at the door—or should we say ditch?—of Calcutta. It is worthy of remark, too, that the Friend of India's story of the expedition to Kokan, which was declared at Lahore to be without the slightest foundation, is admitted by the Friend itself to be a canard. The Friend simply declares that the expedition has not been allowed. We are to suppose, therefore, since there was such a scheme on foot, that the gentlemen whose names were published at Serampore as composing the mission, had invented a policy and appointed themselves to carry it out; had given themselves leave from their present duties, and placed their services at the disposal of the Government; and had, in fact, made all necessary arrangements for setting forth, even to obtaining an escort for their protection. There was only one thing wanting to make the mission an accomplished fact, and that was the consent of the Government. This, unfortunately for the expectants, has not been accorded; so the whole plan remains in the heads of its projectors, and a masterly diplomatic course of action in Central Asia is not destined to light up the pages of history.

It is unfortunate that Madras should fail us upon this occasion, when a little news would be very welcome. But events, as our readers know, are never a strong point of that Presidency. In the papers just received there are the most elaborate accounts from all quarters of the globe, the most luminous expositions upon subjects of Imperial or abstract interest; but concerning the locality we find a mere nothing. The Athenæum, indeed, apologises for dwelling so long upon Sir Charles Trevelyan's Budget—which it is really working to death—by stating that the affairs of the Presidency "for the past fortnight have been a complete blank." The avowal reminds one of the announcements in the playbills—"An interval of two years supposed to elapse between the acts." If ever the history of Madras is dramatised, there must be frequent gaps of this kind.

Sir Hercules Robinson, the new Governor of Ceylon, was still being instructed in his duties by the local press. As he had done nothing as yet but look about him and be civil to everybody, his popularity was very great. It bids fair, indeed, to rival that of the acting Governor whom he has left behind him at Hong Kong, Mr. Mercer. That gentleman had, according to the latest accounts, started a debating society, and opened the proceedings in a speech marked by even more than colonial comedy.

We are informed that all officers who may have left India on sick leave, whether they obtain any extension of their original leave or not, are now required, before being allowed to return to duty, to produce satisfactory medical evidence of their restoration to health. Officers residing in or near London are required to appear before the Indian Medical Board for this purpose. Officers wishing to be examined by the Board for the above-named or any other purpose, must apply to the India-office for the necessary permission.

The Upper Assam Tea Company having proved a success, it has been determined to increase the sphere of its operations, for which an eligible opportunity is offered by the purchase of some extensive gardens, at present belonging to the old Assam Company. This company, being desirous to concentrate and confine their operations to the southern division of Upper Assam, and thus centralise the management of their property, have agreed to dispose of their outlying estates in the neighbourhood of the Tingrie and Dehing Rivers, forming their northern and eastern division, and consisting of the following gardens—the Tingrie Mookh, Hoogie Jaun, Kehung, Naholia, Cato, Tippum, Hookan Joorie, Towrock, comprising some of the fine old indigenous gardens, which only require opening out to ensure their profitable extension. At present the area under culti-

TEA-PLANTING IN OUDH AND ASSAM.—Mr. Patterson Saunders, sen., writes as follows to the Englishman:—"I send you a copy of a letter from Mr. W. Minto, published in the Pioneer, on tea-planting in Kumaon, in which he also touches on the question of tea-planting in Oudh and Assam. Appended to this letter is a very good reply of an Oudh planter. Mr. Minto asserts that the land in the north of Oudh is different to the tea soil of Assam, Cachar, Chittagong, or Arracan. Now, nothing is more remarkable than the similarity of the soils of these countries, not only to each other, but to the tea soil of China. It was the great similarity of the soil of the north of Oudh to that of Assam that induced me to forward to the Government samples for analysis. I now enclose you a table of analysis of the tea soils of China, Assam, Oudh, and Chittagong, which I will be obliged by your publishing, as the subject is of the highest importance. Then arises the question of climate. Mr. Minto is quite correct in stating that Assam has greatly the advantage of Oudh in point of moisture. Oudh has not the spring rains of Assam; and I believe that an acre of land in Assam will probably produce from eighty to one hundred pounds of tea more than an acre of land in Oudh. But in Oudh we have the great advantage of local labour, while the expense of sending coolies to Assam is very great. Again, the clearances of land in Oudh, from the absence of bamboo, and the forest being less dense than in Assam, is effected at one third the cost. I believe these advantages will compensate for the lesser production, and place Oudh fully on a par with Assam. My estimate of the production of tea in the hill stations, in Oudh, and Assam, is as two, three, and four. Thus, if the average of tea per acre in the hill countries be two hundred pounds per acre, in Oudh it will be three hundred, and in Assam four hundred. I have lived for one year in the jungles of the North of Oudh, and I never saw in any country a more rapid growth of vegetation, from the heavy rains and steamy atmosphere that prevail from June to October. During those months the number of flushes of tea leaf, and consequent large production of tea, must be great. The only danger apprehended to the tea-tree in Oudh was the prevalence of the hot winds; but this has proved to be fallacious, for the hot winds are not of long duration, and the tea-tree penetrates, with its long tap-root, the soil to such a depth, that it does not suffer from the dry heat, which is confined to the surface.

FAST JOURNALISM.—In the Mofussile of the 7th inst. appeared a paragraph relating to the supposed illness of the Hon. Mr. Massey, immediately on his arrival in Calcutta, which was extracted into this paper of the 11th inst., under the appropriate heading of "Rather Mysterious." The following still more extraordinary announcement, that the honourable gentleman was about to leave the country at once, appears in the Lahore Chronicle of the 12th inst.:—"Calcutta is determined to give the coup de grace to its reputation as a healthy city, and no home-bred statesman will, therefore, we feel persuaded, again venture to give the benefit of his councils to the Indian Government. The new Finance Minister, Mr. Massey, landed in Calcutta on Friday, the 30th ult., and was almost immediately struck with illness, which within a week of his arrival—that is, on Thursday, the 6th inst.—had become so serious as to cause apprehension, and by a letter dated the 8th inst. we are informed that the right hon. gentleman's immediate departure from the country is considered absolutely necessary." What wag has been at work?—Hurkaru.

TAKING THE GILT OFF DEWANGIRI.—The Hurkaru gives the following cynical account of the capture of Dewangiri: such a style of writing would make the battle of Waterloo look a mere brush with the enemy:—"It cannot be that General Tombs will recommend, or Lieutenant Trevor accept, a Victoria Cross for anything that was performed at the taking of Dewangiri. It seems that whilst Lieuts. Beddy and Chatterton ran round and round the fort 'looking for the door,' Lieut. Trevor climbed up and into it, receiving a knock on the head from a stone in so doing. Three others immediately after joined him. These four, we read, were for some time in the fort alone. 'The Bhootas tried to charge, but were forced to flee.' The storm and capture of a stockade by a British officer is laughable enough in itself without adding to the joke by making mention of the Victoria Cross. No one, we feel assured, will resent the idea more than Lieutenant Trevor himself."

AMENITIES OF RAILWAY TRAVELLING.—The Delhi Gazette contains the following:—"The time has arrived when first-class carriages must be provided for natives; not that there is anything inherently objectionable in gentlemen and natives travelling together side by side, but there are inherent objections to ladies who may happen to be unprotected having to travel sometimes alone with natives or, worse, one native. A case occurred the other day. Mrs. Jones Wilkinson, or Mrs. Wilkinson Jones, we forget which, was travelling alone, with a native at one end of a first-class carriage, who amused himself by singing loudly the whole way. The purport of the song the lady could not understand, nor did she, after the first nervous glimpse at the ill-omened Nana-like visage of her "companion du voyage," look his way again. We should be glad to see a little liberality shown in the matter of separate accommodation for ladies travelling sans cavalier servante."

larity. One lady, it is reported, wrote her intention of taking a pate de faut pas. We suppose she meant fois gras; but a gentleman of our acquaintance said, he could not possibly attend the pic-nic to meet 'a party' (pate) of the faut pas school. We may as well say, however, that the day was spent charmingly, and that neither the pate nor the 'party' made their appearance."

THE ALLEGED MISSION TO KOKHAN.—The Friend of India acknowledges its mistake in this matter. The Government of India, says that journal, will not permit the semi-official Kokhan Mission to proceed into Central Asia. The Kokhan envoy is very anxious that the English should see with their own eyes how far Russia has advanced, and the officers we named last week are no less eager. True, partial experience is against the step, ranging from the sublime in the case of Adolphe Schlagintweit to the ridiculous in that of Mr. Ashley Eden. But Lieutenant Colonel Pelly, our Resident at Bushire, made a journey similar to that which the Mission would have undertaken four years ago. And he has just returned in perfect safety from another even more hazardous, one of no less than eight hundred and fifty miles, to the most fanatical city in Arabia, Rigatt, the Wahabee capital, where he was "very courteously received" by the Ameer. There are, however, better means of obtaining information, in the present state of Central Asia, than by a Mission—through trustworthy native agents; and we trust the Governments of India and the Punjab will not longer remain in ignorance of political events which form the theme of discussion in every durbur from the Caucasus to Hyderabad. All the diplomatic arrangements made by England and India with independent powers in Asia need reviewing from the court of the Shah to that of Siam.

SHOCKING CUSTOM.—The following, among the many shocking customs in this country, is described by a correspondent of the Bombay Gazette:—"Live and learn" is indeed a truthful saying. I have travelled over a goodly portion of sunny India, and have, as a matter of course, been observant of the manners and customs of many of its aboriginal inhabitants. Still, it was not till the other day that I witnessed a scene which I never did before. It was, however, of a really shocking nature, the principals being a living woman and a dead man, of the Cammattee caste. The relation that had existed between the living and the dead was of a left-handed nature. They had lived together for many long years as man and wife, when, after suffering from a febrile attack for only four days, the man died. Agreeably to the peculiar custom of their caste—a custom which I never till now was aware of—it was imperative ere the corpse could be removed for interment—that the sacred rites of marriage should be performed. The sad intelligence was soon communicated to the neighbouring residents, and the loud and vehement hammering of tom-toms had the desired electric effect of collecting a host of friends and acquaintances, and a fluctuating stream of passers-by to the spot. A gooroo, or priest, being summoned, and the necessary preparations for the celebration of the nuptials being hurriedly completed, the ceremony commenced. The inanimate "form divine" was placed against the outer wall of the verandah of the house in a sitting posture, attired like a bridegroom, and the face and hands were besmeared with liquid turmeric. The woman also was clothed like a bride, and adorned with the usual tinsel ornament over the face, which, as well as the arms and the drapery, were daubed over with yellow. She sat opposite the dead, addressing it in light and unmeaning words; as is customarily done upon such occasions, and then chewing bits of dry cocoa-nut and squirting it on the face. And thus the ceremony proceeded and continued for three or four hours. At length, as the sun was nearing the horizon, the nuptial ceremony was brought to a close, and the preparation for the interment commenced. The dead was divested of its bridal attire, then bathed, and finally laid upon a bier and covered with a cloth of silk. The face was next rubbed over with some red powder, and in the mouth were placed some betel leaves. The widowed bride then looked her last at the shrouded form of him who never more she would behold, when, amid agonising shrieks and deafening tom-tomming; the bier was lifted up, and the funeral cortege proceeded in the direction of Sion. One man—a near relative of the deceased, I presume—preceded the corpse, throwing, at intervals, a handful of pies to the right and left, which were eagerly picked up by a troop of little urchins.

NEW JUDGES FOR BOMBAY.—The Hurkaru is informed that the Chief Justice of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay has submitted to the Governor-General in Council, through the local government, a proposition to appoint four additional judges as a temporary measure—two in the original, and as many in the appellate jurisdiction, to work off the arrears which have accumulated on the file of that court. If reports are to be believed, some 500 civil, and nearly 150 criminal cases are in arrears. The local authorities are said to have observed that although the number of cases decided by the High Court at Bombay is greater than that at Calcutta, yet the number of judges in the former is comparatively less than in the latter. Under the circumstances stated, the Government of India has sanctioned the proposition, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State, to whom copies of the correspondence on the subject have been submitted for information and orders.

CHINA.

The China Herald of April 15 publishes the following summary:—

"In China the efforts of the Imperialists to complete the subjugation of the rebels still attract attention. The latter are enclosed in a district round about the prefectural city of Changchow. Imperial forces are north-west and south of them; the coast is being guarded by Custom-house steamers. The latest news reports a rebel victory, with a loss to the Imperialists of a thousand men; but a previous encounter had a different issue, the rebels losing two thousand men. The latter cannot afford repeated losses, as no reinforcements are now obtainable, while, on the other hand, the Imperialists are sending on fresh troops every day.

"A steamer called the Pootung has been taken by the Chinese authorities, and will probably be confiscated, her offence being that of furnishing firearms to the rebels. The port at which such cargoes are landed is Tongsang, and one or two vessels have cleared themselves by these smuggling ventures, which are rather in favour at present among that class of ship captains who would rather smuggle than not. The Pootung left this port on the 19th ultimo, with a cargo of sundries for Fuhchau, and was taken in the port of Amoy on the 25th on the charge of supplying the rebels. If we are rightly informed, the trade is rather better than blockade running; and if the Pootung has made a few successful ventures the owners may afford to let her go.

"We must expect the suppression of the rebellion to linger in the hands of the Imperialists; but there is no reasonable doubt of the Taeping cause being extinguished in the course of a few months. The visit which her Majesty's Consul at Amoy lately paid to the insurgent chief at Changchow was supposed at the time to indicate a renewal of the policy pursued some years ago, when Sir Harry Parkes visited Nanking, and intimated that the non-interference of Great Britain might be secured by the rebels keeping at a convenient distance from the treaty ports. It was even supposed that the more decided policy of giving them the same treatment as the Imperialists (so long as no act of hostility was ventured upon towards foreigners) had been resolved upon. The real cause of Mr. Consul Pedder's visit now turns out to have been the sending of letters to Amoy by the rebels, one of which, by an identity of official title, had the appearance of being addressed to himself; this was not the case, but to prevent mistake, and to save from punishment the bearers of any such missives to foreigners, the Consul visited Changchow in a gunboat, and stated plainly that no attention whatever would be paid by the representatives of her Majesty's Government to communications addressed to them from that quarter. Late advices say that the rebels are within six miles of Amoy.

"With regard to Japan, it is evident that our relations with that country—such as they are—cannot be safely left to take care of themselves. The fleet now stationed in Japanese waters is not likely to be soon withdrawn; and it may be remarked that this fact does not indicate a satisfactory state of affairs, nor one which would have been accepted as a possible contingency six years ago, when the treaty with Japan was signed. It is generally understood that a naval and military force is to be permanently maintained in this part of the East, with Hong Kong and Japan as suitable stations. The presence of a powerful force in these waters, though conveying a sense of general security in different emergencies, cannot be referred to as a satisfactory sign of the times. Treaties that require expensive appliances to keep them in working order are of doubtful value; and we fear that, in the case of Japan, even our strong armaments will not eventually bring about that goodwill among the troublesome classes in Japan, who also happen to be the most powerful."

CEYLON.

The following is from the summary of the Colombo Observer, May 1st:—

The weather has been more or less monsoonish since the departure of last mail; but, wet or dry, the shipment of coffee seems to proceed unceasingly, and every day as we enter the fort our course is intercepted by carts laden with casks inscribed "Bluefields," "Monneragalla," &c., and bearing such mysterious figures as—

net, or, for freight purposes, half a ton of coffee.

In our last we recorded the departure of five ships which took away nearly 65,000 cwts. of coffee. On this occasion seven ships are reported as having sailed, but the quantity of coffee thus added to our total exports is only 53,000. The proportions have been 43,000 plantation (exactly the same as on the last occasion) but only 10,000 native. The result is that the deficiency in plantation is now reduced from 35,000 to 27,000 cwts., while the excess in native is raised from 54,000 to 60,000. Finally we are 32,000 cwts. in advance of the exports of last year, and we have little doubt that this excess will go on increasing to the end of the season

It will be observed that now the merest fraction of our produce is diverted from England. Less than 10,000 cwts. has gone to France; a little more than 10,000 to Australia, in the 7 months; and the rest of the half million has gone to England. There are no protective regulations to lead to this result; but let those who talk so glibly of giving up the colonies just consider whether all the business connected with our coffee trade would continue to centre in England did Ceylon cease to be an English colony.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, May 27, 1865.

THE "WALLAHS" AND THE SYSTEM.

THE popular ideal of a "Competition Wallah" is an undersized young man, with no chest to speak of, rather weak legs, and an intelligent, but ugly cast of countenance; who wears spectacles, is inclined to carry a pen behind his ear, and has a tendency to transact the business of life from a high stool; who dresses accidentally, and has concentrated his ignorance upon all matters relating to horses and field sports.

This interesting picture, so far as outline is concerned, was duly presented to the House of Commons the other night, when Mr. A. Mills called attention to the regulations for admission to the Indian Civil Service. Upon that occasion the competition system met with some condemnation, and the manner in which it is conducted with a great deal. The result, as several speakers declared, is that we are not getting the best men who are to be got for India; and one speaker went so far as to say that the new members of the service are "emphatically not gentlemen," and have such palpable personal requirements upon this score as to incur the contempt of the natives of the country. We need scarcely say that these charges against the body of gentlemen in question have as little general application as the caricature given above; and, are besides illiberal, discourteous, and particularly out of place in an assembly like the House of Commons. We have something more than a doubt about the present being an improvement upon the old system; and the best that can be said of the competitive arrangement is that it is a check upon corruption, and gives an opportunity for entering the service to a large class in the country who would never enter it by other means. For the rest, we most of us know, more or less from experience, that if we desired to pick out the best men from any given number, we would rather be governed in our choice by a personal knowledge of the candidates than by any results of success in examination. Had such a system always prevailed in the service, or in public life, there can be no question that some of our greatest men would never have been heard of. And in India, it should be remembered, the persons selected by such a test have far more important and extensive duties to perform than the members of the Civil Service in this country. They are none of them mere clerks. Most of them have legal functions to fulfil; some are employed in diplomatic positions; those who rise high have legislative duties; and such, in fact, are the exigencies of the service, that every member of it should have the materials of a statesman. Under these circumstances it is obvious that the competition system is insufficient for the purpose, and unsatisfactory in more ways than one.

Admitting these defects, there is all the more reason why the system should not be made worse than it need be. And such we believe to be the case under the existing regulations. The scheme of examination itself should be sufficient to point out the fact; but we judge by results. We are sending out clever and able men to India, who perform their duties to the satisfaction of the authorities, and sometimes with very great credit indeed. Many of these successful candidates are of lower social grade than the service had hitherto known, but as a body they cannot be said to discredit it, or cause it to be held in disrespect. But although the plan is so far successful, it is certain that we are not getting the best—or a fair proportion of the best—men in the country, who, under different conditions, might offer themselves for Indian service. The proportion of University men who present themselves, very large at first, has very greatly diminished, and is still on the decrease; and of candidates from the public schools there are also very few. The sons of old members of the service, of officers in the army, and of professional men generally, are very limited in number. As far as the University men are concerned, there may be many different reasons, as stated by Lord Stanley, why they do not offer themselves; but it is quite unnecessary to go looking about for other causes when a sufficient one is apparent—that the nature of the examination is such as to give them very little chance of success. And the same argument will of course apply to the public schools. For other classes of candidates the principal condition is money, and, supposing equal ability, those have the best chance who can be most specially prepared.

With every respect for the character and abilities of the men who are now filling the ranks of the service—who, as we have seen, are sometimes unfairly attacked—the state of things here indicated can scarcely be considered perfect. There may be no need to change the plan altogether; but there is great need that it should be accommodated to the case of the classes to which we have referred, and be made as little available as possible for the purposes of "cram." Of the competition system generally, it may be said, that it produces a greater proportion of good average officials than the patronage system; it admits no fools whatever; but it appears to discourage, if not to exclude, the highest order of men who make statesmen and dictate history.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR HUGH ROSE, it is said, is shortly to proceed to Ireland as commander-in-chief of the forces there.

DIRECT COMMISSIONS.—The next examination for direct commissions will take place on the 31st of July, and the number of candidates is limited to 100.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF NETHERLANDS INDIA resolved last year that a telegraphic communication should be established between Anjer (west of Java) and Jelong Betong (Sumatra). The electric cable will be enveloped with threads of goemochy (Indian flag). It is rumoured that it is the intention of the Netherlands Government to extend this line later to Palembang, with a view to reach Muntok or Siak, and to come in nearer relation to Singapore.—Times.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Conflict, freight-ship, Captain Kelso, from Calcutta, with invalids, arrived at Spithead on Wednesday night. Captain Tyler, of the 80th Regiment, is in command of the troops, and Dr. Parke, of the 52nd, has medical charge. Captain Kelso received a complimentary letter from all the officers on board the ship, expressing their thanks for his attention to those with him on the voyage, and also the most unqualified satisfaction with the accommodation of his ship.

COMMERCIAL FAILURES.—The suspension has been announced to-day of Messrs. Remington, Cartwright, and Co., of London, correspondents of Messrs. Leckie and Co., of Bombay. The liabilities are stated to be £200,000; probable assets may yield a surplus of £70,000. The impossibility of obtaining advances on any description of goods or securities at Bombay is assigned as the cause of the stoppage of the London firm. The suspension has also been announced of Messrs. Dirom, Davidson, and Co., an old and respectable East India firm at Liverpool, with large liabilities. The failure has also been announced of Mr. Wm. Duthie, merchant, of No. 1, East India Avenue, the extent of whose liabilities has not transpired.

NORTHERN ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—Proposals have been issued by the Northern Assam Tea Company to increase their capital to £400,000 by the creation of 25,000 B shares of £10 each (with certain preferential rights up to July, 1868), for the purpose of purchasing from the old and well-known Assam Company the whole of their outlying estates in Upper Assam, which are contiguous to those of the Northern Company. The price is £100,000; and the object of the Assam Company in selling the property is stated to be to enable them to concentrate their operations on their other lands. The area at present under cultivation is 1,000 acres, of which over 500 are in full bearing. No applications for new issue B shares will be received from holders of A shares claiming allotments under the articles of association after Wednesday, the 31st inst. The general list will be closed on Saturday, June 3.

CALCUTTA AND SOUTH EASTERN RAILWAY.—The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of this company was held on Thursday, May 25, at the offices, Gresham House; Mr. J. Borrowdale in the chair. The report having been read, the chairman, in moving its adoption, said the directors were still obliged to look to the future rather than to the present. The revenue, he said, showed an increase, and he trusted that this would be the last occasion on which the board would have to report a deficit. Matters remained about stationary up to the formation of the Port Canning Company, all of whose works must prove beneficial to the Calcutta and South-Eastern Company. There were five ships unloading there already, and there would no doubt be more if the accommodation were larger. The Government was at last doing something to provide the requisite stations. It being necessary to double the line, additional capital was wanted for that purpose, and powers were now sought from the shareholders to effect the object. A report had recently arrived from India recommending that a station should be provided about five miles from Calcutta. The report was adopted, and subsequently, at a special meeting, authority was given to the board to increase the capital by the issue of shares and debentures. It was impossible, the chairman said, to state how much money would be required, but the consent of the Secretary of State for India would, of course, be necessary. A resolution was also passed reducing the quorum of shareholders at ordinary meetings from 20 to 10.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The fourteenth report of the directors contains highly satisfactory evidence of the progress of the line. The expectations held out by the agent in India, that many of the native merchants and shippers would make the terminal station at Kooshtee the point of arrival and departure for their boats carrying cargo to Calcutta, are now being realised. The result has been that the merchandise traffic for the first thirteen weeks of the present year has amounted to £15,156. 12s. 6d., as against £4,561. 6s. 8d. received for the same period of the previous year. The receipts from both the passenger and merchandise traffic during the same period, compared with those of the corresponding period in last year, show an improvement of above £8,000; and of above £19,000 over those of the similar period in 1863. One of the river steamboat companies has commenced a regular weekly steamer service between Kooshtee and the marts of Dacca and Narain-gunge.

GRANTS FOR ARMY SERVICES.—A comparison of the sums expended with the sums granted by Parliament for army services in the year ending 31st March, 1864, shows that in the main there has been an economy of £578,997. 0s. 11d. in these charges for that year. For nine heads of charge the grants were exceeded, the principal being commissariat establishment services and movement of troops, by £162,085. 13s.; disembodied militia, £34,402. 14s. 2d.; surveys, &c., £6,072. 6s.; and amounts written off as irrecoverable, being balances due from sundry persons, £4,379. 13s. 3d. The total amount of excess on any of the votes was £210,381. 11s. 10d. But this was more than covered by the sums saved upon 21 of the grants, from which £789,378. 12s. 9d. remained unexpended. Thus there was an economy, on the whole, of £578,997. 0s. 11d.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

SIR,—As a Proprietor of East-India Stock, you were presented, we believe, by the East-India Company with a copy of Mr. EDWARD THORNTON'S "HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA," the sixth volume of which, bringing down the history to 1844, was issued in the year 1846.

Indian history since the recall of Lord Ellenborough has been so fruitful of great events and striking episodes, that we cannot but think the time has fully come for adding another volume to Mr. Thornton's unfinished work. The two campaigns on the Sutlej, followed by the conquest of the Punjab, the second Burmese war, crowned by the annexation of Pegu, the splendid reign of Lord Dalhousie, illustrated by the establishment of railways, the swift growth of the electric telegraph, the gradual settlement of the Punjab, all these things, followed as they were by the annexation of Oude, and the mighty explosion of 1857, which annihilated the old Sepoy army of Bengal, nearly shattered to pieces the power founded by Clive and Hastings, and brought about the political death of the great East-India Company, seem to furnish abundant matter for at least one interesting volume, written with due conciseness and a careful regard for truth.

The history of a time so fraught with stirring incidents and momentous issues can hardly fail, with fair handling, to interest Englishmen of very diverse tastes. We have therefore arranged with a gentleman of some literary culture, Captain L. J. TROTTER, late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, for the production of a volume which shall bring the history of British India down to its natural halting-place—the death of Lord Canning.

We annex herewith a Prospectus of the volume; and, as only a limited edition will be printed, we shall be obliged by an early intimation of your wish, if any such you should have, to complete your copy of "Thornton's History."

We have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servants,

The Assam Company, the first established for the cultivation of Tea in India, being desirous of concentrating and confining their operations to the Southern Division of Upper Assam, and thus centralising the management of their extensive properties, have determined on selling to the Northern Assam Tea Company (Limited), whose estates are contiguous, the whole of the Northern and Eastern Division of their property in Assam, instead of adopting the alternative of promoting a new Company to carry them on, or placing them under separate management.

The present extension of capital, therefore, is for the purpose of purchasing direct from the Assam Company the whole of their outlying estates in the neighbourhood of the Tingrie and Dehing Rivers in Upper Assam, forming their Northern and Eastern Division, and consisting of the following gardens:—The Tingrie Mookh, Hoogrie Jaun, Kelung, Nahola, Cato, Tippam, Hookam Joorie, Towrook.

These comprise some of the fine old indigenous gardens, respecting which so much has been written, and which only require opening out to ensure their profitable extension. They are at present producing the finest Tea and Tea Seed in Assam—the latter in sufficient quantity to enable the purchasers to plant out any extent of new land without further cost on this head.

The area at present under cultivation is about 1,000 acres, of which over 500 are in full bearing. The gardens are surrounded by lands, for which grants have been obtained to the extent of 10,000 acres, all of which is very superior and suitable for the growth of Tea.

The Assam Company's right to the whole of this property, together with all buildings, plant, implements, tools, boats, and live stock, will be handed over to the Northern Assam Tea Company for the sum of £100,000, to be paid as follows:

8th June, 1865	...	£30,000
15th July, "	...	20,000
15th August, "	...	20,000

£100,000

The crop of Tea of this season, and any further grants of land that the superintendent or agents of the Assam Company may have acquired up to the date of completion of this sale, together with all cultivation commenced during the current season, commencing November 1, 1864, has also been contracted to be transferred to this Company, on payment of the sums actually disbursed since that date.

No commissions or promotion money have been paid or allowed.

In the allotment of shares a preference will be given to shareholders in the Northern Assam Tea Company and the Assam Company.

The Assam Company in 1863 disposed of their outlying estates in the district of Cachar, for the purchase of which a Company was formed in Calcutta, called "The Central Cachar Company," the shares of which Company are readily saleable at 25 per cent. premium. Those of the Assam Company are at above 150 per cent. premium.

The success of Tea growing in Assam is now thoroughly established. Indian Teas are rapidly increasing in value and value, owing to their great strength and pugnancy. Further, it may be stated, that the recent reduction of the duty has already caused a considerable advance in prices here, and the supply is still inadequate to the demand.

In reference to the quality and capabilities of the lands proposed to be purchased, the following extracts are taken from the last reports.

The Resident Secretary in India of the Assam Company, in his report on the property contracted for, says:—

"The lands in this part of the province are the finest for Tea cultivation in Assam. The soil is not only the very best, but the forests contain the most splendid timber, inexhaustible in extent, which is not the case in the Southern Division. It needs no foresight to predict that the property the Company holds in this part of the country may be made within the next ten years equal, if not superior, to that which they will be in possession of at that time in the Southern Division."

The following are also extracts from a report made to the Directors of the Assam Company by their Chief Superintendent in January last, when he visited the property:—

"That the land is first rate, there is no question or doubt, but to effect such an object (that is, work it to full advantage), it must be divided into a distinct field, and the management given to the person residing on the spot.

"I have now got the Deputy Commissioner to accept three applications near Tingrie, for probably an area of about 7,000 acres, including the land between Tingrie, Hoogrie Jaun, and Kelung, along the banks of the Tingrie River; and this, with what we have already secured in other quarters between the Dehing and the Tingrie, will bring the Company's holding up to at least 10,000 or 12,000 acres; and I would recommend the extending in this quarter for the reason that the land is very superior, and the position likely to be much more healthy than any other portion of the Northern and Eastern Division.

"The present gardens, if worked up to their capabilities, would yield 2,000 maunds of tea.

"The plants in the nurseries, which were put down last year for the purpose of planting out, have come up very well, some of them eighteen inches and others two feet high."

The estates have been frequently visited by the Managing Director of the Northern Assam Tea Company during the last thirteen years, and as lately as March last. He fully confirms the favourable views above expressed, and is of opinion that with comparatively small outlay the indigenous plants alone can be worked up to an annual yield of 4,000 to 5,000 chests of tea.

Since the contract for the purchase has been concluded, the Assam Company have received from their Managing Director in India, and from a large shareholder in both Companies now visiting Assam, valuations of the property greatly in excess of the price agreed to be paid.

On the above grounds, therefore, the acquisition of these estates will render the Northern Assam Tea Company one of the most influential and profitable in India.

Application for Shares to be made on the annexed Form on or before Wednesday, the 31st May, on which date the list will be closed.

This Company has been formed to purchase and work four tea estates on the Dehing and Desing Rivers in the Seebangur District of Upper Assam, namely, the Khawang, the Gingham and Barnham, and the Walford Estate.

These estates comprise about 8,500 acres of land, held in fee simple, of which at least 3,800 acres are suitable for tea. There is an abundant supply of charcoal in the neighbourhood, without resorting to the Company's property.

The existing tea gardens cover an area of 845 acres, planted as follows:

In 1859-60	140 acres.
1861-62	224 "
1862-63	224 "

845 acres.

It is proposed to extend the cultivation to 1,500 acres for provision, beyond which point it will be necessary to call up part of the reserved capital.

The properties have been valued by Mr. D. K. Mair, merchant, Calcutta, and Mr. Alexander S. Sawers, Inspector for the Land Mortgage Bank of India, at Rs. 600,000, at which price they are to be taken by the Company; subject, however, to certain deductions on a more perfect survey, to be immediately made. This places the purchase-money at the unusually low rate of £70 per acre, valuing only the land under cultivation.

The vendors have agreed to take payment for the estates as follows, viz.—Rs. 400,000 in 5,000 shares of Rs. 80 paid up, to bear dividends rateably with the other shareholders; and Rs. 200,000 in cash, part of Rs. 300,000, the amount to be called up during the first year.

The production of tea was, in 1864, 62,000 lbs.; the estimated output in 1865 is 1,09,600; and the produce should be in 1866, 1,80,000, increasing until the 1,000 acres are all in full bearing, when the return should not be less than 3,40,000 lbs., on an outlay for the season of Rs. 1,20,000.

At present the value of the tea is fully 1 rupee per lb. in Calcutta, and it is expected that the crop of 1865 will give a moderate interest on the capital paid up within the year; and that thenceforth there will be a handsome dividend, increasing up to the time when, as shown above, 1,000 acres ought to return 3,40,000 lbs. of tea on an outlay of about Rs. 1,20,000.

When the additional 500 acres have come into full bearing, the output of tea should be at least 5,00,000 lbs., on an expenditure for the year, calculated on existing data, not exceeding Rs. 2,20,000, or £100,000, leaving, at 1 rupee per lb., Rs. 3,00,000 for the return on a capital of Rs. 10,00,000.

The usual calculation of average produce for good Assam Tea Gardens is 400 lbs. per acre, but 340 lbs. only have been here reckoned upon, and nothing has been put down for tea seed—which has hitherto added greatly to the profits of tea estates—but which is now considered of too uncertain a value in the future to be brought into the calculations.

9,000 Shares have already been taken up in Calcutta and Bombay, leaving only 1,000 shares to be offered to English capitalists.

Applications will be received by the East India Financial Association (Limited), or by the Agents, Messrs. Alexander Fletcher and Co., from whom full prospectuses and forms of application can be obtained.

W. J. VIAN, Secretary.THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LOCKFAST BRECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown.—(See Times, 11th October 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitos, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect.

SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying fleas in their dogs, as also ladies for their pet dogs.

Being the Original Importer of this now invaluable article, which has found so great a sale that it has tempted others to vend a so-called article, the public are therefore cautioned to observe that the packets of the genuine Powder bear the autograph of THOMAS KEATING.

Sold in Packets and Bottles of various sizes, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C.

BRAGG'S CHARCOAL BISCUITS afford speedily relief in case of bile, acidity, indigestion, heartburn, flatulency, impure breath, and children suffering from worms; are an excellent preventive for sea sickness, are made of the purest vegetable carbon, and are recommended by the most eminent of the Faculty.—See Dr. Hassall's Report.

Sold only in tins, 1s., 2s., 4s., and 8s. each, by J. L. BRAGG, Sole Maker, 2, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square. Also the Pure Carbon, in bottles, 2s. and 4s. each.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

SOUND LUNGS.—Unless the blood be purified from the foul matters which enter it in its passage through the chest, the strongest lungs will often be inconvenienced, and the delicate chest will assume positive disease. Holloway's remedies exert the most wholesome power in cleansing the air tubes, dislodging accumulated mucus, and clearing the blood. When there is any congestion of the chest, stitch, or heavy pectoral pain, some of this Ointment, well rubbed over the seat of suffering, will speedily remove the evil and certainly prevent worse consequences. In common colds, shortness of breath, wheezing and chronic or spasmodic coughs, Holloway's Ointment and Pills will give present comfort, and avert future danger.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incidental to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTH-

ING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR

TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as cicicacus, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We are in receipt of our usual files from Bombay to the 13th of May, and Calcutta to the 6th of that month.

At Bombay the commercial panic was the principal event of the fortnight. The downfall in the price of shares had not been—as anticipated—due to the close of the American war, or the fall in cotton. The share premiums had fallen of their own weight. It was at first attempted to make an arrangement with regard to time bargains, due on the 1st of July, but since the movement in that direction commenced a ruinous fall had taken place. Even the soundest stock had become for a time depreciated. There had been additional embarrassment, too, on account of the banks having changed their policy and refused to make advances even on merchandise. Otherwise there had been an excellent spirit of fairness and moderation on the part of the commercial community, and notwithstanding present difficulties, the commercial prospects of the Presidency were considered thoroughly sound. In the meantime the general public had experienced great relief from the fall in the price of commodities, and these, it can scarcely be doubted, have found the panic rather a pleasant arrangement.

What has been more felt than even the panic is deep-rooted indignation at the "fatal march" from Mhow. The accounts previously published are more than corroborated by the news since received. It appears that the presence of cholera along the route to Nargaum was represented to the authorities at head-quarters by telegraph, so that the Mhow Staff must be absolved from all blame in the matter. The responsibility must, therefore, rest with head-quarters, and it is difficult to conceive how it can have been incurred. Sir William Mansfield, it is said, left an order prohibiting troops marching in hot weather, except in cases of emergency, and there could be no pretence for such a plea in the present instance. Nor could ignorance be alleged in justification of the error. Two years ago a regiment marched the same road, at about the same season, and were seized with cholera. During the same year another regiment followed, and buried many men on the march through the same cause. But in any case the special reason assigned by the Mhow authorities would invalidate an excuse of the kind. We have referred elsewhere to some other points in connection with this subject.

The Hon. Mr. Anderson bade farewell to Bombay and the service by the present mail. A great dinner was given in his honour, at which equally high and well deserved encomiums were passed upon his character, private as well as official. Sir Bartle Frere is losing all his ablest advisers by degrees; but it is now denied that he intends making himself independent of their counsel by resigning his own appointment. The report seems to have been true at one time, but to have become inaccurate through changed circumstances.

There has been a correspondence between Major Ewen Grant, 3rd Regiment Bombay N.I., and the Adjutant General of the Bombay Army, in reference to the position taken up by the major that the Mess and Band Funds of his regiment, and, by inference, all similar funds, are the private property of the officers themselves, somewhat in the nature of a tontine. He admits a distinction in favour of a co-partnership with Government in the mess-house rent, tent and band funds, but claims that the officers had every right to decide as to their disposal. If a favourable answer to his claims be not obtained in India, Major Grant will appeal home.

A social reform in Bombay was meeting with much favour. A Mr. Davis has invented a washing machine, which was coming into general operation, to the satisfaction of everybody but the dhobies. People were actually having their clothes sent home whole and sound, and with all the buttons upon them.

Calcutta news was not very important. Commercial affairs had not arrived at a crisis, but there was much depression, and among new companies the East India Timber Company and the Soonderbunds Reclamation Company have closed their operations, at least for the present. On the North-East Frontier fighting had ceased. The ports of Buxa, Dooar and Dalimkote had been selected for defence during the rainy season. Contradictory reports were still received as to the Bhootas desire for peace. The chiefs of the Western section seem desirous to open negotiations with this object, and in testimony of their sincerity had promised to send ambassadors to meet Colonel Haughton; but Tounngsoo Penlow and the Dhurm Rajah's brother were still determined to hold out, and what will be the result nobody ventures to guess. The European troops who have returned from the campaign bear, it is said, ample traces of the baneful effects of the climate.

The export duties were still being discussed in the City of Palaces. Sir John Lawrence is being blamed for the policy, as well as Sir Charles Trevelyan; and people are already turning away from their former idol, and discovering that he was over-estimated before his elevation, and that his administration of the Empire is not equal to the traditions of the Punjab Government. One cause of offence is that he received the deputation which waited upon him the other day in his slippers. Lord Palmerston or Mr. Gladstone, it is said, would not have done this: they might have rejected the application, but it would have been with their boots on. The Calcutta people we think are a little too particular, especially as regards a Lawrence—the members of that illustrious family having been always the worst dressed men in Asia. Many years ago Sir Henry Lawrence's durbar costume formed a constant theme for Mofussil jocularities.

The report mentioned in our last number, that the Governor-General has addressed a communication to the Talookdars in reference to the alleged invasion of their proprietary rights, receives confirmation by the present mail. The Talookdars, however, will not be satisfied with the explanation, which is simply to the effect that the only object of the Government in the proceedings which have been taken, is to prevent interference with tenant-rights.

There were some border disturbances, but the country was otherwise peaceful. There had been a great thunderstorm at Nagpore, in which General Shubrick, Major Ashburner, Major O'Connell, and some other officers had been seriously injured. The heat was very great in most places, and cases of cholera still frequent.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta mail, which may be expected in London on the 10th, and at Southampton on the 15th inst.

THE PATNA REBEL AHMED-OO-LAH (says the Englishman) has had the sentence of death passed against him commuted to penal servitude for life. It is well it has been so; death incurred under the law of the Feringhee has no terrors for a fanatical and would-be rebel hero; the expiation of a murder at the gibbet is a boon welcomed as the true key to the prophet's paradise.

A NEW MAGISTRATE AND HIS WORK.—Mr. Barton took over charge of his office as acting senior Magistrate of Police on the 3rd instant. It is understood that there are no less than 600 cases in arrears, exclusive of about 1,000 municipal cases. An effort will now be made to go into these cases, some of which have been for upwards of two years in the office, and some of the others for many months.—Gazette.

LIFE AND DEATH IN THE INDIAN ARMY.

The House of Commons has published the reply of the Government of India to the startling report of the Royal Sanitary Commission for India. That Commission horrified England, and for the moment surprised India, by the representation that the annual mortality of the English army in India is 69, and the rate of invaliding 82 per 1,000. The deduction followed that England must every year supply 5,037 recruits to feed this monster of disease, and the cry arose that India was not worth holding at such a price. Sir John Lawrence was a member of the Commission.

Those earnest philanthropists who had in India for years devoted themselves to the cause of sanitary reform, generally in obscurity and occasionally amid much obloquy, were naturally indignant, not so much that their labours should have been ignored by the commission, but that the evident results of these labours should be so completely overlooked as to lead the commission to delude the English public. The Government of India, of which Sir John Lawrence had meanwhile become the head, did only its duty, therefore, in pointing out to Sir Charles Wood that the death rate of the English Army in India has been much below the average fixed by the commission for many years, and that the various efforts made in India to improve the health of the British soldier ought to have been recognised. On a third point the Council differed from the Viceroy, the former asserting and the latter denying—and conclusively proving his denial—that there had been no want of care in the selection of sites for cantonments. The average of the Commission was based on a period of fifty-seven years up to the mutiny, a period which includes all the great wars of the company, and especially the Mahratta campaigns, in which the seasoned local troops lost 134 per 1,000. In the battle of Chillianwalla alone one regiment lost 230 men, and how many escaped from the Cabul massacre? Sanitary science, besides, was unknown in those days in India.

Subsequent years show how unfairly the deductions of the commission represent the present mortality of the army. In 1861 the deaths were, in the presidency of Bengal, 45.57 per 1,000; in Madras, 15.83; in Bombay, 24.72; in all India together, 36.74—or 23 per 1,000 below the number given by the commissioners. In 1860 the deaths in the three presidencies respectively were 39.37, 22.63, and 31.70 per 1,000. From 1859 to 1862 exclusively the average mortality of the whole four years is 32.98 per 1,000 in Bengal, which was worse than Bombay and Madras. These four years, too, were "very unfavourable"—there was the re-action after the mutiny campaigns, and there were cholera epidemics. Yet instead of 5,037 recruits only 1,408 were required to fill up the death vacancies, which, before the Commission's Report was published, realised their hope that attention to sanitary laws would reduce the annual number of recruits to 1,460. Invaliding, too, has fallen from 80.88 in 1860 to 74.02 in 1861, and to 59.61 in 1862. In 1863 both invaliding and mortality had further diminished, and last year in Bengal, out of 40,250 English soldiers, only 846 died, or at the rate of 21 per 1,000, and only 38 per 1,000 were invalided. The Times, in summing up the question between the Government of India and the Commission, admits that the latter were wrong, but hints a doubt whether the data of the former, referring as they do to favourable years, were not too restricted. The truth is the four years from 1859 to 1862 were as unfavourable, with the exception of war casualties, as are ever likely to recur in our occupation of the country. If against the possibility of war casualties we set the great improvements, at an immense cost, which are still going on in the cantonments, barracks, and social life of the soldier, we may fairly indulge the expectation that henceforth the average rate of mortality will not exceed 30, or 9 more than last year, and that of invaliding 50 or 12 more than last year. If to this be added the large number who now volunteer to remain in the country, the most cautious will come to the conclusion that India will not annually absorb more than a thousand English recruits to maintain in efficiency an army of 70,000 men—that is a regiment a year.

We have been enabled to obtain a valuable table showing in detail the mortality and sickness of the English army in Bengal last year. Official statistics so reliable and so valuable have never before been compiled or published. The following are instructive figures:—

Months.	Average Strength.	Average No. daily Sick.	No. daily sick per cent. of Strength.	No. of Deaths.
January ...	39,587	1,975	4.99	84

Dec. ...	40,442	1,971	4.87	95
For the year	40,385	2,507	6.21	846

In the whole year there died 20.95 per 1,000 of strength. It will be observed how steadily the number of deaths rises from 34 in cool January to 100 in scorching June, when the mortality seems to have been checked by the refreshing rains which, however, reduced it to only 84 in July and 89 in August. Soon the combined effects of the heat and rain raised it to its highest figure, 125, in the fatal month of September. Turning to the sick in hospital we see how free from epidemics the year was—

Cholera ...	185
Small-pox ...	87
Fever, Intermittent ...	17,551
" Remittent ...	1,667
Apoplexy ...	90
Delirium Tremens ...	145
Dysentery, Acute ...	1,440

Eye do. ...	1,734
Abscesses and Ulcers ...	5,266
Wounds and Accidents ...	4,246
All other causes ...	7,331
	66,280

Several men must have been twice and even more frequently in hospital, for 164.12 per cent. of the average strength were admitted during the year. Next to fever, caused, probably, by careless exposure, venereal diseases claim the largest numbers of victims. More than a fourth of the whole force, or 25.49 per cent. of strength, entered hospital on this account.

These returns are defective in two particulars, and ought to be supplemented by tables showing the causes of invaliding. They do not distinguish married from unmarried men, nor hard drinkers from the temperate and total abstainers. Other figures, which we have seen, show that the sickness among married soldiers is not half so great as among unmarried, but the mortality among the married is one-third greater. Only 145 were treated for delirium tremens, or 36 per cent. of the whole force, and of these 11·04 per cent died. But these figures tell us nothing of the influence of excess in causing other diseases and in preventing the patient from rallying. We believe that henceforth annual returns will be sent in to the Commander-in-Chief from every regiment, showing the daily consumption in canteen of beer and spirits by each soldier, distinguishing the habits of each as very intemperate, moderate, abstemious or a teetotaler, and mentioning the number of times each has been punished for drunkenness. Our system of collecting and generalising from military statistics will this year be brought to such perfection that the responsible authorities will be able to trace the laws and operations of disease and the influence of sanitary regulations, in a way which will enable them at once to apply remedies and provide checks the moment they are required. Hitherto an epidemic had nearly done its work before it could be grappled with.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BHOOTAN.—The Hurkaru contains the following:—By letters received from the Bhootan frontier we learn that on the face of Dewangiri, Tounsoo Penlow, the Dhurm-rajah's brother, and the Kotan Rajah left East Bhootan for Paro. Tounsoo Penlow himself is far from being disheartened, and in his addresses to his troops and the people he constantly assures them that during the rains he will take such measures as shall with the usual effects of the malaria expel the Feringhees from the Doora. But whilst thus preparing the Bhootas to continue the struggle, he has not forgotten the state of parties at Panakha, and omits no occasion of casting blame upon Paro Penlow for intriguing for peace with the British authorities. The object of the mission of the defenders of the Pass at Dewangiri to Paro would seem to be the definite settlement of the question between the two parties who are now struggling for power. We learn that Brigadier General Tytler after visiting Darjeeling, will proceed to Assam, via Doobree. The operations along the frontier may now be considered over. We trust, however, that with a view to any eventualities which may occur, the Government will at once set about organising an "Intelligence Department," whose duty it shall be to acquire as much information as possible of Bhootan and the Bhootas. We all know how much the want of this department has been felt in the recent operations. The Civil Department has its own work to do, and although it may be in communication with the chiefs of the enemy, it is not usually possessed of the kind of information which is valuable to a military commander. Rightly managed, this department should enable us to avoid the commission of many errors, whilst adding considerably to our general store of information of a country little known and less understood.

SOLDIERS' WORKSHOPS.—With a view of stimulating to a greater extent the exertions of individual workmen, not only in themselves prosecuting their trade, but also instructing their younger and less experienced comrades, and the sons of the soldiers of their regiment, the Commander-in-Chief, with the sanction of Government, has instituted annual prizes on a small scale, viz., "for each apprentice who may be certified to have acquired a thorough knowledge of any trade, the soldier who taught him, to receive a bonus of 25 rupees." Other smaller prizes will be given for approximate instruction.

TELEGRAPHS IN BHOOTAN.—The Government have sanctioned the construction of several flying telegraph lines in the Bengal Doora of Bhootan, considering that by the ordinary means during the rains communication between the several posts may become difficult and slow.

PRIVATE DORAN, OF H.M.'s 106TH.—On Sunday, the 23rd April (says the Hurkaru), a fine young soldier of H.M.'s 106th Regiment was drowned by the accidental upsetting of a boat in the Ajmere lake, a magnificent sheet of water over seven miles in circumference. The accident would have been attended with more serious consequences but for the praiseworthy conduct of one of the men who were in the boat. It appears that four soldiers, belonging to the detachment of the regiment stationed at Ajmere had gone out on a boating excursion, and on their return towards the shore, owing to some mismanagement on their part, the boat capsized, and they were all thrown into the water. One of the men, an Irishman named Doran, immediately caught hold of one of his comrades, and swam with him to the shore, calling out to the others "to cheer up." Another man was seen perfectly exhausted struggling hard to reach land. This man also was assisted in by Doran, who then threw off his clothes, plunged again into the lake and swam out to the overturned boat in the hopes of rescuing the other poor fellow, who had been seen holding on to one end of the boat, but he was nowhere to be found. He was unable to swim, and it is supposed he was "sucked in" under the boat. Doran, after swimming about for some time, returned to the shore quite exhausted. The body of the drowned man was not recovered for several hours. In England such conduct as Doran's would have obtained for him a gratuity and a medal from the Humane Society.

ARMING THE POLICE.—According to the Delhi Gazette, the following are the numbers of fire-arms to be retained in each district of the Police Force N. W. P., as proposed by the Inspector General, and sanctioned by his Honour the Lieutenant-governor. Bareilly and Jhansie, 500 each; Moradabad and Futteghur, 301 each; Allypore, Muttra, Cawnpore, Ghazepore, Jaloun, and Humeerpore, 300 each; Saharunpore, Etawah, Mynpoorie, Banda, Mirzapore, and Azimgurh, 250 each; Shajehanpore and Moozuffernugger, 220 each; Bijour, Etah, Futtehpore, Jounpore and Budaon, 200 each; Boolundshuhur, 230; Meerut, 550; Dehra Doon, 125; Agra, 650; Allahabad, 611; Benares, 404; Goruckpore, 450; Lullutpore, 400; Ajmere Civil Police, 93; and Ajmere Military Police, 950. The surplus arms are either to be transferred to districts having a deficiency according to the above scale, or are to be made over to the Ordnance Department. Slowly, but not the less surely, the new police are taking the place of the old native army.—Hurkaru.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The 6th Regiment N.I., having marched into Barrackpore, Colonel Matthews assumed command at that station. The arrival of the 6th N.I. enables the Wing of the 38th Regiment N.I., at Barrackpore, to join its head quarters. Lieutenant Colonel G. Holroyd, second in command and Wing Officer 6th N.I., has been appointed to the command of the 24th Punjab Regiment of N.I. at Peshawur, during the absence of Major G. H. Cave on medical certificate, to England. The Pioneer of the 26th inst. says that cholera has broken out in H.M.'s 11th Regiment at Fyzabad, and that out of nine cases up to Sunday last, five had proved fatal. The troops were immediately ordered out into camp on the Lucknow-road.

A NEW COMPANY.—We are glad to learn that the deficiency as regards European artificers, to which we adverted in our leading columns some few days since, bids fair to be supplied. We learn that a scheme is on foot for establishing a joint stock company, for the purpose of undertaking the business of engineers and general contractors. The capital of the company is, we understand, to be raised in London, and the company, on a large scale, is to be carried on by a board in Calcutta.—Hurkaru.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL AND THE CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF OUDH.—The Bombay Gazette says:—Mr. Wingfield applied for three months' privilege leave, and the Governor-General, in sanctioning it, has nominated Mr. Davies, the Financial Commissioner, to officiate as Chief Commissioner of Oudh. It is not stated who officiates as Financial Commissioner during Mr. Davies's incumbency of the higher office; probably Mr. Tucker, Commissioner of Khyrabad; but it is more probable that Mr. Davies will, as Mr. Wingfield did when the Judicial Commissioner went on six months' leave, discharge the duties of both his substantive and his officiating appointment. We are not informed at which of the sanitarium Mr. Wingfield will spend his leave, but he will show a very considerable amount of moral courage if he selects Simla, and goes into the immediate atmosphere of the Governor-General and members of Council. Sir John Lawrence has hitherto studiously avoided all personal contact with the Chief Commissioner; therefore, we think his presence would not be very welcome at Simla, or otherwise than embarrassing to himself. Indeed, this present state of antagonism between the supreme Government and the local Government of Oudh seems to us to be the precursor of serious evils in that province.

ACCIDENT TO CAPT. SMITH, 5TH LANCERS.—A letter from Lucknow, dated April 25, says:—A very serious accident occurred here last evening. Captain Smith, 5th Lancers, was pitched head foremost out of his mail phaeton, the horses, a fine pair of whalers, having become unmanageable and ran the vehicle with great force against the corner of a bridge near Wingfield-park. Afterwards they went off at full tear and came in contact with the parapet of another bridge near Huzrut Gunj, smashing the carriage and harness, and injuring themselves also, severely. It was fortunate that there was an absence of carriages at the time on the drive, or there is no saying what further mischief might have been done. Captain Smith was carried home insensible, but I have not heard how he is this morning.

SCANDAL.—The last piece of Calcutta gossip is to the effect that the recalcitration, or to speak more explicitly, the "jibbing," of a certain faithless lover, is likely to form the subject of discussion in the High Court. The fair forsaken resides, we are informed, within a hundred miles of the French settlement of C—, and the delinquent is the nephew of a baronet who has only just quitted an important post in the Indian Administration. Several well-known names occur in the narrative before us, and will, we have no doubt, create considerable interest in the result of the impending trial.—Hurkaru.

PROFICIENCY IN THE LANGUAGES.—The usual donation of 800 rupees has been made to each of the following junior civilians for having passed in two of the vernacular languages of India within six months from the date of their arrival in this country:—Messrs. Beacheroff, Manson, Gordon, Gardiner, Fryer and Thornburn. To Mr. Stogdon the Governor-general has also granted a donation of Rs. 800 for having passed in two languages within four months from the date of his arrival; also a gold medal for a certificate of high proficiency in the Urdu language.

DEATH OF MR. MCKILLIGIN.—It is with great regret that we have to record the death, after a short illness, of J. P. McKilligin, Esq., one of the oldest and most respected merchants. His death will be a great loss to the Landholders' and Commercial Association, and to the mercantile community generally.

THE FINANCIAL SECRETARY.—We regret to hear that Mr. Lushington was detained at Delhi four days ago by illness, and that it was of such a nature that he could not be moved. We hope he is off by this time to enjoy the bracing air of the Hills.—Hurkaru, May 6.

THE LATE COLONEL PATRICK STEWART.—We learn from the Englishman that subscriptions are being raised to erect a monument, at Scutari, over the grave of the late Colonel Patrick Stewart, whose name, in connection with the Indo-European telegraphic line, will remain long in the remembrance of all of us. His burial place is thus described in a private letter from Constantinople:—"Nothing can be more beautiful, in respect of scenery or situation, than the spot. It is on the high, grassy bank of the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus, just at the entrance of the Straits, and commands a splendid view of the Sea of Marmora, Stamboul, and the Golden Horn."

FINANCE ACCOUNTS.—A general order notifies at length and in elaborate detail the following fundamental changes of system in the finance accounts proposed by the commissioners. 1st—The preparation of the finance accounts from audited receipts and charges, as recorded in the books. 2nd—The separation of cash from store accounts and of the accounts of the Civil Department, from those of the Military and Public Works Department. 3rd—The consolidation of these separate cash accounts by a central office, into a general account for India. 4th—The abolition of pre-audit, and the amalgamation of the offices of Deputy Auditor and Accountant General and Civil Pay Master. 5th—Unclassified treasury accounts."

MORE PRISONS.—The Hurkaru has heard that instructions have been issued by the Government of Bengal to the Public Works Department, to prepare plans of the proposed buildings for eight central prisons in the districts of Allypore, Hazareebaugh, Deegah, Dinagore, Burisaul, Chittagong, Assam, and Dacca, and also to the local officers to select eligible sites for the same. Each of those buildings is to be so constructed as to afford sufficient accommodation to 1,000 prisoners, allotting to each of them a space of 57 cubic feet, instead of 27 feet as is the case now. The buildings are to be erected with every regard to sanitation.

THE WIDOW OF THE NANA.—It is reported that Krishna Baie, the widow of the Nana Sahib, has asked for permission to be allowed to pass the remainder of her life at Benares. To this request no reply has been returned. Our readers will remember that when, a few months since, the widow of Bajee Rao preferred a similar petition, she was told there was no objection to her taking up her residence at Benares, provided it was understood she was to remain under surveillance.

TROUBLESOME NEIGHBOURS.—The Englishman says:—"We hear from Cachar that the Nagas are very troublesome again in Kerani; they have killed twenty-three villagers, and plundered and burnt several villages. We learn from Jynteah that a disturbance has broken out in Mowigaur. The subjects of the Rajah of that place have revolted against the Rajah, who has asked assistance from the British Government to check and punish them."

THE MISSION TO KHOKAN.—We are informed that the expedition, of which we wrote in this paper on the 11th and 12th inst., has been definitively abandoned, and the report reaches us from so many quarters that we must accept it as correct. It is stated that the Supreme Government are not favourably disposed towards it, nor do the Punjab Government think it good policy.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE "FLAGRANT INSTANCE OF MILITARY DESPOTISM."—We have an instance of the persistency with which an object, of however questionable a nature, may be pursued at all hazards, in the article which appeared in the issue of the Nagpore Chronicle of the 28th April, on the fracas said to have occurred recently at the Kamptee staging bungalow. The writer of that article, in vindication of the object of the small print in which it finds a place, to "desecrate all that's done (or supposed to be done), below the moon," makes indiscriminate use of truth and fiction, and lays Johnson largely under contribution for the harsher words in the English language. The facts of the staging bungalow affair are simply these:—On Sunday morning, the 16th April, Mr. Whiting, an officer of the Public Works Department, called upon the Cantonment Joint Magistrate and complained that two Europeans (tramps apparently) had taken possession of half the bungalow, had been debauching all night, and were, at the time of his visit, one of them furiously the other helplessly drunk; that they had been destroying the bungalow property, insulting the other occupants, and were, in short, riotous and disorderly. Mr. Whiting, who was in charge of the bungalow, did not know how to act in the matter, and, therefore, solicited the aid of the magistrate to have the unwelcome occupants removed. Inquiries made by the police confirmed Mr. Whiting's version of matters, and European soldiers were obtained to convey the men away to the cells, there being no lock-up for such delinquents except the main guard. So destructive were the "tramps" in their cups that the only things they could destroy in the cells were the pegs stuck in the walls of the building; for this they were made to pay two rupees by Colonel Plunkett, of the Royals. On the 17th the delinquents were put on trial, and admitting what they could not deny, were fined five rupees each, in default five days' imprisonment, the usual verdict in such cases. The note on which the Chronicle says the magistrate alone acted was merely a routine letter, handing over the prisoners from the adjutant of the day, and the case was tried under chapter 15 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The delay in the appearance of the magistrate at Court on the morning of the 17th was entirely owing to illness, and we confidently state that if that officer has no other qualification for his office he has the one quality of punctuality and despatch, and a thorough distaste for arrears of work. How different, our readers will be pleased to observe, are the facts of the case from the representations of the Chronicle.—Central India Times.

THE REV. J. RICHARDS.—The Madras Times says:—"There has been considerable commotion in the Senate of the Madras University on the subject of the Rev. J. Richards' address to the graduates at the late Convocation, at the conclusion of which he thought proper to allude to the Bible, recommended the graduates to study it, and, in effect, expressed his regret that it had not formed a portion of their study in the University. These sentiments were of course very honourable to Mr. Richards, both as a Christian minister and as a private individual, but coming from him as the mouth-piece of the Senate of a Secular University they were open to grave objections. Among those who supported Mr. Richards we understand there were the Commander-in-Chief, the Bishop, the Archdeacon, and the Domestic Chaplain."

WE are glad to hear that cholera is fast disappearing in Kamptee. Since the 1st of March there have been 400 cases, of which 165 have been fatal. Chicken-pox and measles are still prevalent.—Central India Times.

THE FATAL MARCH.

We (Times of India) have received the following particulars in reference to the outbreak of cholera in the detachment of Artillery leaving Mhow:—

It appears that the presence of cholera along the route to Nargaum was represented to the authorities at head-quarters by the telegraph. This removes the blame from the Mhow Staff. The epidemic was both sudden and severe; and, as far as we can learn, no preparations had been made to meet it. Even if the march were necessary, it would surely have been advisable to have had a suitable medical staff and a store of medicines. We are informed that such was not the case. Assistance and medicines were applied for after the outbreak of the disease.

Again, being within a short distance of the Nurbudda river, efforts should have been made to cross it, experience having frequently shown good results from such a proceeding. The order to return through the infected districts is reported as most unwise, and only another instance of fatal error. One poor man on passing the grave of his wife, buried so recently, became insane with grief, and the depression to the whole detachment was much increased.

We hear the most favourable accounts of the praiseworthy and noble behaviour of the young officer in command of the party. It is said his conduct and energetic work was everywhere remarked, and that great benefit was derived from his presence and continual association with the men. We hear with pleasure that his name is to be brought before the authorities, and we feel sure that moral courage and fortitude in such a time, and when alone and unaided, must be entitled to some special notice. Without the excitement of battle and the applauding presence of friends, to go about amongst the dead and dying is a true piece of bravery.

At one time it was hardly expected to have saved the detachment at all. Seven were buried in one grave, and it was hard to say who was to go next. Amidst the worst the sergeant major worked vigorously, and exhaustion consequent on such extreme labour made him fall an easy victim. He was highly respected, and considered a first-rate officer.

A letter from a correspondent appears below, drawing attention to the fearful consequences which had resulted from marching a detachment of artillery from Mhow to Nargaum. Some further particulars that we have received are so startling and grievous that we cannot with justice withhold them from public consideration. It has always been understood that the movements of troops in India, unless under the pressing emergency of war or political interests, should be effected in the cool months; and most people have supposed that distinct orders existed, forbidding soldiers from being marched at this season of the year. It appears that this has been a mistake; but in presence of the disaster to which we refer it may be permitted us very earnestly to urge upon the authorities the necessity there is for some such standing regulations. It is amazing how such an order as the one to which this calamity must be ascribed could have been issued. Two years ago the regiment of the 4th Rifles, now stationed amongst us, came down from Mhow along the same road, which has proved so fatal now. That march took place at this time of year, or even earlier, and those troops suffered severely from cholera. The 15th Regiment N.I., who were to relieve them, went up that road, and they were also attacked by the epidemic. This year cholera cases had previously occurred as results of travelling in those districts; and, as we are informed, the presence of cholera along that route was officially notified to the authorities previous to the march of the Artillery detachment. Ignorance of the danger cannot therefore be admitted; and the general feeling of surprise and regret is thereby much increased. Mhow has already occupied a prominent position in the world. Sensational trials, courts-martial, and fiercest quarrels seem to have their home there, and now the dark catalogue must surely be completed.

The papers both at home and abroad teemed for months with the "Crawley case." Anathemas and invocations were heard in all classes of society against a single supposed fatality arising from military tyranny. What will be said now in England, when the outgoing mail takes news of this disaster without any official explanation to break the force of the melancholy facts? Some thirty poor creatures lie buried in the jungle near Mhow, whose deaths, so far as now appears, are traceable either to careless arrangements or wilful mismanagement. Some one must be held responsible for having issued an order to march through a deadly jungle during the month of April. If the confinement of a sergeant in barrack quarters was spoken of as equivalent to homicide, what can we say of such a march as the one now to be lamented? No doubt the blame is to be attached somewhere, but we doubt if the mere discovery of the culprit is sufficient. Matters must be carried further, in order to prevent future mischance; and the responsibility must be so distinct that any officer who exposes men to needless danger must know that he thereby risks his commission and right to command. It has long been suspected, from the way in which the annual reliefs and transit arrangements for troops have been conducted, that some screw was loose; but few persons expected that such a fearful catastrophe would be invited by deference to formal orders.

There is little wonder that our recruiting system is found to be a failure. It is not much to be expected that men will enter a service where their very lives seem not to be respected, where the mere whim or caprice of an officer hundreds of miles away may cause the forfeit of the lives of a company. They are not likely to care to serve a Government which, without reason or necessity, may place them in the most imminent danger. A soldier must obey a command; but he must have confidence that the commands will be reasonable. We wait for the investigation which must take place; the future welfare of the army demands it; pity for the dead, and sympathy with the survivors, require from the authorities a full and public explanation. The army may rest assured that the matter will not be left to the Indian authorities. Some one at home interested in the welfare of the soldier will surely question the Government and obtain a satisfactory reply to what appears, with our present information, one of the most serious and needless blunders that it has ever been our lot to chronicle. Of one thing we must feel certain. There must be no more marching through the jungle during the hot season. Nothing but exigencies of the most important nature should ever be allowed to interfere with restrictions and orders designed to secure the welfare and lives of our soldiers and officers. We trust that if new regulations be needed to prevent such a catastrophe in future, that they will be prepared at once whilst the present lesson is being impressed on the public mind.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

SIR,—Several inaccuracies having appeared in your issue of the 29th ult., concerning the "fatal march from Mhow," it will, perhaps, be as well to acquaint the public with the real facts of the case.

The detachment arrived at Bulwara, three marches from Mhow, on the 15th ult., and the men were then apparently in excellent health and spirits. On that day two cases occurred, one of which proved fatal after a few hours. The next morning the detachment marched to Burwai; one death took place, and another was attacked on the road. The heat in the tents having been found excessive the previous day, the men were placed in the large buildings of the Burwai iron-works, a detached building being set apart for the hospital. Several cases were, however, admitted into the hospital, two or three of which proved fatal, and some five-and-twenty more were treated for diarrhoea. During the night admissions and deaths were numerous. Next morning the men were moved into tents under a top of trees only two miles off, only the sick being kept in the buildings. On this day three men, one child, and two camp followers died. The same evening the women and children were started off to Sinawud, a village about four miles south of the Nurbudda, and the detachment followed during the night, arriving at day-break on the 18th. Here it was joined by a second medical officer and apothecary, sent from Mhow. The attacks at this place were more numerous than ever; seven men and three children died; and with few exceptions the whole detachment suffered from diarrhoea. Discretionary powers having been given by the General Commanding at Mhow, it was determined to return to the top of the ghauts, and from the time of the promulgation of this order the spirits of all ranks rose. Arrangements were at once made for procuring carts for all the men, but owing to the apathy and indifference of Holkar's officials at Sinawud, the men were obliged to go on foot back to Burwai (in British territory), at which place a sufficient number of covered carts were immediately forthcoming. In these the men were carried back to the foot of the ghauts, where they rested during the heat of the day on the 19th, very few being admitted into hospital. The return march was resumed the same evening, and the next morning the detachment arrived at Hursora, a village about three miles from Mhow, at which place the Mhow authorities had made every arrangement for their reception, fresh tents having been pitched and everything necessary supplied. Four died during this last march, but I believe no deaths have since occurred. The man you mention as having become insane on passing the grave of his wife died of sunstroke. The total number of deaths for which "somebody" is responsible is twenty-one men, one woman, and four children, out of some one hundred and twenty souls.

There is every reason to believe that the Mhow authorities are blameless of this deplorable and wanton sacrifice of life, and we must look to the cool and comfortable quarters of Mahableshwur (where cholera is unknown and heat unfelt) for the real authors of this horrible tragedy. I trust that this matter will not be dropped, or allowed to be hushed up, but that a searching enquiry will hold up to public gaze the man, or men, who are so culpably neglectful of the lives of British soldiers. X.

May 1, 1865.

P. S.—I have since heard that the medical authorities at Mhow are to blame, as the stores of medicine sent proved insufficient, and the medical officer originally sent in charge was himself an invalid.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE SECOND MHOW SCANDAL.—The Pioneer, after narrating the circumstances of the quarrel between Lieut. Col. Stanley, of the 15th Bombay N.I., and Capt. Bushe, of the same regiment, as given in our last number, remarks as follows:—A court of inquiry followed, and it was abundantly proved that Lieutenant-Colonel Stanley did use most ungentlemanly language to Captain Bushe on parade, and that he did ride down on a sepoy with drawn sword and seriously wound him. The sepoy had fainted a few minutes after receiving the thrust, and was carried to the hospital with a hole in his body. With his illness and eventual recovery we have nothing to do at present, but again we cannot help admiring the excellent management of things at Mhow. Here was a wounded man brought insensible to the hospital, and reported to have been cut down by his Colonel on parade; yet no report of the matter got abroad to disturb the equable breast of the officer in command. Nor do we wish to enter into the filthy language which Colonel Stanley is proved to have used alike to his officers and to his men. What we chiefly admire is the circumstances that, after Colonel Stanley had denied both the imputations of Captain Bushe, and after the truth of both these imputations had been established before the court, Colonel Stanley should still be considered a proper person to command the 15th N.I., and that Captain Bushe should still be considered a person deserving to be kept under arrest.

WILD BEASTS AT BOMBAY.—The Gazette says:—A full-grown panther was seen on the Matheran Ghaut on Tuesday evening. It crossed the public road about half a mile on the Narel side of the toll-house, and disappeared in the jungle. That wild beasts are prowling about these ghauts is apparent from the number of sheep and other animals the villagers are daily losing. A few evenings since a gentleman was proceeding in a palkee from one bungalow to another, when the cry of "bagh" was raised, and for one hour and a half neither threats nor bribes would induce the wallahs to budge an inch. A rather uncommon consignment of live stock—if that name may be allowed—was brought down from the interior by the train, reaching Bombay on Monday morning, 8th inst. at 7-15. It consisted of two tigers, one cheeta, one lynx, and one bear, all said to be splendid specimens. The carriage truck in which they were conveyed contained three cages of half-inch iron bars, and in these the animals were imprisoned. They were sent by Mr. Ashburner, Khandeish Collectorate, and were consigned to the care of Messrs. Forbes and Co., for transmission to Europe.

A NEW HOTEL.—There is now every probability of Bombay being supplied with a first-rate hotel, the Western India Hotel Company having, at a recent meeting of its shareholders, determined to go on with their original undertaking, Government having offered them a site for the same on liberal terms.

A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.—The Bombay of to-day is a different place to that of twelve or even six months ago; but matters have culminated to a point, and a change is coming over the "spirit of the dream." The fall in the price of cotton and the collapse of the share market are bringing about a state of things most desirable to see. Bungalows, offices and godowns are now freely advertised "to let," of course at rents out of all proportion to their actual value; but the measure is not yet full, nor is the Elphinstone Circle finished, nor indeed many other new buildings in course of erection. When they are, great will be the fall in the exorbitant rents now demanded. Horses and carriages are coming down rapidly. Labour is nearly as scarce as ever, but bank and financial amalgamations, and the shutting up of the various reclamation schemes on the advent of the monsoon, will no doubt materially mitigate this evil also.—Gazette.

DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT.—A letter from Sukkur received from a well-authenticated source, mentions some shameful proceedings on the part of certain individuals holding her Majesty's commission, during a few days stay in that station. They occupied premises situated in the midst of the private residences of several respectable families, and amused themselves openly with dancing-girls, and other women of loose character. When deserted by these persons, these young men, in a state of comparative nudity, stared with opera-glasses into the adjacent houses, at the windows of which no lady could present herself without being insulted by indecent signs and gestures. The residents in the neighbourhood are justly indignant at such disgraceful conduct; but they have the remedy in their own hands. Let them hand up the names of the offenders to higher authority. Redress is sure to follow.—Scindian.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—In consequence of the retirement from the service of the Hon. H. L. Anderson, Mr. Chapman will, we understand, be confirmed in his appointment as Chief Secretary to Government, and Mr. Gonne will be confirmed in his appointment as Secretary to Government in the Political and Judicial Departments.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, June 5, 1865.

THE FATAL MARCH FROM MHOW.

THE deepest indignation has been excited in India by the fatal march of the detachment of artillery from Mhow, and "What will they say in England?" is asked on all sides. The press of this country, we are reminded, in the case of Colonel Crawley, teemed with denunciations of the alleged misconduct of that officer, resulting in the death of only a single man. What will be thought now? is the question heard on all sides, when the mail brings news that the lives of thirty-four Europeans (men, women, and children) and twenty-five natives have been lost through official obstinacy or indifference.

It is probable that some explanation of this unfortunate affair has been brought by the present mail, but the general opinion in Bombay was that none had been sent, and public feeling on the subject was, of course, intensified by the absence of any sign of concern on the part of the military authorities. Of the extent of the disaster there was unfortunately no doubt. What the public wanted to know was—who was responsible? It is certain that Major-General Green, commanding at Mhow, warned the Bombay head-quarters, not only in general, but particular terms, of the peril that would be incurred by persisting in the order. Not only did he point out the fact that the season was unusually hot, and disease likely to be about, but he distinctly stated that cholera was on the road between Mhow and Nargaum, and warned the authorities of the danger which must attend a march in that direction. The remonstrance was unheeded, and the detachment—men, women, and children—went forth into the jaws of death. Had they encountered a foe of twice their force, and sustained a desperate engagement, they could scarcely have sustained greater proportionate loss than was inflicted by the disease which so suddenly struck down their ranks. The responsibility of the disaster of course rests with head-quarters, but whether General Straubenzy or some departmental officer be individually to blame has not yet appeared. Sir William Mansfield, who, almost equally with his predecessor in the command-in-chief, has earned for himself the name of "the soldier's friend," would have been one of the least likely men to send troops into unnecessary danger, and it is said that he left an order prohibiting the march of troops in hot weather, except in case of emergency. Assuming the error to have been committed by a departmental officer, the Times of India remarks that the responsibility is greater rather than less, because it may have been incurred in a negative form—the refusal to rescind or suspend some routine order fixed months ago; and the writer adds, "Any commander who, in face of the warnings urged by Major-general Green, should have declined to take the responsibility of acting contrary to the regulations of his superiors,—as the stock phrase runs—does not understand what is the proper meaning of responsibility. If he cannot make a better decision between the claims of circumstances as they are, and the rigid rules of routine, he had better have remained in some subordinate position." If the case be indeed as suggested, and it be found that the supposed departmental officer insisted upon carrying out previous orders instead of referring the exceptional circumstances to the Chief, we suspect that he will find himself to have incurred a far more serious responsibility than if he had been a little irregular.

After the holidays it is to be hoped that we shall have some further information upon the subject. The Indian Secretary, to judge by his reply to the question addressed to him on Thursday, seemed to be rather worse informed than most people by last mail; but it is not to be supposed that he can fail to receive the fullest particulars of a matter of so much importance both to the service and the public.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE INDIAN ARMY.—SECOND SERIES.
No. I.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In the leading article of your No. 674, of the 24th inst., in alluding to the opinion of Lord Cranworth, the head of the commission that sat last year to report on the alleged grievances of the officers of the Indian Army, you state that his lordship admitted that "the claimants had been denied a full measure of satisfaction because it was found impossible to accord it. The amalgamation did not admit a full concession of the advantages which they had enjoyed under the old system. The great difficulty in the way of an adjustment was the 'unfortunate clause' which gave the guarantee. The claimants had no legal rights, and the clause should never have been made a part of the Act." But what constitutes a legal right except it be an Act of Parliament? Now, let us look to the Acts which have heretofore affected the army in the service of the late East India Company, which, up to the year 1784, was regulated solely by the East India Company itself.

In that year, by the Act of 24 Geo. III. c. 25, sec. 42, it was enacted, "That all promotions and advancement of the officers and servants of the said united East India Company, as well civil as military, in their respective lines or professions, under the degree of the respective Councillors and Commander-in-Chief, shall be made according to seniority of appointment, in a regular progressive succession, unless any of the said governments and presidencies shall on any very urgent occasion by a vote in Council see cause to deviate from the said general rule directed to be here observed; and on every such occasion the said government or presidency shall cause a full and perfect entry to be made upon their minutes of consultation specifying all the circumstances of the case, and their reasons and inducements at large for making such deviation, and shall transmit the same to the Court of Directors by the first opportunity that shall occur for their order and direction therein; and that all nominations and appointments to be made repugnant or contrary to the directions of this Act, whether the same shall be made by the Court of the Directors of the said united Company or by any of the said governments or presidencies (save and except in cases of emergency, as aforesaid), shall be null and void."

This Act was repealed by 33 Geo. III., c. 52, by which latter Act no order or instructions whatever relating to the civil or military government of India were to be issued by the Court of Directors without having been previously submitted to and approved of by the Board of Control. These observations, though fully entered upon in my letter on the Indian Army, No. II., dated in June, 1864, appear necessary to show that whatever alterations took place between 1784 and 1858 were authorised according to Acts of Parliament, and it was neither competent for the Court of Directors alone nor the President of the Board of Control singly to deviate from the principle laid down in the existing Act of 1786. The alterations made in 1796 met the concurrence of Parliament, and were acted on by the Court of Directors.

The next Act affecting the service of the East India Company is that which transferred the army, navy, and civil service to the Crown, viz., the Act of 21 and 22 Victoria, c. 106, passed in 1858, and by the 26th section of that Act it was enacted "That the military and naval forces of the East India Company should be deemed to be the military and naval services of her Majesty, and should be under the same obligations to serve her Majesty as they would have been to serve the said Company, and should be liable to serve within the same territorial limits only for the same terms only, and be entitled to like pay, pensions, allowances, and privileges, and the like advantages as regards promotion and otherwise as if they had continued in the service of the said Company."

Previously to the so-called amalgamation "A Commission," dated the 15th July, 1858, was appointed, consisting of the Secretary at War, H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief, the Right Hon. Lord Stanley, and others, "to inquire into the organisation of the army serving in the pay and under the control and management of the Hon. East India Company, and to report to her Majesty what changes it might be expedient to make in the existing system."

The Commissioners made their report, dated 27th March, 1859, and therein among other things reported as follows:—"Your Majesty's Commissioners observe that the 56th clause of the Act for the Better Government of India assures to the forces which now belong to your Majesty's Indian Army 'the like pay, pensions, allowances, and privileges, and like advantages as regards promotion and otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the said Company.'" "The privileges and advantages thus referred to are detailed in the appendix, but may be briefly stated to consist in a prescriptive right to rise strictly by seniority to the rank and emoluments of a colonel of a regiment, with the option of retiring before attaining that position, or after various periods of service, on a scale of pay or pension considerably higher than that granted to officers of your Majesty's army of the line." No change therefore can be made which would in "any way disturb the system of promotion of seniority as affecting officers now in the service, or interfere with any of their existing privileges. But the 57th section of the above recited Act gives to your Majesty full power to frame new regulations on this and all other points to be applied to the case of officers and others who hereafter may enter the service."

Nothing can be more plain or explicit than this language of the Commissioners, who, being for the most part military men, took the simple and direct view of the question—namely, that whatever changes it might please her Majesty to make in respect of that part of her army permanently serving in India, the Act of Parliament conferred on her Majesty no power to deviate from the tenor of the Act 21 and 22 Victoria in respect of the immunities guaranteed to the officers and men then in the service of the East India Company, transferred to her own.

But the Commission which was formed under H.M.'s sign manual, bearing date the second day of May, 1863, states in paragraph 60 of its report that in the year 1860 it having been deemed expedient to alter the organisation of the Indian army by incorporating it with the rest of her Majesty's forces so as to make them one army. Accordingly another Act of Parliament passed, 23 and 24 Vic., c. 100, to make the army of India and the army of England one army, to effect which it was enacted that the enlistment of soldiers in England for service in India should be prevented at the same time. It was provided "that the advantages as to pay, pensions, allowances, privileges, promotions, and otherwise, secured to the military forces of the East India Company by the former, should be maintained in any place for the reorganisation of the Indian Army." The amalgamation of the European portion of the Indian Army, comprising twelve regiments of Infantry and the whole of the European Artillery and Engineers, already organised by the Act of 1796, was little more than a transfer of those branches of the service to the Crown, and rendering available the European force of the East India Company to serve in whatever part of the world her Majesty might require their services. No change whatever took place in the mode of promotion, some slight alteration in the names by which each division or company was designated, and a curtailment in the number of general officers in India was effected to prevent the supersession of officers in the Royal Artillery in England. All this was feasible and practicable. The amalgamation of the European branches of the Indian Army has been rendered as complete as was desirable, reserving to the officers certain privileges as to pensions and leave of absence, which belonged to them in the service of the Company.

That amalgamation, however, has completely separated the European portion from the Indian Army raised among the native population, and whose officers are only required to serve in India.

But, in respect to the native army, I have distinctly shown that no alteration was intended to take place affecting the pay, allowances, privileges, and the like advantages as regards promotion and otherwise as if they had continued in the service of the East India Company. It appears clear also that no alteration in the organisation of the army, as framed in 1796, could take place without the recommendation, on the one hand, of the Court of Directors, which no longer exists, and the assent of the Board of Control, which has also died away.

The reorganisation of the Indian Army, enrolled only for Indian service, required no such changes as it has pleased the Secretary of State for India (sanctioned by her Majesty's present Ministers) to make, nor does it seem competent for that high officer to make such alteration in the scheme of regimental organisation and staff promotion totally at variance with the practice of the British army, with which the Act of Parliament required an amalgamation, not a separation.

It may be a question if actions were brought in a court of law to recover damages on account of injuries sustained in consequence of supersession in violation of the Act of Amalgamation whether the plaintiff might not recover, in spite of the opinion of the Commission that the Act conferred no legal rights, or that of the learned law lord at its head, who has stated the same thing in his place in Parliament, concluding that "the clause was an unfortunate one, and should never have been passed"—a censure which both Houses will no doubt fully appreciate.

I may, perhaps, have a few more words to say on the effect the notable scheme for separating the English portion of the Indian Army from that of the native army, instead of amalgamating them. J. B.

COOLIE EMIGRATION SHIPS.

Mr. KINNAIRD asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether his attention had been drawn to the great mortality that had recently occurred among the coolies in their transport to Demerara, and especially on board the ships Clarence and Earl Russell; and whether anything could be done to render the passage less destructive to life, or so to regulate the emigration as to hinder persons being embarked who were not in sound health.

Mr. CARDWELL said his attention had been drawn to the cases of three ships sailing from Calcutta to British Guiana, on board of which there had been unusual mortality. From an examination made by the colonial authorities it did not appear that this arose from any fault in the provisions of the ships, or in the conduct of the surgeons or masters. The governor attributed the mortality to a deposit of matter left by the inundation during the late cyclone at the emigration depot. In regard to the general mortality, he was happy to state that of late years it had been decreasing.

THE PRISONERS IN ABYSSINIA.

In reply to Lord CHELMSFORD, Earl RUSSELL said the latest intelligence from the prisoners in Abyssinia was to the 28th April. Mr. Rassam was waiting at Massowah to fulfil his mission. He had learned that the treatment of the prisoners was not worse. The Government had no intention of sending another mission, but all information received at the Foreign office would be made public.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 1.

PETITIONS.

A petition was presented by Colonel SYKES from Lieut. G. A. Baker, of the cadre of the 60th Bengal N.I., stating that the Royal Commission on the grievances of Indian officers were not able to form a complete opinion on the bonus question, owing to the ex parte statement only, from the India-office, being before it, complaining that conferring brevet rank has not caused full justice to be done; that retired officers are kept on the Army List, stopping promotion, and praying for further inquiry.

LIGHTHOUSE ON BASSES ROCK.

Mr. B. COCHRANE asked for an explanation of the extraordinary and extravagant expenditure on the lighthouse on the Basses Rocks, at Ceylon. He read an account of the sums voted year after year for several years, amounting to £80,000 or £90,000 for this lighthouse, yet there was no lighthouse at all on the rocks; and he wished to know what had become of the money.

Mr. MILNER GIBSON said attempts had been made to erect this lighthouse, but the great difficulties attending the undertaking had been underrated; in short, the money spent had been thrown away. A light-ship had been moored off the reef, and would prove an economical substitute.

Observations were made by Mr. BENTINCK, Sir T. HESKETH, and Mr. HENLEY.

THE INSURRECTION IN CHINA.

Colonel SYKES gave notice that on a future day he should ask the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs a question with reference to the reported dismissal of Prince Kung, and whether he had received information from the diplomatic and consular agents in China, with respect to the progress of the insurrection in several of the provinces.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

In reply to Mr. J. B. SMITH, Sir C. WOOD said that he intended to bring forward the usual Indian financial statement this session; but in the present state of public business he could not say when.

THE WAR IN BHOUTAN.

In reply to Sir M. FARQUHAR,

Sir C. WOOD, who was almost inaudible, was understood to say that certain posts were occupied in the spring. One of them was attacked, and he must say very disgracefully abandoned. That had since been retaken, but it was not thought advisable to occupy it during the rainy season. A second post had been abandoned, but had since been most gallantly retaken by Sir David Bruce; but he believed it was not intended to reoccupy that during the rainy season. But the fact was his information was very incomplete, and he was unable to make out exactly what had been done; whether it had been retained or not. At all events, all the Europeans had been withdrawn, except some small portion of the artillery, and every preparation had been made as far as possible to insure their health.

MORTALITY IN THE ROYAL ARTILLERY ON THE

MARCH FROM MHOW TO KIRKEE.

Sir M. FARQUHAR asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to a statement which had lately appeared in the newspapers with respect to casualties which befel a detachment of Royal Artillery, ordered, on the 11th April last, to set out on a march from Mhow to Kirkee, and whether he had received any report on the subject.

Sir C. WOOD, in reply, said that he had received no published report on the subject of the melancholy occurrence to which the honourable member's question referred. He was sorry to say, however, that there was no doubt it was true that a detachment of artillery had been ordered from Mhow to Kirkee, and that very great mortality occurred on the march. The numbers, he believed, had been stated, but they included both women and children. There seemed to have been a misunderstanding between the military authorities and the officer commanding the detachment. A remonstrance was made to the authorities, who at once countermanded the order for the march by telegraph, but not until it was too late. He thought it only fair to say that the breaking out of cholera amongst troops on the march in India was by no means an uncommon occurrence. It by no means followed that this was owing to any particular season of the year, as cholera occurred at the most healthy seasons.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—JUNE 2.

ROYAL COMMISSION.

The following Bills received the Royal assent by Commission:—

Public Offices (site and approaches); India Office (site and approaches).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 2.

THE AZEEM JAH PETITIONS.

The House took up the report of the Azeem Jah Petitions Committee. That committee say that one George Morris Mitchell has forged signatures to petitions, and that he ought to be adjudged guilty of a breach of the privileges of the House.

Mr. C. FORSTER moved a resolution to give effect to the report of the committee, and a warm debate followed.

Mr. HENNESSY opposed the motion, which found supporters in the ATTORNEY-GENERAL and various other members.

Eventually the motion was carried, and Mr. Morris Mitchell was ordered to be committed to Newgate, there to remain during the pleasure of the House.

PRINCE KUNG.

In reply to a question from Colonel SYKES, Mr. LAYARD said he was happy to be able to inform his hon. and gallant friend that Prince Kung had been appointed his own successor. Her Majesty's Government had received a telegram from Peking to the effect that Prince Kung had been reinstated in all his dignities, and was again Prime Minister. They had not received any official report of the state of trade; but on the whole the accounts seemed to be favourable, with the exception of those places occupied by marauders, and there was every prospect of trade increasing.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.—MAY 27.

[Before Mr. Registrar WINSLOW as Commissioner.]

RE LE GEYT.

The bankrupt was described as the widow of an officer in the Indian army, and residing at Chateau Pont de Brique, Boulogne, out of the jurisdiction of England. She had been adjudicated as a non-trader, and owing debts amounting to £3,000, with assets consisting of furniture and other effects, estimated to produce about £600.

Mr. Lloyd applied for an allowance to the bankrupt out of the estate to enable her to arrange with some of her French creditors who had prevented her leaving Boulogne for England, in order to surrender to her adjudication.

Mr. Lawrance opposed the application, complaining that the bankrupt had been living at a very extravagant rate in France, keeping up a large establishment of servants, and that she ought long ago to have surrendered.

His Honour said that the application was a most extraordinary one. The Court was asked to consent to the payment of the bankrupt's foreign creditors, so that she might be enabled to leave France to attend the sittings of this Court. Such an application could not be entertained. The bankrupt should have returned to this country before she became so involved with the French tradespeople. The utmost the Court could do, as there was some estate, would be to allow the bankrupt £5 to enable her to pay her travelling expenses from Boulogne to London.

[Before Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN.]

RE WILLIAM PETRIE WAUGH.

This bankrupt, whose name has so long been before the public, applied for his release from custody. He now described himself upon his own petition as of 17, Gloucester-crescent, Camden Town, out of business.

It appeared that the bankrupt had been arrested upon a capias, and had since been detained by several other creditors for debts incurred since the date of his former bankruptcy.

His Honour said the application must be refused. He considered that he ought not to interfere with the common law rights of the creditors, as the bankrupt was in custody upon a capias.

Mr. Chidley, for the bankrupt, was prepared to find substantial bail for his client's attendance at the sittings of the Court.

His Honour: That can be done before a learned judge at Chambers. I shall not interfere. Mr. Commissioner Holroyd agrees with me that unless by consent, I have no power to make any order in reference to such an application as this. If the bankrupt wishes to be released, he must go to the Court out of which the capias issued.

The Bankrupt: I wish your Honour distinctly to understand that I never intended to leave the country, and that I do not owe the money for which I have been arrested.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE DERBY DAY.

Between nine and ten o'clock on Wednesday evening, in the village of Merton, a respectable young woman, named Elizabeth Taylor, aged 23, was killed, her sister-in-law dangerously wounded and her life despaired of, and several other persons seriously injured, by the vehicle in which they were riding being run into by a four-horse coach driven by Major Gerard Bolton, of the Indian Army. Among the persons on the coach were the Hon.

Mr. Cholmondeley, Mr. Charles Heneage, Mr. Fenwick, Mr. Alexander Fox Campbell, and some other gentlemen whose names were not ascertained.

An inquest was held by Mr. Wm. Carter, coroner for East Surrey, on Saturday evening, at the Nelson Arms Tavern.

Mr. W. Thomas Taylor, of Holl-cottages, Beresford-street, Walworth, brother of the deceased, was examined. He deposed that on Wednesday last he left London in a waggonette for Epsom, accompanied by his wife, the deceased, and her sister, a younger brother, and his brother-in-law (Mr. Andrews). They stopped at the house of Mr. Pedwell, High-street, Merton, on the right-hand side of the road to London, for the purpose of taking supper. Witness and the driver of the waggonette had got down and gone into Mr. Pedwell's house, leaving the rest of the party in the vehicle. He had not been there more than two minutes when he heard screams outside, and on going out he saw the waggonette turned completely over, and his sister Elizabeth lying under it; the others were lying in the road. The deceased was got from under the vehicle and taken into Mr. Pedwell's house. A mail coach with four horses was standing a short distance off, and a number of persons were collected.

Mr. Henry Harris, surgeon, of Merton, deposed that deceased died from the injuries she received; her back was broken near the shoulders. She only survived half an hour. There was an effusion of blood from the eyes and mouth.

Major Bolton, on being sworn, said:—I reside at the Pines, Torquay, Devonshire, but at present am living in London. On Wednesday last I went with a party of gentlemen to Epsom races, and on arriving at this village on the way back, just below this house, and about fifty yards from where the accident occurred, there was a van of some kind going very slowly, which I passed on the off side. As I passed this, a sort of one-horse trap came up on the other side from the near side of the other vehicle. To hinder him from putting my leaders to the off side I was obliged to pull up. It passed the waggonette. I followed with my leaders, and the bars and splinter bar, which are much wider than the coach, passed clear of the waggonette. I felt a slight shock, and then I knew that something had hit the hind wheel on the off side. I did not receive information at that time from Mr. Taylor that the ladies were seriously injured. I was perfectly sober at the time, having driven the whole way from the Downs. I had driven from the hill through all the crowds, and never let the reins go out of my hands. It was dark at the time, but light enough to see everything on the road. Mr. Simpson, a coachman for 17 years, and stud groom to Sir Watkin William Wynne, was on the box with me. I believe that the box of the hind wheel of the coach was struck, and on that I turned to Simpson and said, "I believe that the vehicle must have backed, as the bars and splinter-bar had passed clear of the waggonette." Mr. Fenwick, Mr. Cholmondeley, and Mr. Heneage were sitting behind me. We were going at about seven miles an hour.

Several witnesses were examined, and who expressed their belief that Major Bolton had used all reasonable precaution to prevent touching the waggonette, and attributed the accident to the waggonette changing its position.

After a consultation, the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.

Mr. Serjeant Parry said that, as soon as Major Bolton was made aware of the fearful accident which had occurred, he sent down Dr. Ferguson to attend Mrs. Taylor, and sincerely regretted what had occurred.

The Coroner said his conduct was very honourable, and the jury had said that no blame was to be attached to him.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LORD CANNING'S MONUMENT.—A correspondent of the Times inquires what has been done, or what is proposed, with regard to the monument to Lord Canning. After Lord Canning's death, subscriptions were collected for a monument to him in London. No information has ever been given to the subscribers or to the public as to the steps that have been taken for carrying out the object, although three years have now passed away.

THE ALLEGED BANK FRAUDS.—Louis Speltz, a merchant of Liverpool, charged with having obtained the sum of £1,678 from the Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan, by false pretences, has again been brought up at the Mansion-house for further examination. The case was again adjourned, the defendant being admitted to bail, himself in £1,000 and two sureties in £750.

COMMERCIAL FAILURES.—It was announced on Saturday, the 27th ult., that Messrs. Woodhouse, Kerriek, and Co., of Abchurch-chambers, East India merchants and agents to the East Indian Underwriters' Association, have been compelled to seek the indulgence of their creditors. The house, which is highly respectable, has been established more than fifty years. Its liabilities are estimated at £160,000, chiefly against produce, but at present no reliable opinion can be formed of the assets. The suspension has been announced of Messrs. Fulcher, Cooper and Co., East India merchants, at Liverpool, with liabilities supposed to amount to £400,000. The disaster is said to be attributable to the failure of Messrs. Woodhouse, Kerriek and Co.

TELEGRAM FROM BOMBAY.—COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.—A commercial telegram, dated at Bombay, May 31, was received on the 1st inst., but it made no allusion to any difficulties of banks or other establishments.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The report of the directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company contains the following passage:—The company's operations since the termination of the last financial year—namely, September 30, 1864, have been considerably affected by the prevailing stagnation of business in India and China; and the falling off of silk freights homewards, coupled with the almost total cessation of specie shipments outwards, as compared with those of the two preceding years, will, of necessity, lead to a diminution in the balance of the revenue account at the end of the year. It should always be borne in mind by the shareholders that when adverse circumstances may temporarily reduce the commercial traffic by the company's steamers, the exigencies of the mail service deprive the directors of the power of contracting their operations in proportion and thereby diminishing expenditure until trade may revive. They have reason to hope, however, that the worst of the dull period may have passed, and that the company's business in the freight department may shortly become more satisfactory. In the face of the circumstances referred to, the directors are not, on this occasion, enabled to follow the course adopted at the half-yearly meetings in 1863 and 1864 of supplementing the dividend with an additional payment, and they accordingly recommend only the usual half-yearly dividend of 34 per cent., free of income-tax. The warrants for the half-year ending 31st March will be payable on the 23rd of June, and the proprietors of new shares are requested to take notice that the dividend will be calculated on £30 for the three months between 1st October and 31st December, 1864, and on £35 for the three months between the 1st of January and the 31st of March, 1865.

SCINDIE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI BANK CORPORATION (LIMITED).—The fourth half-yearly meeting of the shareholders in this company was held on the 30th ult. at the London Tavern, Mr. W. P. Andrew in the chair. The report showed a gross profit of £31,062. 12s. 7d., including the balance brought forward from last half-year, after deducting interest on current and fixed deposits. From this sum £14,551. 16s. 3d. had been deducted for current expenses, and £12,008. 4s. 11d. for rebate on bills and commission on acceptances running, £428. 9s. 6d. for 5 per cent. on preliminary expenses, and £366. 8s. 2d. for bank premises redemption fund, leaving a balance of £3,707. 13s. 9d. at the credit of profit and loss. Losses had been incurred from the suspension of firms, which would, it was estimated, absorb the sum at the credit of profit and loss and the reserve fund, leaving £5,238 8s. 1d. still to be provided for. The chairman moved the adoption of the report, and explained that the losses had been caused entirely through exceptional circumstances. He had no desire to conceal those losses, but he believed that they could well retrieve what had happened, and that the institution might yet become successful and flourishing. If the directors continued to receive the confidence of the shareholders, he had no hesitation in saying that he hoped soon to be able to call the shareholders together and submit to them proposals which would be received with acclamation. In reply to a question, the chairman stated that the loss sustained since the accounts had been made up was as nearly as could be ascertained about £1 per share, that a very great change had taken place in the management of the affairs of the bank in India, and that he hoped shortly to call a special meeting and lay before them a satisfactory report of their Indian affairs. After a long discussion the report was adopted unanimously. The retiring directors and auditors were re-elected, and a vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business.

STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS, &c.—The annual meeting of this excellent institution took place at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Monday, the 29th ult., Lord Henry Cholmondeley in the chair. There were present on the platform and among the company, the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P., Sir Robert Montgomery, (late) Governor of the Punjab, General Clarke, Col. Tudor Lavie, Col. R. M. Hughes, Col. Penley, Prof. Syed Abdoolah, Capt. the Hon. F. Maude, Deputy Assistant Judge Payne, Capt. A. Chapman, Colonel Fenning, &c. The chairman having referred to the continued progress and prosperity of the Strangers' Home at Limehouse, Colonel Hughes read the report. It stated that during the past year there were 279 inmates in the home; of these 253 were brought to this country in British ships, 14 in American, 4 in French, 3 in Swedish, and 1 in a Prussian ship. 177 were sent to the Home, and their maintenance paid for by their employers; 33 were admitted under instructions from the India Council; 9 were sent by the Emigration Commissioners, and 60 came to the Home of their own accord and paid for their board and lodging. The cost of working the Home was found to average about £942 per annum. Upon the motion of the Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P., seconded by the Rev. T. Green, the report was adopted. Resolutions, in accordance with the objects of the institution, were moved and seconded by several other gentlemen in suitable speeches. A resolution, moved by General Clarke, expressed the thanks of the society for contributions received from Princes, Chiefs, Merchants, and gentlemen of India, during the past year, enabling the directors to pay off the mortgage debt on the building and premises; it also earnestly appeared to the public for their continued sympathy. The gallant mover of this resolution testified to the high utility and recommendations of the Asiatic Home. Deputy Assistant Judge Payne addressed the meeting, urging extended support to the institution and pointing out its philanthropic character. He concluded by reciting a copy of verses of his own composition eulogising the many excellent characteristics of the Home. Sir R. Montgomery having proposed, and Capt. Alfred Chapman seconded, the customary compliment to the chairman, Lord Cholmondeley acknowledged the same in a few words, and the proceedings closed with the "Doxology" sung by the company at the invitation of the noble chairman.

Nicholls, his son, Georgiana Elizabeth Nicholls, his daughter, and Mr. W. W. Willink, son-in-law, the executors and trustees. The personalty was sworn under £80,000. W. Willink, also to the children of his deceased daughter, Jane Owry, and to his daughter, Charlotte Wingfield, certain portions of his property, appointing his son Henry and his daughter Georgiana, residuary legatees.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—At the half-yearly meeting, held on 26th ult., the report (an abstract of which appeared in our last number) was read. It was moved by Mr. J. F. Leaf (chairman), and seconded by Mr. F. Halliday. On the motion of Mr. Franklin, seconded by Mr. Thompson, a resolution was unanimously passed requesting the directors to communicate to the Government the respectful remonstrance of the company at the non-fulfilment of expectations held out in reference to the construction of feeder roads, the absence of which had deprived the company of remunerative local traffic, which otherwise would have come upon the line.

COTTON IMPORTS.—The stock in Liverpool is now 494,500 bales against 357,400 bales, and the quantity at sea for Great Britain from India and China, reckoning the latter at 3 piculs to the bale, is 403,300 bales against 369,300 bales, being an increase of 137,000 bales in stock, and 34,000 bales in shipments afloat over the end of May, 1864. THURSTON AND CO.,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS

TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, 14, CATHERINE STREET, STRAND, LONDON.

The great superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by this Firm is fully attested by the fact of their Tables having been patronised by Royalty since the reign of George III., during which period they have been honoured also by the patronage of the principal Nobility and Gentry of England, nearly 250 of Her Majesty's and the Native Regiments at home and abroad, and more than one hundred of the principal London, Provincial, and Foreign Clubs.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Foryth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALL'S LO FAST BREECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown.—(See Times, 11th October 1864.) No other rifle possesses the same advantages.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpured by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travelers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co., 270, Regent-street London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.

This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocuous as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

Earl Russell sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Minilla (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.
Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS.

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d. postage, 1s. 10d.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animals, but is unrivalled in destroying Flies, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitos, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect.

SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying fleas in their dogs, as also ladies for their pet dogs.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—PREMONITION.

The opinion gains ground that disease is a diminution of vitality, and there is little doubt that the powers of life are principally depressed by impurities in the system. This depravity can be corrected by taking a course, or an occasional dose, of Holloway's famous purifying Pills, which expel all morbid matters from the circulation, and thoroughly cleanse and invigorate the glands, viscera, and the brain. Through this wholesome influence, Holloway's medicine casts out the seeds of all fevers, which, in sunny weather, prove so formidable to health, and in a vast majority of cases destroy life itself. Forewarned should be forearmed—a position easily obtained by taking these excellent Pills, when lassitude, headache, or dejection distresses us.

EXPANDING SADDLE.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 17th of May, Madras to the 13th, and Bombay to the 23rd of the same month. The Bombay mail overtook that of Calcutta, and both arrived at the same time, on the night before the date at which they were expected, at Marseilles.

Commercial affairs occupy an important place in the accounts from Calcutta and Bombay. At Calcutta the reaction which usually follows speculative excitement had been felt, but the mercantile position of the Presidency was generally sound, and money easily obtained at moderate rates. "Ease and extreme caution" were said to be the prevailing features at the latest date—a very happy state of things compared with that at Bombay, which city is described as having fallen from the height of prosperity to the lowest deep of adversity, with a swiftness unparalleled in the history of any commercial nation. Scrip of all kinds, in which paper millionaires reckoned their fortunes, had become absolutely unmarketable; and at the lowest computation, says the Bombay Gazette, the loss caused during the last three months by a depreciation in the value of shares which speculators will be called upon to make good amounts to not less than £30,000,000 sterling. The fictitious capital, the writer adds, which the share-list exhibited some time ago had, in fact, never existed in Bombay. A comparatively small capital, skilfully handled by two or three men who held the strings and made the puppets of the share market move as they wished, had been invested over and over again in one new company after another, and as uniformly withdrawn whenever the shares reached a high premium, and were freely sold for delivery at some future date. This time-bargaining, or lending money on time bargains, soon became the principal business of banks and financials, managed by men who had no acquaintance with the first principles of monetary science, and the consequence was that all the joint-stock banking associations in the place were left with their coffers empty of money, but full of one another's shares. For a time they waited quietly, but confidently, the coming of the period when they would realise their gains; but as the day of reckoning approached, and men began to think actually of paying for the shares which till then they had held on credit, there arose a demand for money which Bombay not only has not now but never had the means to supply—the result being a panic which threatens to be the most disastrous of modern times.

As regards general news the prominent topic in Calcutta was the alleged intended retirement of Sir John Lawrence from the Viceroyalty. Sir John, it is said, objects to the electric telegraph, especially when there is a minister at the London end of the wires who likes to have his own way. He complains that he has no independent authority, as he had in the Punjab, and that while he has all the work and the responsibility, the Indian Secretary gains all the honour and glory. This, at least, is the common report, and it receives some confirmation from the fact that the Governor-General is selling his stud. It is also believed in Calcutta that Sir Bartle Frere is really about to vacate his post, as was reported a mail or two ago, and an up-country paper goes so far as to name Mr. Ellis or Mr. Mansfield as his probable successor. In Bombay, however, the latter report is stoutly contradicted by the press, and one of the papers is especially contemptuous concerning the suggestions of a successor, declaring that even were Sir Bartle to resign, the Man in the Moon would have a better chance of succeeding him than either of the above gentlemen. The idea of Sir John Lawrence's retirement is also received with incredulity in Bombay; but this may be attributable to presidential jealousy.

The scheme of a Grand Industrial Exhibition for Calcutta in 1869 is in a fair way of realisation, the Home Government having sanctioned an outlay of two lacs of rupees for the erection of an appropriate building. It is suggested that the design of the structure should be thrown open to public competition, so that it may not be more ugly than need be. There is also a good time coming for Calcutta, in the way of water supply. The scheme of Mr. Clarke, the municipal engineer, for carrying out this important object, has been adopted by the Justices of the Peace; but as the work will cost fifty lacs of rupees, it is possible that the Government will prove a check upon the imagination of its advocates, more especially as the public are said to be directly opposed to the project. Among other changes in the City of Palaces, may be noticed the introduction of omnibuses, and carts for watering the roads.

Less fortunate in every way than Calcutta, Bombay has been obliged to abandon its scheme for an International Exhibition in 1857. A joint-stock company was found impracticable for the purpose, so a hint was taken from home, and the plan of guarantees resorted to. But this too has failed. Such guarantees as had been obtained are now withdrawn, on account of the state of the market, which will not allow of even rich men risking money in vanities. By way of some little consolation the Bombay gas works have been completed, and were to have been opened on the 26th of May. They occupy a large area of ground at Chinchpoughly, and have been erected under the supervision and control of Mr. Proud, resident engineer.

There has been a notable failure at Bombay—the firm of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama having "gone." The liabilities are estimated at £3,300,000. Trustees have been appointed, and a deed of assignment of the estate has been made over to them. It is expected that the assets will realise fifteen shillings in the pound.

Outbreaks of cholera still continued in many parts of the country. Among other places it had made its appearance at Dum Dum. In H.M.'s 11th Regiment, at Fyzabad, nine men had been attacked in a few days, and five of them were carried off. The regiment had in consequence been moved into camp on the Lucknow road. A species of plague had also broken out among the native community at Pahlampur, in Guzerat, and caused a great deal of alarm in the neighbourhood. Government had at once ordered medical assistance to the spot.

"The Fatal March from Mhow" has been explained in a Government notification, which throws the blame upon Major General Green, who, contrary to current belief, it seems, did not warn the military authorities of his fear of cholera when asked if the detachment should march, except indeed incidentally, and in relation to another subject, and too late to be of any avail. He is also considered by Government to have improperly assumed that the affirmative reply fettered his discretion in the matter.

It was stated on the authority of the Lahore Chronicle that Azim Khan and his followers had been attacked and put to flight, at Dargi, by Hisamooddeen, the Governor of Khost.

Some news from Central Asia, which may be included in the numerous category of "important if true," has been published by the morning papers on the authority of one of Mr. Renter's telegrams from Tiflis. The account will be found elsewhere. Its authenticity has been impugned by a correspondent of the Times, and there are certainly suspicious appearances which suggest the necessity for confirmation.

A few hours before the Calcutta mail left, a fine ship called the Hecuba, from Liverpool, while going alongside the railway jetty at Howrah, struck upon the wreck of the Azemia, sunk during the cyclone, and knocked a hole in her bottom. She was said to be sinking. She was laden with railway material and locomotives.

We observe that the Government tea plantations and factories in Kumaon, the Dehra Dhoon, and the Kangra Valley in the Punjab, are put up for sale. The conditions may be learned from a notification in another column.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta mail, which may be expected at Marseilles on the 26th, and Southampton on the 30th inst.

GREAT DEFEAT OF THE RUSSIANS IN KHOKAN.

[REUTER'S EXPRESS.]

TIFLIS, May 17.

The progress of the Russian arms in Central Asia has just received a serious check. Hitherto everything had favoured the progress of General Endokimoff, whose successes were as much due to the exertions of Prince Gortschakoff as to the military talents of the generals of the Czar. Having made friends of the important population belonging to the Khanat of Khokan, called Kaissans, General Endokimoff carried his army of 40,000 or 50,000 infantry, with a proportionate force of cavalry and artillery, into those districts of Central Asia, knowing well how far he could count upon his people. By this means, on the side of the Lake Aral, the Russians, without striking a blow, obtained possession of the fortress of Ak Medjid, a place of great strategic importance, near the mouth of the Sir-Darid. They claimed the fortress as having been sold to them by the late Khan of Khokan, now in exile at Bokhara, Koadaiar Khan. On the side of Turkistan the Russians, after a fifteen days' march, advanced to Kodja-Ahmed, the Tesak of the Russians, and from thence, after another march of six days, they reached the fortress of Tchimkett, otherwise known as Toumkat, a place only three or four days' march from Tachkend. This progress of the Russians, made without firing a shot, was altogether due to the assistance and countenance of the Kaissaks, who, partly on account of their Russianised habits, and partly owing to their wealth in cattle, which causes them to desire the protection of the Russians, thus lend all the aid in their power to their projects of domination. The great object of the late march of the Russians has been to obtain possession of the town of Tachkend, as occupying a point strategically the most favourable to their views, being on one side the key to the Khanat of Khokan, and on the other seriously threatening the Khanat of Bokhara, if the latter ventured to offer any assistance to the former. General Endokimoff, after his march of twenty-one days, was able to arrive almost at the gates of Tchimketi, and he attempted to obtain possession of the place with the future view of the occupation of Tachkend. He imagined, it would seem, that the Khokanese commander would at once open the gates, and little anticipated that in place of an easy conquest he would find the Regent of Khokan, the Emir Mera-Ali-Khanli, at the head of a numerous force, ready to oppose him. The Russian general, seeing the place in a perfect state of defence, with a battery of fifty cannon, gave up all idea of attacking it, and gave battle instead to the Emir. The conflict was a bloody one, and ended in the defeat of the Russians, who were compelled to fall back upon Hodja Ahmee with a precipitancy which amounted to a flight. The Kokanese had about 1,000 killed and wounded, and the Russians, it is said, about four times that number. No doubt General Endokimoff will endeavour at the earliest opportunity to retrieve this disaster, but it will be difficult for him to take Tchimketi, not only on account of the strength of the place, but of the spirit of the inhabitants, which is now thoroughly roused. The Regent is thoroughly aware of the importance of the post, and has mustered an army of 150,000 highly efficient troops for its defence. It is now certain that the Khan of Bokhara has not only sent a sum of money to the assistance of Khokan, but is at the head of a large army of observation on the frontier, in the neighbourhood of Samarland.

REPORTED RETIREMENT OF SIR JOHN LAWRENCE AND SIR BARTLE FRERE.

We take the following from the Hurkaru:—The topic of the hour just now is the resignation of Sir Bartle Frere and the rumoured retirement of Sir John Lawrence. Sir Bartle Frere has suffered much at the hands of Sir Charles Trevelyan, and it is said his resignation is due to a snubbing he received from Sir C. Wood at the instance of our late financial Minister. Sir John Lawrence has ordered his stud to be sold, and on dit says he, too, is annoyed at the way in which he is checked by the Secretary of State. He is said to have remarked that he has less freedom of action now than when he was Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab. Sir Charles Wood has all the power and Sir John all the responsibility and all the blame. India will yet have to be governed in India.

The Englishman alludes to the same subject:

—“A difference has arisen between the Government of India and Bengal, in which the usual obstructiveness of Sir John Lawrence is once more exhibited, and once more shows that he is not the man for the time. It appears that he some time ago requested the Government of Bengal to submit to him all Bills containing penal clauses before introduction into the Council, a plan so evidently inconsistent with the independence of the Council, and the purpose for which it exists, that the Bengal Government have courteously, but firmly, declined to comply. It is generally believed that Sir John Lawrence's Indian career will terminate during the ensuing cold weather. His retirement will, we regret to say, be as acceptable as it is probable, and is no doubt earnestly desired by himself. His peculiar excellencies, and we do not deny that he has many, are not such as to be called forth by the present condition of the country; his peculiar deficiencies are such as the present wants of the country make particularly conspicuous and pernicious. Sir Bartle Frere has resigned the Governorship of the Bombay Presidency, at which no one is surprised who has observed the pertinacity with which the Secretary of State and the Government of India have snubbed him, whenever his views have been more liberal than theirs. He had not the faculty of concealing wants and dangers for which it did not suit the pocket or the policy of the Government of India to provide a remedy.

THE CONVEYANCE OF THE OVERLAND MAILS.

It is not long since we referred editorially to the inconvenience and unremunerative expense of the present arrangements with the Peninsular and Oriental Company, for the conveyance of the Overland Mails. A glance at any map of Europe, exhibiting the lines of railway, will be sufficient to show that our postal system is behind, not only the requirements, but the opportunities, of the age. While people are dreaming about the probability of some day travelling by railway from London to Bombay, without changing carriages, in seven days—while millions are being squandered upon a canal which when finished can never be of any use—the means for speedier and more efficient transit from India to England actually exist, if we would only avail ourselves of them. The Times of India, of the 2nd instant, publishes a letter from Mr. Robert Knight, urging India to carry out a project which she should have been the first to suggest, and which should have been by this time in full train. By supplementing the mails at present sent from Bombay, via Southampton and Marseilles, by the despatch of others via Falmouth and Brindisi, we should save at least four days upon the time of transit by the present route, and, at the same time, secure a means of weekly communication which could be depended on with confidence. Southampton and Marseilles, remarks the writer of the letter in question, can be regarded only as ports provisionally selected pending the completion of the railway systems of Europe. So far as passengers and mails are concerned, it may, with equal truth, be said that Calcutta can only be regarded as a port provisionally selected pending the completion of the railway system of India. Falmouth, besides being the nearest port to India, is now in direct and easy communication by rail with every centre of commerce in Great Britain. It is undoubtedly the right point of departure for all the Indian and Mediterranean mails. "Situating," says Mr. Knight, "at the entrance of the channel, and, therefore, free from the dangers and delays incidental to its navigation, with splendid dock and railway accommodation, it is accessible at all times of the tide, and in all weathers, with comparative ease and safety. The homeward mails could be forwarded thence simultaneously to London, and to the great commercial centres of the North, while the outward ones would be despatched in the same manner." The advantage of Brindisi over Marseilles is even still more striking than that of Falmouth over Southampton, the distance between it and Alexandria being about eight hundred miles less than between the latter port and Marseilles. From the prospectus of the Central European Railway Company, quoted by Mr. Knight, we learn that "a vote of 6,000,000 francs was passed, on the 23rd July last, by the Italian Chamber of Deputies, and has since been confirmed by the Senate, for the adaptation of the port of Brindisi to the requirements of the Indian and China trade." Nothing is left but for capitalists to come forward and organise a scheme, which cannot fail to be a most lucrative one, to unite the above-mentioned ports by a service of steamers of superior speed, and with a better accommodation for passengers than those of the Peninsular and Oriental Company. Bombay is, perhaps, as Mr. Knight says, the right point for the initiation of the scheme; but Calcutta should not be far behind Bombay in supporting it.—Englishman.

PROSPECTS OF PEACE WITH BHOOTAN.

Matters are slowly drifting towards peace in Bhootan. The recent report of the disaffection of Angdo Forung, the Jungpeen of Wandipore, gains strength, and so does the rumour that Tongssoo Penlow is not so influential as formerly. He gained his power by the exercise of qualities which would now seem to have degenerated into a stubborn pride, and a more than barbarian haughtiness and self-will. At the very commencement of the war, we find the Deb and Dhurm Rajahs anxious to throw off a yoke which he rendered intolerably heavy, and which he was only able to keep upon their necks by the assistance of the Jungpeen, who would now seem to have abandoned his cause. The disaffection and dislike of the Durbar was quickened by the results of Tongssoo's brutality on the occasion of the reception of the embassy, and there was always a party ready to turn the slightest wavering of the Rajahs to the disadvantage of the dictator. The Paro Penlow had been the chief supporter of the Deb Rajah, whom Tongssoo Penlow immured in a monastery, and he, as a matter of course, rallied round himself all those who fancied they had cause to fear or dislike his enemy. Paro Penlow has all along striven to re-establish peace, and has all along been in communication with the civilians who accompanied the force. The defeat at Dewangiri, although but a trifling affair, would seem to have dispirited the Bhootas, who have never any very great stomach for hard fighting, and to have consequently shaken their faith in Tongssoo Penlow's defensive measures and the protection of the army of gods he has invoked. Matters are decidedly taking a peaceful turn, as we find the Government have issued instructions to Colonel Haughton, the political agent with the force, by which he is empowered to entertain any propositions having for their object the restoration of peace, provided they are made by persons properly authorised. He is not, however, authorised to consider any terms which may be submitted to him or to give any pledge. All the Bhoota proposals will have to be submitted to the Viceroy through the Government of Bengal. This is rather a roundabout mode of procedure, and considering that whilst the Secretary to the local Government is in Calcutta, the Lieutenant-governor is at Bhaugulpore, and the Viceroy at Simla, it promises to create a very great and undesirable delay. It would be far more reasonable to furnish Colonel Haughton with instructions as to the terms the Government would consent to, leaving him to get as much better terms as he could, and maintaining a reference only in case of a wide divergence on the part of the enemy. We trust, too, that the Government, in any negotiations which may arise, will consider the expediency of securing our frontier by some better arrangement than the mere extension of the boundary to the northern edge of the Terai.—Hurkaru.

THE TRIBES ON THE N.W. FRONTIER.

All along the frontier of the Punjab on the North and West are found various tribes of fierce and warlike savages, with whom the British Government is being continually brought into contact. It was only the other day we reported that the tribes about Peshawur, the Momunds—were uneasy and restless, and inclined to forget all the lessons read them of the power of the Government, not only to repress, but to punish any acts of violence they might commit. We next had to record the outbreak of the Wuzerees in front of Tank. There seems ever a constant ripple of plunder and fighting running up and down the frontier. At one time the Swatees are more than usually stirred by an access of fanaticism, at another the Wuzerees are more than usually inclined to assert their pretensions to be the freest, as well as the bravest and most predatory of the tribes. From Peshawur to Derah Futeh Khan, the tribes are Pathian, south of this place they are Beloochees. The Pathan tribes are essentially savages, tinctured only with a peculiar fanaticism as Mahommedans. Their want of faith has become a proverb in India, and they are considered as only beaten in this respect by the unscrupulous and treacherous Cashmerian. Their training makes them men of the sword, and a Pathan mother has been known to pray that her son might become a great and successful robber, just as in England a mother might pray for her son to become distinguished for his wisdom and uprightness. But if the Pathan tribes are notorious as marauders, the Belooch tribes are even more so. They are at constant feud with themselves, and those near Derah Futeh Khan have an especial and ceaseless enmity to the neighbouring Pathan tribes. Their hills are, however, somewhat more remote than those of the Pathans, and advantage has been taken to place the chiefs of the tribes in the plains in charge of the passes nearest their own villages; by this means incursions are to a large extent checked. But with men so prone to take sword and matchlock in the hope of securing the hoard of some villager, or the well-laden camel of the merchant, no arrangement can be considered altogether faultless. They will break through and exercise their peculiar vocation in spite of all efforts to prevent them. Just now they are again in motion—this time, however, towards the Pathan border rather than towards the plains. Reports have come in that they have attacked the Osteranis, and that in consequence the frontier is in a very disturbed state. It will be many, many years before it is otherwise. These tribes, whether Pathan or Belooch, are independent in a great measure, and even when any clan has been gained over, to take land at the foot of the hills, and to give up the tulwar for the plough, they are apt to keep up close relations with their brethren on the hills, and to retreat to their old haunts, or to the villages on the hills on very slight provocation. It is only by a strong and active border force, keeping them back to the hills, that we can hope the example of those of the tribes that have settled in the plains will gradually have its proper effect. The work to be done by the British derives much of its difficulty from the want of a strong and stable Government in the hills able and willing to keep the tribes in order.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MAJOR DIXON.—The following appeared in many of the Indian journals a few weeks ago:—"Major Dixon, an officer now serving in Mysore, we observe, has been called upon by the Home Government for an explanation of his conduct in neglecting to provide for the support of his children in England."—Hurkaru (vide Bangalore Herald, April 1). With reference to the above, which, looking at it as it stands, is likely to reflect great discredit on the gallant officer in question, it affords us much pleasure to state that the complaint alluded to is entirely without foundation. After an attentive and unbiassed perusal of the official documents that we have seen, and which are alluded to in the subjoined letter from Major Dixon, exculpatory of that officer, tendered through Mr. Bowring to Sir Charles Wood, and which we have good reasons for believing are perfectly satisfactory, we can only say that with the major we think the complaint preferred by Surgeon-major Alfred H. Cheke, of H.M.'s Bengal army, both unjust and unbrotherly, besides being most uncalled for, from the very fact of the answer to the complaint in question being simply that at the very time he (the major) received it he held a receipt for the usual quarterly remittance in his hand.—Hurkaru.

MR. HENRY C. HAMILTON, opium agent of Benares, after a service of thirty-five years has applied for permission to retire on the pension of his rank. Mr. C. F. Carnac, late inspector-general of police in Bengal, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Henry Hamilton as opium agent at Ghazee-pore, on a salary of Rs. 30,000 per annum. In consequence of this appointment the following promotions are to take place shortly:—Mr. F. B. Simson, additional judge of Jessore, to be district judge on the establishment. Mr. H. B. Lawford, officiating additional judge of Jessore to be confirmed in the latter appointment. Mr. H. Muspratt, officiating magistrate, collector and salt agent of Balasore to the appointment permanently of a 2nd grade magistrate and collector.

STATUS OF NATIVE CHIEFS.—The Hurkaru says:—"In the time of the Company it was the practice to consider that native chiefs in their own territories were to be addressed as if they were actually independent kings by the political agents deputed to their courts. The custom by some means or other attracted the attention of the Home Government, and orders have consequently been passed to discontinue the practice. The step is a wise one, and one that was needed, but Sir Charles Wood ought to have thought of it before passing his absurd order giving Royal salutes to many of the very chieftains whom he now rules are not to be considered as enjoying the full privileges and dignity of 'royalty.'"

THE EX-KING OF OUDE.—From a Lucknow newspaper we have an amusing sketch of the private life of the poor ex-King at Garden Reach. A young sister of his, who resides in Lucknow, lately returned from a visit to his Majesty. She speaks of her reception having been most enthusiastic by her brother; but says that he was so surrounded by new faces that it was impossible to have any quiet or private talk with him. He has spent lacs upon his pseudo-marriages, and lacs more on the purchase of houses in Garden Reach for the accommodation of his fast increasing number of wives. He is said to be the owner of no less than fifty or sixty houses in Calcutta, besides being the rentee of some ten or twelve more. He lately paid a greasy Bengalee a lac for a menagerie on the Dunn Dum road, to which he has been adding white monkeys, for which he has given a thousand rupees each, and a couple of alligators, for which he paid enormously, because some one assured him that in the stomach of one precisely similar to these a live child was found! His stock of pigeons consists of some twenty thousand of every breed of that feathery tribe. Each breed and colour has a house to itself; thus there are several houses occupied by pigeons only. For horses, strange to say, his Majesty has no particular partiality, and his stables contain some of the greatest screws in Calcutta, but for which, nevertheless, he has given the most fabulous prices; indeed, the people of Calcutta—house-builders, horse-dealers, carriage-manufacturers, cabinet-makers, fiddlers, and dancing-girls—have each and all made their fortunes from the reckless extravagance of the ex-King. Not only does his lac a month go, but, during the eight years he has been in Calcutta he has run through two millions worth of gold mohurs that he took with him from Lucknow, and eighty lacs more that he realised by the sale of jewels at Hamilton's, who thus realised eight lacs by commissions alone, to say nothing of what they made from cheap purchases of, probably, the best articles. It is said that the other day he made up his mind to apply to the Queen to allow him a trial at playing the "merry monarch" again in Oudh. The proposition was to contain the condition that if he failed to give satisfaction in three years, he was to be removed at the expiration of that period, with the forfeiture of all future claims for pensions, &c., on the British Government. But it seems he thought better over it; and, moreover, being informed that the Governor-General had already stated his unwillingness to forward any application or appeal from his Majesty to the Queen, there was an end of the matter.—Harkaru.

ABANDONMENT OF MUTTRA.—We learn that, after very many reports on the subject, at length official communication has been received in more than one department that Muttra is given up as a cavalry station, and the present regiment merely remains, while accommodation is being found for it elsewhere. Government, of course, does not give the reasons at the moment, together with the notice. They are, however, generally supposed to be chiefly these, viz.:—1. The anomaly of cavalry being located at a distance of forty miles from the artillery, with a very bad road to boot. 2. The policy of advancing European troops nearer the frontier line, extending from Cabool to Bhootan, and 3. That in the Muttra district, where the principal natives are of the trading, and not the military caste, the body of police are sufficient for keeping peace and order.

A PARCELS DELIVERY COMPANY FOR CALCUTTA.—Calcutta is promised a bona fide Parcels Delivery Company, which shall do for it what is now done by the ubiquitous exacting coolie. For our lives we do not see why such a company, properly managed, should not succeed, and in the interests of the public ease and comfort we wish its projectors success.—Harkaru.

COLONEL DURAND.—The Friend of India says:—The appointment of Colonel Durand as Military Member of the Council is an instance of justice delayed so long as to be almost valueless. Col. Durand is the victim of his advocacy of the interests of the Company's local army. When Sir James Outram left India in a dying state, and after a short residence in England insisted on returning to his post in the Calcutta Council, Sir Charles Wood, we believe, asked Colonel Durand, whom Lord Stanley had made a member of the Secretary of State's Council, to exchange seats with Sir James. Colonel Durand consented. Lord Canning was eager for the arrangement, partly to save Sir James Outram's life, and partly that he might again avail himself of Colonel Durand's services. But the late Prince Consort could not forgive the Colonel's determined advocacy of the local army, and accordingly the Crown gave Sir James Outram's seat to Sir Robert Napier. Lord Canning did his best to undo the wrong by inviting Colonel Durand to fill the office of Foreign Secretary. It has been truly said of Lord Elgin's administration that then the Government of India consisted of Mr. Maine and Colonel Durand. When they agreed, Lord Elgin acted, when they differed, he did nothing. So high was his appreciation of the Foreign Secretary, that he distinctly informed more than one official of his intention to appoint him Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, when—unfortunately for his own interests, as it would now seem—Colonel Durand advised Lord Elgin to accede to the request of both Sir Robert Montgomery and Mr. Macleod for another year of office. In the discussions which are impending on the two great questions of the Staff Corps, and the relation of our feudatories to the Crown, the new member will adequately supply an element much needed in the Council.

A WEEKLY MAIL FOR INDIA.—A Calcutta paper says:—"As we anticipated, the movement which has taken place in England, for the despatch of the mails for India on fixed days of the week instead of certain dates of the month, is only the beginning of a much-needed reform. We are surprised that so little has been done in Calcutta to help on the movement. The press has, indeed, spoken with a unanimity which can scarcely be mistaken; but something more is required. Things and men do not move here of themselves. There is a large amount of pressure required to obtain a very small reform, there is a tedious course of circumlocution to be gone through on the most direct and common sense subjects; as if any straightforward course were necessarily wrong or the least efficient. We are glad to perceive that the Chamber of Commerce of Bombay has taken up the question. They have addressed a memorial to Lord Stanley of Alderley, the Postmaster General, in reference to the proposed change in the despatch of the mail from England, and the necessity of a corresponding alteration at this end of the line. We do not wish to find fault with the people of the Western Presidency for drawing his lordship's attention to the want of a 'weekly mail communication from Bombay to England;' but we should have preferred to see the question put on the broader ground of India. Of course the people of Bombay are best able to speak on their own wants, and to suggest what should be done to meet them. What we regret is that in a matter affecting the interests of the whole of India, Bombay should be left to speak alone. If they can obtain a weekly mail, of course the rest of India would partake of the advantage. But why does not Calcutta also arise to the necessity of the occasion, and add the weight of her influence to the application to the Post Master General?"

PAUPER HOSPITAL.—The sum of Rs. 35,000 has been placed at the disposal of the Bengal P.W.D. for the construction of a pauper hospital in Amherst-street.

THE WUZEREES.—The Englishman says:—"Several reports have reached us regarding the disturbed state of that portion of the north-west frontier of the Punjab inhabited by the Wuzerees. They occupy the chain of hills the foot of which skirts the border line for a distance of sixty miles, extending from the limit of the Kohat district to the Galeree Pass, embracing to the north the Bahadoor Hills, and to the south the fertile plains of Murwut and Tank. The hills, barren and rugged in their general aspect, are intersected by passes and deep ravines, some of which are of considerable importance to these marauding tribes, who are masters of all the defiles through which the traffic of Cabul finds its way into our provinces. The key of the highway to India is the Galeree Pass; it connects the Upper Provinces with Cabul, Candahar, and Central Asia. The next pass of any importance is Jurduk, the main road between Bunnoo and Kohat; and through this pass the traffic is but of trifling importance in comparison to the more important trade of Galeree. The light of civilisation has scarcely found its way among the savage races that inhabit these hills. Of a warlike and indomitable character, they are very difficult of restraint. The race of the Wuzerees, descended originally from the fierce tribes of Cabul, have inherited all the wild and martial qualities of their ancestors; they bear all the impress of men accustomed to a life of freedom and independence, and are impatient of all control; they answer in great measure to what history teaches us of the primitive clans of the Highlands. Within the last few years they would seem to have extended their cultivation, and some of the tribes are reported to have crossed the border and settled under British protection. With these and the inhabitants of the valley formerly occupied by the Bunnoo tribes, a land revenue settlement was made by the British Government as early as 1847, and since that period they have maintained friendly relations with the authorities, in whom they repose the utmost confidence. Our space will not permit us to enter into a detail of the various tribes of the race holding these mountainous tracts. Like all savages, their allegiance to the British Government lasted so long as they thought they had no subject of complaint, and we all know how easy it is for a barbarous people to find an excuse to break through the bonds of restraint. Measures have been taken to force them back into their mountain passes. A blockade and a few hostages will probably be sufficient. The Nawab of Tank has declined to act against them."

BAROO SHIB CHUNDER MULLICK has kindly placed at our disposal some silver coins, found upon the Soonderbun, lot 211. The coins are in a good state of preservation, and the inscription is remarkably well defined. In weight they are something more than the current rupee. By the assistance of the Secretary of the Asiatic Society, who has favoured us with the meaning of the inscription, we learn that the legend on the obverse is,—"The most powerful Sovereign Ghias-ood-dunya-wa-ood-deen. The victorious Balban, the Sultan." That on the reverse runs,—"The Imam-ool-Mustassem, Commander of the Faithful." It is added that Ghias-ood-deen was tenth monarch of the Pathan dynasty, from which our readers will be able to judge for themselves of the antiquity of the coin, and of the settlements in the Soonderbuns. Near where the coins were discovered were found the remains of buildings, with stone door-posts, each door-post being in one block, and covered with inscriptions.—Harkaru.

THE LEFT WING OF THE 18TH N. I., under command of Captain Allen, stationed at Tez-pore, in Assam, has been ordered to Bhaugul-pore, and not to Hazareebagh, as was previously supposed.

OPENING OF THE LAHORE AND MOOLTAN RAILWAY.—LAHORE, April 24.—This morning at six o'clock, without the least formality or display of any kind, the long-looked for event of opening the Lahore and Mooltan Railway for public traffic took place. When I say without formality or display, I simply mean there was no special train run for the accommodation of the general public, or tiffin or refreshments of any description provided; passengers paid their fares as usual, and the train departed. Many, of course, proceeded to the station to witness the departure of the first passenger train to Mooltan, among whom was the Lieutenant-Governor and staff. I should judge by the large number of third-class passengers I saw eagerly endeavouring to obtain tickets that there was scarcely accommodation available for all that presented themselves, though the train was a very long one. At present I believe one train only for passengers and goods will run daily each way, leaving Mooltan and Lahore at 6 A.M., meeting half way at Montgomery, where there is a siding—the entire distance, including stoppages, being accomplished in about eleven hours. It is my opinion, however, that one train per diem each way will by no means meet the public requirements, and that it will be found necessary to have a separate train for goods only, and very possibly a night train for first and second-class passengers. Another shock of an earthquake was felt here yesterday morning (23rd), between two and three o'clock, of a much severer nature than the one I recorded having taken place a fortnight ago. The present one lasted probably half a minute, the vibration taking the same direction as the former one, from E. to W., and accompanied by a low rumbling sound. The atmosphere for several days previous, but more especially the day before, was oppressive in the extreme, the thermometer ranging 93 deg. in a room with punkah going—equal to our ordinary June weather. I have no doubt this shock was felt in other places round about, though I have not heard that it was so. The previous one was distinctly felt at Landour, some 400 miles from here.

ALLAHABAD, May 11.—Mr. G. P. Money, our Civil and Sessions Judge, has for the third time been appointed officiating commissioner of the Benares division, and will leave Allahabad in few days. He has already made over charge of his office to Mr. J. W. Sherer. You have probably heard that the Goruckpore division as the charge of a separate commissioner has been abolished. The division has been formed into two districts, those of Bustee and Goruckpore, and these two districts will in future form part of the Benares commissionership. It is, however, believed that the district of Jounpore, which at present belongs to the Benares division, will be transferred to that of Allahabad. This change will render the Allahabad division one of the largest in the North-Western Provinces. Mr. Wigram, the newly-appointed collector of the district of Bustee, and Mr. D. L. Sandford, deputy collector, have lately passed through the station to assume charge of their duties in the newly-formed district.

PROCEDURE OF THE CIVIL COURTS.—The report of the Select Committee appointed to consider the Bill for Consolidating and Amending the Laws relating to the Procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature in British India is thus noticed by the Hurkaru:—"In the outset of the report we are bidden to observe that the alterations made by the Committee in the Bill 'are to a great extent verbal, and that, with a very few exceptions, they do not affect the fundamental principles of the Bill as introduced.' The most important, involving questions of principle, are in the sections relating to the specific performances of contracts, and in the part of the code relating to reviews of judgments. The principal points in connection with the former consists in a recommendation that specific performance shall not be decreed of any contract the complete performance of which is necessarily extended over a longer period than five years. The power of judges of subordinate courts to review their own decrees and those of their predecessors having "led to considerable abuse," it is recommended "that the opportunity for this abuse should be taken away." On the other hand, it is suggested that an appeal ought to be allowed in respect of many orders passed in exemption of a decree which under the code as it now stands are not open to appeal. It is further proposed to arm the civil courts with power to punish witnesses for failing to attend when summoned instead of leaving the cases of persons so offending to be dealt with by the Criminal Courts. "The necessity for this provision in order to the due administration of justice has been strongly pressed by many judges, some of them of long standing and of considerable experience." After a variety of provisions for the institution of suits on behalf of parties under disabilities and declarations in respect of jurisdiction, the tribunals in which suits against Government are to be instituted and the verification of complaints filed on behalf of Government, it is suggested that "no Court shall make declaratory decree or order unless it could, if required, act upon it by giving consequential relief."

THE CONDEMNED MURDERER AHMED-OOLAH.—It is some years now since the English press was loud in its approval of Lord Canning's policy in bestowing offices of trust upon native gentlemen, Hindoo and Mahomedan, at a time even when the fierce passions excited by the mutiny were busy in the heart of every Englishman in India. Indiscriminate revenge the English papers were morally right in deprecating; and, at this distance of time, we can, in cooler blood, admit the fact. But the same cannot be done with regard to the policy of appointing natives to offices of trust, more especially when those natives had become objects of suspicion to men who knew them well. In the old days Mr. Taylor, of Patna, warned the Government that it was cherishing a deadly viper in its bosom—that Ahmed-oollah was a traitor at heart, urged on to consider his treason a virtue by the mistaken light of fanaticism. Subsequent events have shown how true this warning was, and what a lesson it teaches us for the future. The man who was considered so good and faithful a servant in 1857 has been convicted of high treason on the clearest evidence, sentenced to death, and only spared by a wise and merciful commutation of the sentence to that of transportation for life. We say "wise" advisedly, for, had the man been hanged, he would have become, in the eyes of fanatical Islam, a martyr to the true faith, just as was the Moslem who murdered Frazer, and at whose tomb in Delhi before the mutiny the lamps were lighted, while pilgrims bent to pay reverence to the "hanged martyr," who had died for the glory of their religion. But no such fate is in store for the baffled traitor of Patna. Stripped of his wealth, he will be sent, a chained convict, to the Andamans, not to be glorified as a martyr, but to be pointed out, like Mahomed Shuffee, as an unsuccessful failure, a beaten, foiled traitor, without sufficient capability to carry out his treason, and whose life the powerful Government of India did not think worth their while to take.—Englishman.

A SCANDAL IN BURMAH.—Some time ago there was considerable excitement created in the Tenasserim division on account of a charge of abduction having been brought against Colonel Fytche, the Commissioner, and Dr. Clarke. The charge was preferred by M. Grimbault, French Consul, and was handed up to the Supreme Government for investigation and decision. The Viceroy, after a careful consideration of the case, has come to the conclusion that Colonel Fytche and Dr. Clarke are innocent, and that the charge of their abducting Miss Hilley was both false and unfounded, and further, that the French Consul at Moulmain had not the slightest grounds for making it. In the opinion of the Viceroy the conduct of these officers, under the circumstances, was not only perfectly honourable, but kind and considerate. They acted their part as gentlemen should do. The friends of Colonel Fytche and Dr. Clarke will rejoice with them in their exoneration from a charge of having committed as unworthy an action as can well be conceived.—Hurkaru.

GOVERNMENT GRANTS.—The grant for 1865-66 for the Bengal Public Works Department is Rs. 68,00,000, of which 12½ lacs are for establishment. For barracks for European troops at Barrackpore and Sinchal a lac and a half has been allotted. The native troops on the North Eastern Frontier are also to have barracks, at the cost of one lac; while the house for officers quarters at Alipoor is to have half a lac. For the water supply in Fort William the grant of half a lac has been given, but as there is no authority for the expenditure, except an estimate of Rs. 21,000 for excavating an additional tank, the grant is made with the distinct understanding that no expenditure is to be incurred except upon sanctioned estimates. The proportions allotted to the different departments are as follows:—Military, 11½ lacs; Civil buildings, 20 lacs; Agricultural, 7½ lacs; Communications, 19 lacs; and Miscellaneous, 15,000.

MEDICAL.—A reference having been made to the Government of Bengal regarding the pay and allowances of Doctor Jackson, the Medical Officer of Balasore, in consequence of his having claimed more than Rs. 300 per mensem, which is the maximum amount fixed by the Financial Department as the salary of an Uncovenanted European medical officer, it has been decided by the Lieut.-governor that the orders of the Supreme Government were not intended to have retrospective effect, and that the pay and allowances drawn by Doctor Jackson when in medical charge of the civil station of Sumbulpore under the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, should be continued to that gentleman during his incumbency of the Balasore appointment.

MYNPOORIE, May 9.—Mr. Wigram has gone to Bustee, to take up his duties as collector, Mr. Kaye, of your station, commanding here, to officiate in the place of the former. Mr. C. Maconaghy, our assistant, has been appointed to officiate as joint-magistrate in room of Mr. Chase, on leave to England. Mr. Wright, assistant magistrate, officiates as assistant superintendent of police. Major W. Davis has been transferred from the Agra division, and takes charge of the Allahabad, Benares and Jhansie divisions, as deputy inspector-general of police. Mr. Tyrwhitt took charge of the Agra division from the 1st inst., the services of two deputy inspectors-general having been dispensed with. This will be rather hard work for two officers, but they are both tried men, and no doubt the work will be done quite as well as before.—Delhi Gazette.

SCARCITY.—The Lahore Chronicle hears from Ellichpore, in Berar, that food is at famine prices, flour being at six seers for the rupee, and yet the ryots are rolling in wealth. The cotton cultivators have been clearing 120 rupees a beegah after paying all expenses. During the last two years it is calculated that upwards of 150 lacs have poured into the district from Bombay, for the purchase of cotton alone.

HIGH COURT.—On the retirement of the Honourable H. T. Raikes, the Hon. Elphinstone Jackson, at present officiating as a judge of the High Court, will be permanently appointed. Mr. A. R. Thomson, officiating as civil and Sessions judge of Nuddea, will thereupon be confirmed in the substantive judgeship, which now belongs to the Hon. Elphinstone Jackson.

BONUSES WANTED.—The Delhi Gazette says:—"We understand that the following officers of the Royal, late Bengal, Artillery are desirous of retiring from the service if they could only obtain a moderate bonus, viz., Colonel D. Reid, Lieutenant-Colonel Blunt, Majors Kennion and Dundas, and Captains Urquhart and Pixley. We would here quote from 'Observations on the Amalgamation of the Regiments of Royal and Indian Artillery and Engineers':—"But perhaps a more serious matter, especially to the older officers, is the extinction of the regimental retiring funds, by the action of which the evils of promotion by seniority had been greatly mitigated, at no cost to the State. These funds have been in action for many years with the knowledge and approval of the Government, and the older officers, who have paid large sums in the hope of receiving the retiring bonus in their turn, find themselves in jeopardy of losing their chance of it, for since no more appointments of officers are to be made to their regiments, it is plain that the means of contributing a bonus must gradually diminish with the number of officers." Can nothing be done to assist a regiment that has deserved so well of the Government? Where should we have been but for the Bengal Artillery that served before Delhi and in the Lucknow garrison?"

TRAFFIC IN GIRLS AS PRACTISED IN BENGAL.—The Viceroy has, we understand, in order to repress the practice of traffic in girls, carried on in Bengal for immoral purposes, lately expressed an opinion that a proclamation should be issued, or that recourse must be had to legislation to put down the practice in question. His Excellency, however, before taking measures to put a stop to the nefarious practice, asked the opinion of the Bengal Government and the Mofussil officers on the subject. The Mofussil officers reported that they are convinced of the existence of a species of domestic slavery, into which poor people voluntarily enter, and in which they remain contentedly enough, although they have at all times the means of terminating the connection between themselves and their masters; and they agreed that little girls are sold for the purpose of being brought up as prostitutes. At the same time, they were of opinion that the law in force provides sufficiently for the repression of the practice, and that, under repeated convictions in the Courts, it is being gradually abandoned. The Bengal Government was of opinion that neither proclamation nor legislation is requisite. The police are well able to check anything like the detention of servants by force, and against their will, and they ought also to be able to check the disposal of young girls for the objects mentioned.—Englishman.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.—An Oxford graduate, enticed into the Indian Civil Service, tells us that he has good reasons for knowing that members of the Civil Service, who belong to English universities, are writing home to warn their friends against entering the service if Mr. Cust's scheme is carried. He avers that men who have spent time and money on their education will not come out here to receive low pay with a certain prospect of its being periodically reduced. What class of society, then, will, under Mr. Cust's regime, furnish candidates for the Indian examination? We look to Mr. Cust for an answer.—Delhi Gazette, May 16.

THE 6TH N. I., having marched into Barrackpore on the 24th April, Colonel Matthews assumed command at that station. The arrival of the 6th N. I. will enable the wing of the 38th N. I., now at Barrackpore, to rejoin its head-quarters.

RESTORATION.—Quartermaster Lawrence, her Majesty's 51st Regiment, who was dismissed by sentence of a Court Martial at Rawul Pindia, about twelve or eighteen months ago, has been restored to the service on technical considerations.

A LEOPARD IN CANTONMENTS AT MEERUT.—A letter from Meerut, in the Mofussilite, gives a very curious story, which we subjoin in an abridged form:—Mr. Fane, of the Rifle Brigade, accompanied by another officer, was riding home about half-past six o'clock in the evening, on the road that leads from the Old Cutcherry to the Begum's bridge, when about two hundred yards from the bridge they saw some animal cross the road in front of them, coming over the nullah, and disappearing in a small enclosure on the left-hand side of the road. Thinking that it might possibly be a hyena or a wolf, it was decided to try and beat him out; but as Mr. Fane, who was in the open, was walking his horse (a little grey Arab) towards the bushes an enormous leopard, heralding his approach with two savage roars, charged straight at him. The horse swerved round to the right, and with one bound the brute was on him, seizing Mr. Fane's left arm above and below the elbow in his mouth, and inflicting some severe bites, but luckily breaking no bones. He got right upon the horse's back, his fore claws fitted on either side of the rider, and his hind claws on the horse's quarters. He loosed his hold almost instantaneously, and caused Mr. Fane to lose his balance; they both came to the ground together, and the leopard made off at once towards the Delhi road. He was ultimately pursued and shot.

PENA KA PANEE FOR CALCUTTA.—The Hurkaru notices a scheme of the justices for supplying the town with pure drinking water, at high pressure. The estimated cost of the proposed works is about fifty lakhs of rupees, involving an annual expenditure of five lakhs. Three lakhs of this it is proposed to levy by a general rate of three per cent. on the rental of houses, buildings, and lands within the town. Of the remainder, one lakh is to be paid by the municipality, out of its general funds, and one lakh is looked for from the sale of water by measurement, to parties having it laid on to their houses. The general rate of three per cent. will entitle to the free use of the water all those who choose to fetch it from tanks.

CALCUTTA seems to be blossoming all at once with unexpected blessings. Omnibuses may now be seen traversing our streets, and water-carts performing the function hitherto so imperfectly discharged by the overladen Bhistee. The former, it is true, are of a very humble character, and appear to be patronised by the poorer class only of the natives; while the latter have only a "co-ordinate jurisdiction"—as we believe our friends, the lawyers, term it—with the heroes of the mussick.—Hurkaru.

THE 31ST REGIMENT.—With reference to the future movements of the 31st Regiment, under command of Colonel Richards, we have been informed that the head-quarters and right wing of that regiment, now at Buxa, in the Bhootan Dooars, will probably have to proceed to Cawnpore, and that the left wing is to be permanently located at Dalimkote.

ASSISTANT-SURGEON D. B. SMITH.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has appointed Assistant-surgeon David Boyes Smith, M.D., of the Bengal Medical Establishment, to officiate as Superintendent-General of Vaccine, Professor of Midwifery in the Medical College at the Presidency and ex-officio Obstetric Physician at the College Hospital.

AGRA.—The officer commanding this station has granted leave of absence to Lieutenant-Colonel M'Leod, commanding the Royal Artillery, from the 17th May, to the hills, in anticipation of general leave on medical certificate, for which he has applied.

MESSRS. MARILLIER AND EDWARD, the large contractors, have been engaged by the Board of Directors of the Canning Land Reclamation, to construct twelve substantial jetties for the port of Canning, at a cost of one lac of rupees.

MAJOR J. EMERSON, of the Bengal Staff Corps, cantonment joint magistrate, and judge of the Court of Small Causes at Dinapore, has been compelled, owing to the state of his health, to apply for leave of absence for fifteen months on medical certificate, to proceed to England, under the new military furlough rules.—Hurkaru.

WE regret to learn that Mr. C. T. Metcalfe, deputy commissioner in the recently annexed territories in Bhootan, and Mr. Weldon, fourth grade district superintendent of police, are in a bad state of health, which will necessitate their proceeding to Europe on leave of absence on medical certificate for at least twelve months.

MR. W. H. BRODHURST.—Mr. W. H. Brodhurst, civil and sessions judge of the district of Sarun, now on privilege leave of absence at Mussoorie, will, it is said, very shortly retire from her Majesty's Civil Service, on the annuity of his rank.

OUDE COMMISSION.—Mr. J. C. Colvin, deputy-commissioner, has been allowed a furlough to Europe for three years.

A TRIBUTE TO THE CIVIL SERVICE.

"Tom Cringle" writes as follows in the Times of India of May 13:—"It is with sad and mournful feelings I witness the final departure of member after member of the old Civil Service. By the last mail went George Inverarity, by the mail previous to that departed his brother, John Duncan Inverarity, late member of Council. About the same period the brother of our respected Governor, Wm. Frere, Member of Council, also left; and last night the Hon. H. L. Anderson was the guest of a large number of his friends, who met to do honour to him previous to his leaving the loved field of his Indian labours. What a galaxy of statesmen and other officials, the Civil Service of the great and noble old East India Company fostered and brought forth—Clive, Hastings, Malcolm, Munro, Metcalfe, Raffles, the Elphinstones, the Freres, Clerk, Stanford (of Corygaum), Outram, the Lawrences, Pollock, Sale, Colvin, Jacob, Neill, Edwards, Trevelyan, Willoughby, Lumsden, the Inverarities, Erskine, S-ton Kerr. The honoured guest of yesterday even comes last, but not last in talent as a legislator, as a man of letters, a good Christian, a joyous companion; then his ready, responsive Chesterfieldian wit, which never missed its mark—but better still, a firm friend, and one whose purse was ever open to the needy; these qualities are not often found centred in one man.

"I do not think there is a man in Bombay who will not confirm the picture here drawn of the Honourable Henry Lacon Anderson, late Member of the Legislative Council of Calcutta. It used to be objected to the Civil Service of the old East India Company that it was a close service of relatives, shut to the vast outsider class who without its great and tried moral stamina were hungering for its loaves and fishes. The Civil Service of India is acknowledged by its enemies to have been the most honest and trusty body of servants that ever served a State; and was it not a wise course for its masters to pursue when they appointed the son to the same service in which the father had shed a halo of moral glory—a halo which reflected its brightness from father to son, and thus kept him in the path of duty and honour, and also secured the youth troops of friends in those who had known and loved the sire?"

"And by whom were these dashing warrior statesmen to be replaced in the revolution which disrupted every branch of the glorious services of the great East India Company? Why, by old young men, dressed in irreproachable black, with its collateral white choker—decrepid youths with spectacles on nose; who, when asked to take amount, exclaimed, 'will he kick?' But I think John Bull only made one shipment or so of the class of youths whose brains had worn out nerves and muscles. He at once saw the contrast, and young men with the ring of the old metal quickly followed, one of whom was at the dinner to sing his parting poem in honest praise of his friend, and to pay a flood of glorious tribute to the Gamaliel at whose feet he had sat. I saw also, with a smile of sympathy, the worthy mentor put his arm lovingly on the shoulder of his pupil Raymond West, and say, 'This is he in whom is fulfilled the promise of his early career.'

"Let me say a parting word on one of the marked phases of Henry Lacon Anderson's character which was strangely overlooked by all the speakers last night. I allude to that evidence of nature's true nobility which is exhibited by his warm and genuine demeanour in his personal intercourse with all men, whether of high or low degree—whether to his equals in the durbar room, or to his subordinates in the Secretariate. It can be said of him that prosperity, which brings out hateful pride as a mangy distemper in the vulgar and ill-bred, has in him developed to the full all the highest elements of character which go to constitute the perfect gentleman. What a sampler for some in Bombay to study!"

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE RUMOURED RETIREMENT OF SIR BARTLE FRERE.—Two or three weeks ago a fiction was given birth to by a local contemporary that Sir Bartle Frere intended very shortly to resign his office of Governor of Bombay. We believe there is no truth whatever in the statement. It is renewed by a Mofussil paper, which professes to confirm the story. Some months ago there was a probability of Sir Bartle laying his resignation in the hands of Government, from the fact that the Supreme Government could not at first be got to give to Bombay the amount of money necessary to carry on the affairs of the presidency properly, but, that having been made forthcoming, things resumed their ordinary course. Sir Bartle Frere is, to some extent, responsible for the uncontrolled growth of speculation in Bombay; for, while it was within the power of Government to regulate and keep it within due bounds, it not only did not do so, but, on the contrary, rather encouraged it. We are seeing the result of that speculation around us on every side and every day, and Sir Bartle Frere is bound by all principles of honour to hold to his office until Bombay has fathomed its lowest depth and is again in a fair way to prosperity.—Bombay Gazette.

LADY FRERE.—Lady Frere took her departure from Bombay for England on the evening of the 22nd April, in H.M.'s steamer Dalhousie. As her ladyship was on her way to the bunder, she was seized with a sudden attack of illness, and was conveyed to Messrs. Treacher and Co.'s, where restoratives were administered, and during the evening she was so far recovered as to be able to embark. Lady Frere was attended by Sir Bartle and a large assemblage of the elite of Bombay. Previous to her ladyship's departure she received an address from the students of the Literary and Scientific Society, expressing their sincere thanks for the encouragement extended by her ladyship to the cause of native female education in India, and especially for the kind interest her ladyship has displayed in the welfare of the girls' schools of the society. The address concludes:—"As a small token of our gratitude, we respectfully request your ladyship will favour us by sitting for a bust by Mr. Woolner, which the liberality of our president will enable us to place in the hall which Mr. Premchund Roychund has generously offered to build." Lady Frere having briefly communicated her sentiments to his Excellency the Governor, Sir Bartle said that Lady Frere was gratified with the address, and assented with pleasure to the wish of the society to sit for her bust. She had watched with very great interest the labours of the president and other members of the society in the cause of female education, and should be delighted, when at home, to assist in every way in her power. She wished the society perfect success, and hoped, if permitted to return, to speak in English with the more advanced pupils of the society's girls' schools.

THE INNISKILLING DRAGOONS.—Colonel Crawley, commanding the Inniskillings, stationed at Mhow, has addressed a letter to the Bombay Gazette, denying most positively the truth of certain statements, originated by the Sindian, concerning the present state of the regiment. Another letter from Mhow contradicts the assertions more particularly:—"On no occasion has the regimental sergeant major ever been pelted with various missiles and hooted out of the canteen, and anybody who knows anything of the men of the Inniskilling Dragoons would know that such a statement must be a mischievous libel on men whose behaviour to their officers and non-commissioned-officers has, inspection after inspection, called forth well-deserved praise from every inspecting general. I need scarcely add that, as no men ever pelted or hooted the regimental sergeant major, no men were ever brought before the commanding officer and punished for this offence. The second statement that a man was tried by court-martial for visiting his wife, and sentenced to four months' imprisonment, is as false as the preceding one. The lady so touchingly alluded to by the Sindian's "own correspondent" at Mhow has unfortunately a predilection for ardent spirits, and having, when under the influence of her predilection, a manner of enforcing herself more forcible than pleasing, it became necessary to remove her from the vicinity of the other married people, and accommodate her with apartments in another part of the barracks. Her husband, an irremediable drunkard, was recently tried not for visiting his wife, but for "habitual drunkenness."

THE DELHI COLLEGE IN A BAD WAY.—A letter from Delhi in the Harkara says:—"I regret to say that the Delhi College is in a state which requires very watchful care and management to save it from ruin. Of twenty-two boys lately attached to the first class only twelve attend; and of seventeen boys attached to the second class the average attendance is only five or six. Some of those lads have left altogether, and joined St. Stephen's College, conducted by Mr. Wristler, of the S. P. G. F. P. Society. Some study under a private tutor (English), paying him four times as much as they pay at the Government School. No stronger proof can be given of their dissatisfaction with the latter. But the worst is yet to come. A native teacher of English, attached to the Government School, who has served in the department for twenty-four years, and has now the respect and goodwill of all classes, was a few days back suspended on a charge of exciting the students to rebellion. The charge was preferred by Mr. Millet (the head master), and the principal thought proper to examine a few boys on the subject, in the absence of the accused, though the accuser was present. One of the boys, having denied that the native teacher had excited the students, was struck, and told that he had uttered a falsehood, and another was confined in a room. One would have thought that no educated Englishman could have been ignorant of the law and the common principles of justice on this point. The matter, of course, will not be allowed to rest here. In the meantime the majority of the older students are very much excited, and threaten to leave the school altogether."

AUDACIOUS PIRATICAL OUTRAGE IN THE GULF OF CUTCH.—About eight or ten days ago an outrage of a most daring piratical character was perpetrated in the Gulf of Cutch, and the atrocious insolence of the crime calls for immediate Government measures to prevent a recurrence of it. A dozen of cottials, with a number of passengers and a considerable amount of money and valuable property, were crossing the gulf to Mandavi, situated on the northern shore; but the weather becoming rough, they were obliged to run into the harbour of Beyt, on the southern shore of the gulf, for shelter. It was dusk when they anchored in the Beyt harbour, but they had not been long within its hospitable shelter when they had to encounter a worse enemy than the storm from which they had just sought refuge. A gang of from one hundred and fifty to two hundred of the savage Waghurs inhabiting that district, whose easily excited cupidity was aroused by the prospect of safe and easy plunder, boarded the vessels armed with revolvers and swords. Some of the crews made an attempt to protect the property under their charge, but were overpowered by the swarm of savages, and in the affray that took place we are informed that four tindals and one passenger were killed, and many others were severely wounded. The savages then looted the vessels, carrying off everything they could lay their hands on, and it is said they succeeded in making themselves master of property valued at two and a-half or three lacs, consisting of gold, silver, sovereigns, and valuable goods. When the spoliation was effected they retired to their jungles, and were, of course, seen or heard of no more. It would be a great boon to the natives of Cutch if Government could lay hold of some of these robbers, and by severe examples instil into their fellows a more respectful regard for meum and tuum, and the lives and limbs of peaceful traders in these parts. Until they are hunted down, and some such examples are made, neither life nor property can have even a minimum degree of security.—Bombay Gazette.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—We understand that a demi-official reply to the memorials sent up by the Uncovenanted members of the Punjab Commission has been received. It is said to be rather unfavourable, inasmuch as it discourages the idea of the memorialists petitioning for themselves alone, and suggests that the appeal should emanate from the whole Uncovenanted body, or at least all Uncovenanted officers of similar position all over India. It is possible, therefore, that an effort will be made to move the whole service. The task is not an easy one. Grievances are abundant, but to suggest remedies that will be equally suitable for all requires great care. On a united representation, such as this is likely to be, it will become necessary for the Government to declare distinctly what their intentions are with regard to Uncovenanted appointments. We foresee a bitter and protracted struggle. If the policy of the Home Government is one of opposition to Uncovenanted interests, and if the Indian Governments submissively concur in that view, the sooner this is known the better, in order that all men whose services are worth anything may place them at the disposal of more discerning employers, and in order that no more such may be deluded into taking service under the State. The question must be decided sooner or later.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE CHOLERA.—ANOTHER FATAL MARCH.—The following is from a Bombay paper:—We are in possession of some particulars relating to a march from Asseergurh to the depot at Poona, of a detachment of men under Ensign Conolly, of the 72nd Highlanders, which it would be an injustice to our readers to withhold, even greater than to the immediate subject of our remarks himself. The detachment was on its way from Mhow under Ensign Galway, whose melancholy death at Asseergurh from cholera has already been recorded. The detachment was then given over to the charge of the young officer first mentioned, Ensign Conolly, who happened to be doing duty with a regiment stationed there, and whose presence of mind and singular fortitude under circumstances peculiarly trying to a very young officer and only recently arrived in the country it is our pleasure to record. The detachment had not proceeded far when symptoms of cholera made their appearance in some of the men. At a halt at Nargaum one of the women of the detachment was seized, and on Ensign Conolly sending immediately for the apothecary he found that he, too, had been attacked, and was lying seriously ill. The young officer in command immediately turned out of his own tent for the sick woman, and had the apothecary also removed near his quarters, and attended upon both himself, administering chlorodyne and brandy with his own hands. In the mean time, suspecting that the water of the place had some connection with the seizures, he placed a guard over it, and supplied the men of the detachment with an allowance of soda water and lemonade out of his own supplies instead. A telegram to Poona brought back the order to stand fast till assistance was sent. But now a kind of panic had taken possession of the men, some further seizures having taken place. The unfortunate woman died. She was decently and properly buried, our young officer reading the funeral service over her grave. Two little children were left, one a mere baby. A wet nurse was sought for in the village, and, none being procurable, a supply of milk was obtained, and the child kept alive by the tender care of Ensign Conolly. The panic was increasing, and the young officer in command saw the necessity for an immediate removal. He had arrangements made at the railway station for those too sick to proceed, and serving out small quantities of brandy to the whole detachment, and inspiring them with his own confidence, he succeeded in bringing the men, women, and children, safe into Poona. Medical succour was of course immediately despatched to Nargaum, to the sick lying at the station, and all the cases recovered, with the exception, we believe, of one. These various steps and expedients are no doubt sufficiently obvious now, but their value may perhaps be estimated in some degree if we consider what the consequences might have been had the officer possessed less decision, energy, and presence of mind than he fortunately did. It is possible that the detachment might never have reached Poona at all, but, with everything favourable to the development of cholera, have left half its strength at Nargaum, under a monument to mark the extraordinary impolicy of these forced marches in such unseasonable times as the present. The bravery which could bear up and bear others up under such trying circumstances, is no less admirable than gallantry on the field of action; and of the tenderness and humanity which characterised the conduct of Ensign Conolly on this march we are as sure that it will be admired wherever it is known as that it will never be forgotten by the men who were under his charge.

THE ATTEMPT ON THE LIFE OF MAJOR MAINWARING.—"A Reader" writes to the Times of India as follows:—"In your issue of the 19th current I read a report of the attack on Major Mainwaring by a sowar of the Sind Horse at Jacobabad. Though in the main this report is correct, there are one or two points which require alteration. Major Mainwaring never belonged to the Sind Horse—he has commanded the regiment of Jacob's Rifles since it was raised in 1858. I mention this fact in justice to Major Mainwaring, as the outside public is too apt to think that the native soldier never attacks a European officer without serious provocation. The would-be murderer knew nothing of Major Mainwaring, and had never served under him. When the sowar fired the first shot, Mrs. Mainwaring, with her child in her arms, was standing by her husband's side about ten paces from the sowar. She was also in the room into which he rushed with his sword drawn, and where Major Mainwaring secured him; having put the child down in the next room, she returned to her husband's assistance simultaneously with the orderly, and long before any servant came into the house. I have troubled you with this explanation, because the fact of the sowar's firing at and threatening to cut down an inoffensive woman and child is, to my thinking, a very serious aggravation of his dastardly conduct."

A RACE BETWEEN A RAILWAY TRAIN AND A CHEETA.—The Times of India says:—A remarkable circumstance occurred a few days ago to a goods train on the Thull Ghaut. When about half-way down the Ghaut, the train seemed to have started a cheeta which had strayed upon the line, and in its fright to escape the animal got under the tender of the engine; but finding itself in rather close quarters and unable to get out, it ran along under the tender, which happened to be in front, similar to a dog running under a cart. This continued for four or five hundred yards, a portion of which was through a short tunnel. After the train had passed through the tunnel the cheeta increased its speed, and managed to get a little ahead, when it bounded from between the rails and disappeared in the jungle.

A NEW COMPANY.—We (Times of India) understand that a new company, with the name of the "Credit Loan Company," is about to be started in Bombay, with the view to make advances on the security of shares and stock, and thus avert, in some measure, the heavy losses which, it is apprehended, will fall upon unwise dealers in shares. The capital of the company will be four crores of rupees, in shares of the value of Rs. 10,000 each. The first call will be from Rs. 200 to Rs. 400 only. The idea of starting the corporation originated, it is said, with a benevolent Parsee gentleman, whose advice was solicited by certain speculators in shares, and who has agreed to contribute half a crore of rupees to the capital of the company. Another native gentleman has also consented to contribute another half crore, so that the proposed company is in a fair way to commence operations without delay.

THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."—A correspondence has appeared in the Times of India between the Bishop of Bombay and Rev. Mr. Gell, formerly editor of that journal, in which the former mourns over the latter having undertaken the editorship of a newspaper. The Bishop contemplates him in that position "with pain," and "the secularity of mind to which he would become liable," &c., filled his Lordship with the gravest apprehensions for Mr. Gell's character as a clergyman, and he could not but regard his acceptance of that office "as a calamity to the cause of religion in the place." The late Bishop Wilson approved of the Rev. Mr. Bellew editing the Hurkaru, on the ground, it is said, that the devil should not have the newspaper all to himself.

THE DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, BOMBAY.—The resignation by Mr. Howard of this office in the Bombay Presidency is now explained. The Poona Observer says that Mr. Edward I. Howard, director of public instruction, has been appointed manager of the English branch of the Bank of Guzerat, near Surat Bank, and proceeds to England to take charge of his office.

A NEW PEARL FISHERY.—We are informed that Government are about making experiments in pearl fishery on the shores of Sind.—Sindian.

THE FESTIVITIES AT INDORE.—A letter from Indore, dated May 22nd, says:—For the last few days we have had very oppressive and sultry weather. The water is gradually becoming scarcer and scarcer, and the prices of provisions dearer and dearer. But misfortune never comes singly: cholera is carrying away daily from ten to fifteen persons. I have perused a paragraph in the Times of India, of the 24th ult., extracted from the Bombay Catholic Examiner, the writer of which says, "preparations on a grand scale are made both at Indore and at Mhow on account of the Maharaja Holkar adding another lady to his harem. It is said the number there is already very great, among whom is an 'English woman.' Nothing could betray more ignorance. It is quite true that preparations are being made on a grand scale both at Indore and at Mhow, but these 'preparations' are not made 'on account of the Maharaja Holkar adding another lady to his harem,' but they are made on account of the Maharaja Holkar celebrating the nuptials of his two princes. The second part of the extract quoted above is entirely false, and is without any foundation. The number already there (in the harem) is not very great, neither is there an English woman there. I have ascertained the facts, and have learned that the Maharaja Holkar has at present three wives and two mistresses—a number which is by no means very great. These remarks have not been made through any ill motives or to defend the Maharaja against these allegations in order to obtain his favour, but they have been made to remove the erroneous statements that appear in such a well-circulated paper as the Times of India.

ASSAULT ON A DOCTOR BY A PATIENT.—The Bombay Gazette says:—Dr. Colliss, Royal Artillery, was felled to the ground by a blow dealt on the back of his ear by a prisoner in the jail hospital the other morning. Dr. Colliss had just prescribed a couple of pills for the man, and had passed on to the next man, when he, the prisoner, holding the pills in his left hand, asked the doctor, with horrid abuse, whether he meant him to take them. Colliss had hardly time to reply, when the ruffian struck him with great force with his full fist on the back of his left ear, knocking him down almost senseless. The sergeant of the guard, who was present, called immediately for the guard, and it is said that it took no less than ten men to put the assailant in irons. He belongs to the 11th Regiment, stationed at Fyzabad, and is under sentence of imprisonment for three years. His offence was manslaughter, committed under very suspicious circumstances.

NAGPORE IN A NEW PRESIDENCY.—The Times of India says:—On account of the better facilities that exist for communication between Bombay and Nagpore than between Madras and Nagpore, there is some reason to believe that the latter will be added to the number of military out-stations of the Bombay Presidency.

RETIREMENT OF MEDICAL OFFICERS.

May 4.—No. 456.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secy. of State for India, No. 91, March 24, is published for general information:—

Military, No. 91.

India-office, London, March 24, 1865.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

Sir,—The military letter from your Government, dated January 21, No. 36, submits two questions with regard to the retirement of medical officers, arising out of the late alterations with respect to the Medical Service. With regard to the first, it appears to you that all service on the full pay of the appointment in the case of Inspectors and Deputy Inspectors General of Hospitals, should reckon towards the five years' service in those grades qualifying for the additional pension; and that the aggregate period of "service in India," noted in para. 35, of my despatch dated 7th November last, No. 36, is to include the periods of leave hitherto allowed to reckon under the new furlough rules as service for pension.

This is quite in accordance with the intentions of Her Majesty's Government.

With regard to the second point, you apprehend that the six months' leave on medical certificate referred to in para. 38 of my despatch, applies only to the tenure of the appointments of Inspector General and Deputy Inspector General, and not to the time of pension under para. 35.

This view is also quite correct; the tenure of appointment referred to being that which is to entitle officers of these grades to the additional pensions after five years' active employment in India.—I have, &c.,

PASSAGE ALLOWANCE.

May 11.—No. 471.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 75, March 17, and the Royal Warrant and Circular Memorandum from the War-office therein referred to, are published for general information:—

Military, No. 75.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

Sir,—Para. 1. You are aware, from previous despatches to your Govt., that I have been for some time, in communication with the Secy. of State for War on the subject of the regulations relating to the passages, and the passage allowances of officers of H.M.'s British forces proceeding to or returning from India.

2. I now forward, for the information of your Government, a copy of a Royal Warrant, dated Jan. 2, 1865, cancelling the Royal Passage Warrant of July 1, 1848, and establishing other regulations on the subject. These regulations, you will observe, are to be applicable to all officers, whether of the staff or of regiments, brigades and batteries, who shall hereafter embark for service in India. They are also intended to apply to officers of H.M.'s British service hereafter quitting India.

3. Your Government will take the necessary measures for giving due publicity to this Warrant, and will cause its provisions to be acted upon immediately on its promulgation in India, so far as respects the officers of H.M.'s British service.

4. A circular memorandum from the War-office, copy of which is also sent, announces the issue of the revised warrant, and notifies that, "in consideration of the privileges conferred upon the officers of the army at large by its provisions, it has been decided to discontinue the grant of 6 mo. Indian allowances, hitherto issued to officers of H.M.'s British service proceeding from India to England on m.c."

5. The discontinuance of this grant, however, is to apply only to officers of H.M.'s British service belonging to regiments, battalions, brigades, and batteries, which shall proceed to India subsequently to the date of the Warrant.

6. The provisions of this circular should also be made known when the new Warrant is promulgated.

7. There are one or two points in the new Warrant, to which, as causing an important alteration of the existing practice, I am desirous of drawing the attention of your Govt.

8. Clause I.—Under this clause officers are entitled to passages at the public expense, if proceeding to serve upon the general or personal staff, or returning therefrom in consequence of reduction or removal. Officers of the divisional, general, and personal staff have hitherto been entitled to passages to India only. They will, henceforth, be entitled to passage from India also, when returning under the circumstances contemplated in this clause of the Warrant.

9. This rule is, however, not to apply to a commander in chief at either Presidency, special provision having been made by the Legislature for the expenses of the equipment and voyage of commanders in chief in India.

10. Instead of the uniform rate of contribution for messing (£5) now made from the passage allowance of officers proceeding to or from India, you will observe that the new Warrant (page 677) provides for the deduction of a variable rate from the staff or regimental pay of the officer for whom the passage is provided.

11. This rate of deduction is to be made, in the case of the regimental officer, by the paymaster or regimental agent, as the case may be, as was provided for in the War-office circular, Nov. 29, 1858, No. 350. In the case of the staff officer, the deduction must be made at the pay office in India where the officer first draws pay. In this country it will be recovered under the instructions of the Secretary of State for War.

12. In the War-office circular above referred to, which fixed the uniform rate of messing contribution at £5 for each officer, it was stated, "in the case of an officer who receives an allowance to find his own passage, no such stoppage is required."

13. This, as explained in Lord Stanley's despatch dated March 9, 1859, No. 75, did not mean that an officer who receives an allowance for his passage was to be exempt from the prescribed contribution for messing, but that, in such case, the stoppage was not required to be made by the paymaster or regimental agent, it having been arranged, at the request of the Secretary of State for War, that, in each such case, the rateable reduction should be made from the amount of passage money when issued to the officer, or his agent, either in England or in India.

14. The contribution for messing in this case also is henceforth to be deducted from the pay of the officer receiving the passage allowance, at the termination of the voyage.

15. As intimately affecting the interests of the British officer in India, this despatch has been submitted to, and has received the concurrence of, the Secy. of State for War.

16. You will observe that neither the terms of the circular nor those of the Royal Warrant apply to the officers of the Indian army, or the officers of the Indian staff corps.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. Wood.

The Passage Warrant has already appeared in our columns.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, June 16, 1865.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S POLICY IN OUDE.

As we anticipated, the talookdars of Oude are not satisfied with the Government explanation in reference to the alleged invasion of proprietary rights; and the general opinion seems to be that the action of the local authorities is inadequate to carry out the intentions of the Indian Secretary, as declared in his despatch upon the subject.

The communication made by the Governor-general, through the Chief Commissioner of Oude, after reminding the talookdars that they had themselves recognised the condition of the sunnuds that "all holding under you shall be secured in the possession of all the subordinate rights they formerly enjoyed," declares as follows:—

"The only foundation upon which rights of occupancy rest is their previous existence at the time of annexation. But there has been difference of opinion among officials whether they did exist then or not. To remove all doubts on this point is the object of the present inquiry. If the results should be to establish the existence of such rights, they must, of course, be maintained, as you yourselves allow. If, on the other hand, it should be proved that they did not exist at the annexation, no new rights will be created."

After enjoining those concerned to wait patiently the result of the inquiry, the Chief Commissioner concludes:—

"You are aware that the policy of Lord Canning was to maintain in Oude a class of superior landholders in an influential position. For this reason he also invested many of you with judicial and revenue powers. This policy had the full approval of the Home Government. It will be steadily pursued in its spirit and letter by the Governor-general, and the conditions of the sunnuds will be scrupulously maintained."

This assurance would doubtless have been satisfactory had the inquiry been confined to the question of the existence of previous rights of occupancy not at present maintained; but, unfortunately, the investigation had a far wider range, as is abundantly shown by a document which seems to have been among those withheld from the Indian Secretary, since it does not appear in the Blue-book. We allude to a despatch, written by order of the Governor-general, from Colonel Durnford, C.B., Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department, and addressed to R. H. Davies, Esq., Finance Commissioner for Oude, informing him of his appointment to that re-constituted office, and conveying to him instructions concerning the tenure of land in that province. The most important portions of that document are the following:—

"3. His Excellency views with much displeasure the system which has sprung up in Oude since the mutinies, of conferring upon Talookdars the sole proprietary rights in lands to the exclusion of all tenants' rights, thus placing the sole power in the hands of an aristocracy who, until very recently, were our open and avowed enemies.

"4. This system, I am desired to remark, is founded upon a mistaken policy. While his Excellency is willing to concede to the aristocracy of Oude all the privileges to which they are by hereditary right entitled, he cannot consent to place in their hands irresponsible power, thereby subjecting tenants to an evil nowhere else existing in India.

"5. A total revision of the sunnud, therefore, becomes necessary."

The document from which the above paragraphs have been extracted is dated September 16, 1864, at which time the proposed measure was before the Council of the Governor-general, and had most certainly not been agreed upon, for we find Sir John Lawrence making a rejoinder to objections raised by Mr. Grey, on September 27; and Sir Hugh Rose's minute, also condemnatory of the policy, is dated so late as October 17.

That the announcement of such a course of action would be calculated to alarm the talookdars, who can doubt? It is true that no such direct intimation was made, but the intentions of the Governor-general seem to have been well understood, and the measures adopted to carry out the investigation were such as to justify every apprehension. The standing "Directions to Settlement Officers in the North-West Provinces" were given as a guide for the revision of the settlement in Oude, and in the minutes of the Members of Council on the subject the change is formally referred to as the introduction of the "Thomason System" into that province. With regard to the machinery employed towards the object, we need not go farther than Sir Charles Wood's despatch, in which, resuming the information supplied to him, our Indian Secretary says that the Financial Commission, by direction of the Government of India, directed the settlement officers to select knots of twenty-five villages in each district under settlement, and to proceed to each village for the purpose of judicially deciding on any claims that might be preferred by the ryots to a permanent beneficial interest superior to that of tenants at will, an officer having preceded him in order to prepare a list of such claimants; and the settlement officer, having decided judicially each of these claims, was to form at once the permanent record. Such a mode of proceeding was very properly deprecated by Sir Charles Wood, who says:—

nent rights, does exist, notwithstanding the denial of the talookdars, supported by the Chief Commissioner, and may have a tendency to encourage persons to advance claims which they might not otherwise have brought forward. Before adopting this step I think that the preliminary question of the existence of the class of tenants should have formed the subject of investigation, and that the further measure of judicially deciding on each claim, and forming a record for each village, should not have been taken unless the result of that investigation had established the existence of such rights."

Without, however, absolutely stopping the course of action, Sir Charles contents himself with the addition:—

"If the enquiries have not been already carried on to a great extent, and the question as to the disputed fact of the existence of the alleged rights of the ryots generally has not been already satisfactorily solved, I think it would be better to suspend the proceedings for recording rights, in order that they may be preceded by an enquiry of the general character to which I have above referred."

How far the suggestions of the Secretary for India have been practically carried out does not appear; but it is evident that unless there has been a suspension of the investigation as hitherto conducted, the mere explanation of policy can have no effect; and as yet we see no notice of a substantial change. The only favourable sign in the matter seems to be that, notwithstanding the elaborate measures taken to induce complaints, very few have been made—no more, in fact, than would occur in the process of a settlement under any circumstances. It may be, therefore, that the Talookdars and their friends will be quieted, and the agitation die away. But the action of the Governor-general has certainly not been calculated to induce confidence in the sincerity of the Government, whose determination to support Lord Canning's policy will require practical proof before it can hope to obtain acceptance. Of Sir John Lawrence's character as a statesman and administrator we would now, as always, speak with the greatest respect; but, without entering into the merits of the village system as opposed to the proprietary, it must be said that the introduction of the former into Oudh would be unjustifiable, as opposed to the rights of the Talookdars—confirmed and re-conferred by the British Government.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE INDIAN ARMY.—SECOND SERIES.
No. II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The sepoy war and rebellion led to the transfer of the Government of India from the East India Company to the Crown. An able writer in the Edinburgh Review, in an article in April, 1863, entitled "India under Lord Canning," has given a very full account of the commencement and progress of the mutiny in Bengal from Calcutta throughout the whole army, and makes the following just remarks on the subject of the transfer:—"Of all the changes which resulted from the mutiny, the least important in itself was that on which all eyes for a time were fixed. The Government of the Company had broken down. There never was purer nonsense. The Government of India was not the Government of the Company, and it had not broken down. But the delusion under which a mere legal fiction was spoken of as if it were a reality showed that it was high time that the fiction should be done away. Whatever errors had been committed in the Government of India had been the errors of the Crown—of its responsible Ministers in England or in India. The Company, as a governing body, had been dead for more than seventy years. It had been dead, but not buried. Its skin had been preserved and set up as if it were still alive. In its name all acts were still done in India; in its voice all orders were still sent out from home. Its real condition was notorious, yet habitually forgotten; published in repeated Acts of Parliament; confessed and explained by Ministers of State, yet constantly spoken of as if all these enactments were unknown—as if all these confessions were disbelieved.

“But the truth is that this fiction of the ‘Company’ had become a nuisance from the inveterate misconceptions to which it had given rise. Its mischief was far greater in England than in India. It was a serious obstacle to the right understanding of all Indian questions; it weakened the authority of the Government in India; it made the Crown, and the Parliament, and the people, forget their own responsibility, and induced them to cast wrongfully upon others blame which, if it attached to any one, attached to themselves, either directly or through those who represented their authority and wielded their power.

“There was nothing of any force to be said against the abandonment of a fiction so mischievous in its effects. It was not requisite to abolish any thing which had been of the slightest value.” “In respect to the distribution of power between the minister (President of the Board of Control) and his council, no change was required. The Court (of Directors) had been, and the Council were still to be, his advisers merely.” The old servants of the Company, who formed so large a part of the Court of Directors, were the only class in which the knowledge and experience could be found; and it is a just tribute to the noble qualities for government which have flourished in our civil and military services of the East that Parliament has indicated those services as the principal source from which the Indian councillors of the Crown shall continue to be drawn. “As regards the administration of affairs in India, no change whatever of principle was required.”

There is indubitably much truth in this, but how does the case stand now the government of India is in the hands of the Crown and the Parliament? Previous to the transfer the Court of Directors, being the originators of all measures to be carried out, became so far responsible for them primâ facie, and, as it has been justly observed, they were the only class in which the knowledge and experience could be found. The amalgamation of the two authorities supplied an advantage which was wanting in the constitution of the Court of Directors—that of forming committees out of that body for the several departments of a great Government, with which the members were peculiarly qualified. This requires some explanation. The separation of the officers of the Court of Directors in the east end of the town from that of the Board of Control in the other rendered it inconvenient for the whole body of the Court, consisting of twenty-four individuals, to wait on the President of the Board; accordingly, all the business of the Government was conducted through the Chairman of the directors and his deputy, who, during their temporary term of office, were the organs of the Court. Now, it might be supposed that the business of each department was carried on by the several Committees of Departments. But it was not so. The head clerks of departments managed their work without the intervention of the Committees, and were in fact the irresponsible conductors of Indian affairs. For, as the chairman and deputy left office periodically, and were succeeded by other members of the Court, it became an object with the latter to pass from one committee to another to know something of the business of each. For although not consulted before, yet after the sanction of the Board of Control had been given through the chairs, the case was laid before the Committee for the first time, and until it was passed by them it could not be laid before the whole Court to authorise its despatch to India under its recommendation. The Court ordinarily met once a week to carry out the orders it received from the Board of Control. In this way the Members of the Court of Directors were the mere agents in turn of the several departments, and it frequently happened that the military committee was filled by civilians, that a judicial committee was filled by men who had never entered a court of justice, that the public works department was left to the discretion of ex-judges or soldiers, in order that each member of the thirty directors might have an opportunity of knowing something of each department, but without having any voice in the conduct of its business. As no such necessity exists in the present constitution of the Council of India, reduced to fifteen members, not removable, and selected originally by the Secretary of State for India out of officers who have served in India, it may be presumed that care is taken that each department should be conducted by gentlemen best acquainted with the duties of their office, and whom the Secretary of State may hold responsible for the advice they may be called upon to give. Hence, the Secretary of State for India has an advantage over all the other departments of the nation, by dealing direct with associates of lengthened experience. But, however wisely constituted is this department of the State, everything must depend on the use the head of that department makes of the knowledge with which the Constitution has supplied him. In the present Council I find therein for all ordinary civil duties, whether of Government or politics, an ex-governor of a presidency, and four ex-members of Council, having filled the highest offices in different parts of the country. For justice an ex-chief judge of H.M.'s Court of Bombay, an ex-attorney-general of Calcutta, and a barrister of extensive practice in the Supreme Court. For the army an adjutant-general and a regimental officer of experience, as well as a statesman. For the public works there are two engineers of the highest reputation; and for commerce and finance I find a well-known London banker and a commercial gentleman of long standing in India, the greater number of whom were members of the late Court of Directors of the East India Company. The Government of a remote dependency so singularly situated as to its climate, and so remarkably distinguished by its numerous nations, religious prejudices, and institutions, required some such scheme for the supervision of its Government. I use the word supervision in preference to administration, because it is impossible to govern India in all its intricacies by any body of men in England, but more especially by any individual without having resided in the country and made himself master of the peculiarities of every part of it. Such is not the case of the present Secretary of State for India, nor is it ever likely to be so. It was, therefore, of the highest importance that the Secretary of State for India should defer to his Council in a matter of so grave importance as the reconstruction of an army composed as is that of the Native Army of India. It is broadly asserted, however, and believed that in this measure the Right Hon. Baronet acted in opposition, not only to the advice of the majority of his Council at home, but in defiance of the soundest opinions collected by the Governor-general and his Council in India, and he has consequently involved himself in a sea of trouble, out of which it is feared it will be difficult, if it be possible, for him to escape without having recourse to that most repugnant of all measures, retracing his steps and replacing the army of India on its former footing.

Russell), advancing within the bar, said: “I have to acquaint the House that Owen Marshall and Henry Whitehead, for whose apprehension warrants were issued on the 2nd of June, were apprehended on the same day, and are now in my custody. I have also to say that I have been unable to execute the warrant for the apprehension of George Morris Mitchell.”

Mr. HENNESSY rose to present a petition from Owen Marshall, and one of substantially the same character from Henry Whitehead, who were now in custody. The petitioner submitted that he had been placed in confinement; and that in consideration of his having been in entire ignorance of having pursued an unusual course, he trusted that honourable House would consider he had received sufficient punishment. He expressed his sincere contrition for his offence, and begged the House would grant his discharge.

The petition was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HENNESSY said those two persons were unable to pay the fees of the House, and to require them to do so would only be to impose upon them a longer imprisonment. He moved that they now be discharged.

After a few words from Colonel W. PATTEN, Mr. C. FOSTER, and Sir W. FRAZER on the nature of the privileges and power of the House.

Sir G. GREY said that these persons were agents. They were in the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms. They had now been in custody nearly a week, and the House would only be acting with its usual consideration, under these circumstances, if it was to agree to the motion of the hon. gentleman. The amount of the fees was £10, and the persons were in a humble position of life.

The motion for the discharge of the prisoners was then agreed to.

THE MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA TELEGRAPH.

On a vote of £780 for the Malta and Alexandria telegraphs and for subsidies to telegraph companies,

Mr. F. PEEL, in reply to Mr. MARSH and Mr. MOOR, explained that the Malta and Alexandria telegraph, originally laid down by the Imperial and Indian Governments at a cost of £450,000, had been leased to Messrs. Glass and Elliott, and by them had been sublet to a telegraph maintenance company, the lease expiring in 1867. The conditions were that the gross profits should be divided between the Government and the lessees. The sum of £500 in the estimate was the share of the Imperial Government of the salary and expenses of a superintendent at Malta, whose duty it was to see that the contract was fairly carried out. Negotiations, however, were going on with the company to hand over the line to the company for forty years, on condition of 3½ per cent. of the capital being paid to her Majesty's Government, and the line being handed over to her Majesty's Government at the end of that time in good working order. If that arrangement was concluded it would not be necessary to have a superintendent any longer at Malta.

The vote was agreed to.

THE CAPTIVES IN ABYSSINIA.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR wished to know what steps had been taken by her Majesty's Government to obtain the release of Captain Cameron, the British consul, two missionaries, and several other Europeans, who had been held captive for more than a year by the King of Abyssinia. He believed that a gentleman had been sent from Aden into Abyssinia to endeavour to obtain their release, but he should like the hon. gentleman the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs to state whether he could not lay on the table some papers relating to the efforts made by the Foreign-office for the release of those gentlemen, or, if not, whether he could state the reason for the failure of those efforts, and what course her Majesty's Government now intended to pursue on this really important subject.

Mr. LAYARD, in reply, said, the question was no doubt of painful interest, and he was quite sure the committee felt that the Foreign Office had only one object in view, and that was to save the lives of the unfortunate gentlemen. Not only was her Majesty's consul, Captain Cameron, in confinement, but several missionaries. It had been a most difficult question to deal with, requiring the greatest possible prudence and circumspection. He would most willingly state to the House everything which had occurred, and the time might come when he should be able to show that nothing had been omitted to procure the release of these gentlemen; but he could assure hon. gentlemen conscientiously that any public statement might lead to most serious consequences. He had only recently received a letter from Mr. Rassam, the gentleman sent out by the Foreign Office, entreating and imploring him to stop the publication of any statement on the subjects, all of which were sent out to Abyssinia, translated and made the most of by those who were unfriendly to this country. He regretted very much that there were some gentlemen, he did not know who they were, who betrayed official secrets in a manner deserving the strongest condemnation. In a public print—the Pall-Mall Gazette—there had recently appeared extracts from letters received officially and sent through two or three public offices. He did not wish to place the slightest restriction on entire freedom of the press; but when persons in official positions were capable of betraying such trusts, it made him feel a most painful want of confidence. He hoped that journal, which he believed was most respectable, would not allow any more statements to be made which were most injurious, and might lead to serious results, even to the loss of life. Mr. Rassam, who had been selected to endeavour to obtain the release of the captives, was in communication with persons in Abyssinia. He was a gentleman in every way qualified by his knowledge and experience for the duty he had to perform, and her Majesty's Government hoped that his efforts would have a successful result. The papers relating to this matter were not printed. If they could be given without injury, her Majesty's Government would willingly lay them on the table; if, on the other hand, their publication might lead to the death of the gentlemen in captivity, it would be the duty of her Majesty's Government to refuse them. He should be guided entirely by that consideration. In the meantime he could assure the hon. gentleman who put the question that everything would be done to obtain the release of Captain Cameron and the other gentlemen who were prisoners with him.

SERVICES IN CHINA, JAPAN AND SIAM.

On a vote of £102,972 for the services in China, Japan and Siam,

Colonel SYKES drew attention to the disparity between the salary of £8,000 paid to the Minister at Peking, and that of £200 paid to the surgeon. He contended that the former was excessive, on the ground that as Europeans were not permitted to enter Peking, the ambassador there had not such extensive claims on his hospitality as the ambassadors had at European courts.

Mr. LAYARD admitted that the salary at Peking seemed high, and it had been intended to reduce it; but the fact was that as everything required, even for the ambassador's daily table, had to be brought up from the coast on the backs of animals the expense was very great.

The vote was agreed to.

TURKEY AND PERSIA.—BOUNDARY QUESTION.

Sir W. FRASER and Mr. AUGUSTUS SMITH asked for information as to the sums to be voted for the commissions for settling the boundary between Turkey and Persia.

Mr. LAYARD said that he shared the anxiety which was generally entertained, that the Boundary Commission should bring its labours to a close, and would do his best to expedite their termination.

Colonel SYKES complained of the length of time during which the Persian Boundary Commission had been in existence.

The vote for £19,000 to complete the sum of £25,000 to pay the expense of special missions, outfits of diplomatic officers, for conveyance of colonial officers, &c., was then agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 9.

THE INDIAN MAILS.

On the vote of £841,867 for the Post-office packet service,

Mr. CRAWFORD asked whether the Government intended to take any steps to meet the wishes of the trade with respect to the despatch of the mails to India, Australia, and China. It was most inconvenient that mails should be despatched either on a Saturday or Monday, on which days very little business was done in the City. The merchants desired that, instead of despatching the mails on four fixed days of the month, a mail should be sent out on the Friday in each week. He understood that the Postmaster-general was in favour of the change, if the public would consent to pay an increased charge upon letters in order to meet the additional expense of sending out a mail on each Friday. But he must say that he thought that to increase the postage of letters to the East would defeat the object of the change. He trusted that the Government would, without imposing an additional postage charge, accede to the wishes of the whole of the mercantile body engaged in the trade of the East. It must be remembered that it was not mercantile interests alone which were involved in the change which he advocated, for it was of great importance to keep up a rapid and convenient communication with Australia.

Mr. AYRTON concurred in the representations made by the member for the City (Mr. Crawford). He thought that the communication between England and India was so slow as to be discreditable to the Government. The English mail might be conveyed to Bombay in sixteen days. Unfortunately, none of the fast vessels of the present steam-ship building age were employed in the communication between Suez and Bombay. Vessels going fifteen or sixteen knots an hour were frequently heard of, but those that were engaged in carrying the Indian mails went only about nine miles an hour, and were about the slowest of any line of postal communication in the world. He hoped to have the pleasure to meet the Government in another Parliament, when he should renew the notice which he had been compelled to withdraw that night. When the Secretary of State for India was to be allowed to run an opposition line to that of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, which now showed much indisposition to perform the postal service, he could scarcely conceive what the state of things would be.

CONVEYANCE OF TROOPS TO INDIA.

Colonel SYKES explained that, out of the 70,000 soldiers in India, 7,000 were relieved every year, so that, with the wounded, there were always about 15,000 troops on the sea. By the expensive route round the Cape the reliefs sent out were liable to arrive at the unhealthy season, and it had, therefore, been resolved that the Secretary of State for India should have vessels to run on the direct route by Suez.

At this part of the hon. and gallant gentleman's speech, an hon. member moved that the committee be counted.

There were not forty members present, and the House stood adjourned at about ten minutes to nine o'clock.

ABYSSINIA.

Lord CHELMSFORD said that on a former evening the noble earl at the head of the Foreign Office had stated that Sir William Cogan was of opinion that it was not desirable to send a mission to Abyssinia with presents until the prisoners had been released from captivity. Thinking that opinion a rather extraordinary one, he had got a relative of Capt. Cameron to write to Sir William Cogan on the subject. In reply to that letter, Sir Wm. Cogan stated that what he intended to convey was, that a mission should be sent with presents, and an answer to the King of Abyssinia's letter; but that that answer should contain no reference to the detention of prisoners; that the ambassador should appear to discover this for himself on his arrival in the country, and should then employ his best efforts to obtain their release, withholding for that purpose the delivery of the Queen's letter and of the presents until the Englishmen in captivity were liberated. But Sir William Cogan stated that the position of things had now been greatly changed in consequence of the disagreements that had taken place, and that he thought the Queen's letters should now refer distinctly to the detention of her subjects. Sir William's opinion was that the efforts of Mr. Rassam had failed, and that it would be requisite to send out a mission from England, adding that he would be willing to undertake the duty of envoy.

Earl RUSSELL said that he had communicated with Sir William Cogan through Mr. Layard, and it was probably in this way that the misunderstanding had arisen.

The Earl of MALMESBURY asked whether it was true that the fatal mistake of detaining the King of Abyssinia's letter for some months did not originate in the India-office. It seemed to him that both the Government and the country had displayed great apathy with regard to the treatment of our countrymen in Abyssinia.

Earl RUSSELL replied to the noble earl's question, but in so low a tone as to be inaudible in the gallery. He also pointed out that it was utterly impossible to bring force to bear upon the King of Abyssinia, because, in order to do so, it would be requisite to march 5,000 men for 200 miles through a very hot and unhealthy climate.

The subject then dropped.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 15.

In reply to Mr. J. B. SMITH,

Sir C. WOOD stated that he would make his annual statement on Indian finance either on Thursday next or on the following Monday.

Mr. A. MILLS: Is it the right hon. gentleman's intention to propose a loan for India?

Sir C. WOOD: I have already stated that I have no such intention.

ORDER OF THE BATH.

The Queen, as Sovereign of the Order of the Bath, having been pleased, by a special statute of the Order, to depute his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to hold, in her Majesty's name and on her Majesty's behalf, an Investiture of this most Honourable Order, the ceremony took place on Thursday, the 8th inst., at St. James's Palace.

The Knights Grand Cross assembled in the Entrée Gallery between two and three o'clock, and having been robed by Mr. Hunter and Mr. Ede, in their mantles and collars, passed into the presence chamber, where their names were called over, and the following responded to the call:—

Field Marshal his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, Field Marshal Viscount Gough, General Sir George Pollock, the Right Hon. Sir Hamilton Seymour, the Right Hon. Sir George Grey, Bart., General Sir Alexander Woodford, General Sir John Fox Burgoyne, Bart., General Sir Richard England, Earl St. Germans, Lieut.-General Sir Hugh Henry Rose, Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, the Right Hon. Sir John Somerset Pakington, Bart., General Sir William Maynard Gomm, Admiral Sir Thomas John Cochrane, General Sir John Bell, Lieut.-General Sir Charles Yorke, Lieut.-General Sir Patrick Grant, General Sir James Archibald Hope, Lieut.-General Sir Harry Jones, Lord Lyons, and Viscount Sydney.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, her Majesty's representative on this occasion, wearing the mantle and collar of the Order, and accompanied by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, similarly attired, was conducted to the throne-room by the Earl of St. Germans (Lord Steward), and the Viscount Sydney (Lord Chamberlain).

The announcement that the Prince of Wales had taken his place in front of the throne having been made, the Knights Grand Cross were called over in the Presence Chamber, and proceeded according to seniority into the Throne Room, and ranged themselves on either side.

The officers of the Order in attendance wearing their mantles, chains, and badges, were the Dean of Westminster, Dean of the Order; Albert W. Woods, Esq., Lancaster Herald, Registrar and Secretary of the Order; Vice-Admiral the Hon. Geo. Grey, Bath King-at-Arms; and G. C. Barrington, Esq., Gentleman Usher of the Red Rod.

The Knights Grand Cross being duly arranged, and the officers of the Order having assumed their accustomed places, the special statute which delegated to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales power to perform the ceremony of Investiture was read by the Dean of the Order.

The following Knights Grand Cross of the Order were afterwards severally introduced and invested by his Royal Highness with the like ceremonies, with the ribbon and badge and star of the Military Division of the First Class of the Order, viz.:—

General Sir William Rowan, Admiral Sir Houston Stewart, General Sir George Augustus Wetherall, Admiral Sir Henry Ducie Chads, General Sir James Frederick Love, General Sir James Jackson, Lieutenant-General Sir John Cheape, Lieutenant-General Viscount Melville, Admiral the Hon. Sir Frederick William Grey, Admiral Sir George Robert Lambert.

The following Knights Commanders of the Order were then severally introduced, and invested by his Royal Highness with the like ceremonies, with the Riband and Badge and Star of the Military Division of the Second Class of the Order, viz., General Sir Thomas Kenah, Admiral Sir George Rose Sartorius, General Sir Abraham Roberts, Lieutenant-General Sir William Cator, Lieutenant-General Sir Patrick Montgomerie, Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas Reid, Lieutenant-General Sir John Scott, Lieutenant-Gen. Sir William Wyllie, Lieutenant-General Sir Charles Ash Windham, Vice-Admiral the Earl of Lauderdale, Vice-Admiral Sir John Kingcome, Vice-Admiral Horatio Thomas Austin, Lieutenant-General Sir John Edward Dupuis, Lieutenant-General Sir Fortescue Graham, Rear-Admiral Sir Sydney Colpoys Dacres, Major-General Lord William Paulet, Major-General the Hon. The names of the Knights Commanders were severally announced by the Gentleman Usher.

The ceremony then concluded.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE WILL OF CAPTAIN J. M. SPEKE, the distinguished explorer of the Nile, an officer in her Majesty's Indian Army, Bengal Native Infantry, has been proved in the London Court. The personality was sworn under £5,000. The executors appointed are his brothers, the Rev. Benjamin Speke, rector of Dowlsh Wake and West Dowlsh, Somerset (who alone is acting), and William Speke, who renounced the grant. The testator has bequeathed the whole of his property of every description to his brother, the Rev. Benjamin Speke, for his own absolute use.

PICKING A JUDGE'S POCKET.—On Monday, the 5th inst., the Lord Mayor sentenced George Reeve, a lad of eighteen, to six weeks' hard labour for picking the pocket of Mr. Andrew Thomas Turton Peterson, one of the judges of her Majesty's High Court of Bengal, of a handkerchief, in the vicinity of Billingsgate. The complainant stated that, having just lost his handkerchief from one frock-pocket, he regained it, when it was a second time stolen. "He had had many years' experience as a judge, and he never knew anything more audacious or clever in its way. For a time he was so firmly opinioned that he was helpless, and the transaction took place at mid-day, and in a great public thoroughfare."

INSPECTION OF ARTILLERY BY THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.—The troops in garrison at Woolwich were on Friday week paraded in marching order, at the review ground, and were inspected by the Duke of Cambridge, Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief. The Duke was accompanied by Lieut.-General Sir Hugh Henry Rose, G.C.B., K.S.I., &c. The object of His Royal Highness's visit to Woolwich was to inspect the three batteries of royal artillery under orders for India. There were about 3,000 men on the ground, including cavalry and infantry, each man being supplied with twenty rounds of blank ammunition. His Royal Highness carefully inspected the whole of the men, as well as the horses and guns. The regularity of the movements of the troops and the excellent condition of the horses were repeatedly remarked by the Commander-in-Chief to General Warde and Sir Hugh Rose.

INDIAN PRESENTS TO THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.—A short time since many remarkably rich presents were brought home from various rajahs in our Indian empire who desired to show their loyalty to the throne, and their affection to the Prince and Princess of Wales; also from European and native subjects in the country, and from residents in Australia. Their Royal Highnesses having kindly considered that persons interested in India and Australia would be glad to have an opportunity of seeing the magnificent gifts, have requested Messrs. Garrard, the crown jewellers, to take charge of them for a few days, so that they may be inspected at their establishment in the Haymarket. The following are selections from the Indian portion of the catalogue. It will be judged from the description, and seen by actual inspection, that these precious ornaments "of barbaric pearls and gold," splendid caskets of jewellery, and inlaid work, are of an exceedingly costly character, and if the native workmen have not displayed that skill in setting which European artists possess, the dusky potentates for whom the articles were made have shown, at least, a gorgeous taste in the display of the richest valuables. The Rajahs' gifts consist principally of suites of emeralds, pearls, and diamond necklaces, armlets, bracelets, bangles, &c., &c., &c. The Rajahs of Nabha, Putteala, Kupoortulla, Seend, and Furreedkote contribute,—some of these are the same liberal native princes who contributed so magnificently to the Indian Court of the Great Exhibition of 1862. One of the most remarkable objects is a casket presented to the Prince and Princess by the European and native subjects of her Majesty in the Punjab. The lid of this casket contains portraits in ivory of men whose names have become historical in connection with India during the mutiny. All these portraits and views have been executed by native workmen with astonishing fidelity and microscopic minuteness. A large shield also is a very fine specimen of workmanship. The body is of a curiously watered steel, into which ornaments in gold of a fanciful pattern are laid, and in the centre of some plates there are figures in gold in high relief. In the centre are boxes enriched with large stars in diamonds. There is also a large jewelled sword of fine and elaborate workmanship, the present of the Rajah of Kupoortulla, a gift of great value, consisting of a decanter-shaped vessel, four large cups and saucers and covers, and a tray, all of solid gold and beautifully damascened. The collection altogether is well worthy to be associated with the other splendid presents offered to their Royal Highnesses on their marriage.

EUROPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—The annual general meeting of the shareholders of this company was held June 1, at St. James's Hall; Mr. Wickham, M.P., in the chair. Mr. W. Cleland, secretary, read the report. It stated that the premiums on the new life and guarantee policies issued during the year amounted to £13,259. 16s. 9d. In accordance with the recommendation of the shareholders at the last annual general meeting, the directors entered on the business of fire insurance in June last. The premiums received in this department amounted to £13,259. 17s. 11d. The gross amount actually received in premiums during the year was £169,658. 12s. 7d. The life and guarantee claims paid during the year amounted to £86,717. 4s. 10d. The increase in the assets of the society during the year had been £52,925. 18s. 10d. The union of this society and the British Nation Life Assurance Association had, under the advice and recommendation of Mr. Finlaison, the Government actuary, been completed. The results of the union the directors felt must be regarded by the shareholders with great satisfaction. The subscribed capital is raised to upwards of £700,000, the number of shareholders to more than 1,200, the annual income to upwards of £300,000, while the new premium income of the united companies for the year 1864 amounts to £46,507. The progress of the societies since the union had been highly satisfactory. The premium income derived from new business during the last two months was at the rate of more than £50,000 a year, an amount considerably in excess of that effected by the two societies in their separate condition, and the directors fully anticipated that this rate would be still further increased as the various agencies were brought into a greater degree of efficiency.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, referred to the various operations of the society during the past year, and congratulated the shareholders on the result that had accrued. With respect to the amalgamation of this company with the British Nation Life Assurance Association and the Mercantile Union Fire Company mentioned in the report he believed that that amalgamation would be of great benefit, and he congratulated this company on having obtained so much increased and good business. Their premium now amounted to £1,000 a day, and their new business to £1,000 a week. This was quite enough to show the prosperous condition of the society. Mr. J. E. McConnell seconded the motion, and it was agreed to unanimously. The retiring directors were unanimously re-elected; Mr. J. Parker was elected auditor.

HOME ACCOUNTS OF INDIA.—The home accounts of the Government of India have been presented to Parliament. The total receipts of the Home Treasury of the Government of India from the 1st of May, 1863, to April 30, 1864, were £23,504,123. 5s. 1d., and the balance in hand on the latter date was £1,596,274. 3s.; the total expenditure having been £18,907,849. 2s. 1d. The "estimated account" of receipts and disbursements by the Home Treasury for the year ended the 30th of April last shows a total of receipts of £15,770,906, against an expenditure of £11,856,015, the balance being £3,914,891. An account of the debts and credits in England of the Home Government of India on the 1st of the present month shows a total of £29,397,537 debts, and £14,558,871 credits. This is exclusive on the one hand of the amount owing to proprietors of India stock for their capital, and on the other hand of the Guarantee or Security Fund, formed under the provisions of the Act 3 and 4 William IV., cap. 85. The salaries and allowances payable on the 1st of May to members of the establishment of the Secretary of State in Council for India amounted to £118,301, due to 342 persons. In addition to this there were allowances payable to persons temporarily employed, amounting to £4,863. The new pensions granted in the year ended the 30th April last amounted to the annual charge of £3,670. 18s. 6d. They include £1,000 per year to the Countess of Elgin and Kincardine, "as a mark of the high sense entertained by the Secretary of State for India in Council of the valuable services of the late Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, Viceroy and Governor-general of India, and in consideration of his premature death;" and the like sum to Sir Henry Hayes Lawrence, Bart., "as a mark of the sense entertained by the Secretary of State for India in Council of the eminent services of his grandfather, the late Sir Henry Lawrence, K.C.B., during his long career in India, and especially in the defence of the Residency of Lucknow."

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for 3,000,000 rs. (£300,000) in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 7th inst., at the Bank of England, and the following are the official particulars: The proportions allotted were, to Calcutta 1,957,747 rs., to Madras 25,000 rs., and to Bombay 9,15,000 rs. The minimum price was, as before, 1s. 10½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 10½d. on Bombay. All tenders on Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, at and above 1s. 10½d., will receive in full.

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI BANK.—The directors of this corporation have made a first call of £3 per share on the third issue of shares, which is to be paid on the 31st July at the Union Bank of London.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—Notice has been given by the directors of this bank that a dividend of 8½ per cent. (free of income-tax) for the current half-year will be paid to the shareholders on the London register on and after the 1st July next.

THE CEYLON COMPANY held its annual meeting on the 13th inst., when a statement of accounts was presented showing a net profit of £36,275. 11s. 8d., out of which the directors proposed a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, and a bonus of 5 per cent. on the paid-up capital, amounting together to 14s. per share, payable on the 15th inst. The sum of £5,000 was to be transferred to the reserve fund, leaving a balance of £3,095. 11s. 8d. At a special meeting afterwards held the directors proposed that the nominal capital of the company should be increased from £500,000 to £1,000,000, and that in the event of a contemplated purchase being completed, 12,500 of the new shares should be issued and allotted to the shareholders on the 30th inst. Resolutions in accordance with this proposal were moved and carried.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.—At a general court of proprietors of the East India Company, held on the 14th inst., Colonel Sykes, M.P., presiding, a notice was read by the chairman, stating that the dividend on East India stock payable on the 6th of July will be ready for delivery at the Bank of England on that day. A detailed account exhibiting the state of the East India Company on the 1st of June, 1865, was also read, showing an aggregate total amount of £5,287,258. 3s. 5½d. Three per Cent. Reduced; £777,178. 14s. 3d. Three per Cent. Consols; total, £6,064,436. 17s. 8d. Company's investments, June 1, £10,242. 19s. 7d.; Exchequer bills, £6,000.

ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—At the annual meeting of this company on the 13th inst., the chairman, Mr. H. M. Kemphead, in moving the adoption of the report, congratulated the shareholders upon their dividend of 25 per cent. for two years. The sale of lands, he said, to the Northern Assam Company was beneficial to both companies; and, estimating the remaining lands of the company at the rate paid for that land, it would give an asset of £1,200,000. The report was unanimously adopted, and it was referred to the board to reward the secretary for his services.

NORTHERN ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—The first instalment of £30,000 was paid on Thursday by the Northern Assam Tea Company to the old Assam Company, for the purchase of the estates belonging to the latter, situated in the northern and eastern districts of Assam.

THE NEW THEORY IN RIFLES.—

Lieutenant James Forsyth, in his excellent work, "The Sporting Rifle, &c.," first promulgated the startling theory that Rifles could be so constructed as to lessen the elevation by increasing the charge of powder. This theory, which the Advertiser has proven to be correct, alters the whole position of Rifles in favour of the sportsman. Formerly, with a high trajectory, the bullet which would have hit a tiger in a vital part at 100 yards, would pass over his back at 25 or 50 yards. By the new system, as elaborated and perfected in DOUGALLS LOCKFAST BRECHLOADERS, there is a point-blank range to 150 yards, combined with a velocity and smashing power hitherto unknown.—(See TIMES, 11th October 1864.) No other Rifle possesses the same advantages.

A NARRATIVE OF A YEAR'S JOURNEY THROUGH

CENTRAL & EASTERN ARABIA, 1862-3.

BY WILLIAM GIFFORD PALGRAVE,

Late of the Eighth Regiment Bombay N.I.

"A stirring tale of adventure in an absolutely new and virgin country, hitherto unvisited except under conditions which reduced the traveller to the category of a mere senseless corpse in a coffin. He told his tale, too, more as Herodotus would have recited at Olympia than like a commonplace voyager of the nineteenth century. He spoke with all the spirit and picturesqueness of the old Greek, combined with the careful eloquence of a trained orator, and his crowded audience admired and applauded the accomplishments of the speaker no less than they appreciated the interest of the primeval Eastern country thus brought before their eyes."—Quarterly Review on Mr. Palgrave's Paper read before the Royal Geographical Society.

EXPANDING SADDLE.

GIBSON AND COMPANY

Respectfully invite the attention of MILITARY MEN, EQUESTRIANS, and OWNERS OF HORSES, to their Newly-Invented EXPANDING SADDLE, which admits of ready adjustment to the size of any horse, creating a secure and easy seat without the slightest inconvenience to either horse or rider. The principle of EXPANSION and CONTRACTION comprises a simple arrangement of mechanism within the saddle so perfect, that by merely turning a screw the pad is proportioned to the size and form of the animal, on which it firmly rests with a uniform pressure, and is securely retained in its position by means of an ordinary girth.

This invention has obtained the approval and distinguished patronage of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, and from the very favourable opinions expressed by competent judges, and all who have had an opportunity of testing its merits, there is no doubt it will come into general use; indeed, its success is already established.
